NAZIS WRECK BRITISH INDUSTRIAL PLANTS ALONG THE THAMES IN VICINITY OF LONDON

London Charges Germans Bomb Residential Town, Kill Several Civilians

Deliberate Attack Made upon Eastbourne, Official Statement Declares; London Proper Safe

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 17 (Saturday)—Great Britain officially charged early today that German bombers, part of a huge air fleet of 2,500 planes which raided London's suburbs and both sides of the Thames yesterday, made a "deliberate attack" on the "residential town of Eastbourne" and killed "several persons."

The accusation was made by the air ministry and the ministry of home defense in a joint communique which said that seventy-one German planes were destroyed against eighteen British fighters lost in the tremendous aerial fighting yesterday. Ten British pilots of downed planes are safe, however, the communique said.

The main section of the capital of the British empire was not touched.

The British reported that the far-ranging German raiders, who kept up their forays over southern England last night and early today, dropped bombs "at many points in the country districts of Hertfordshire, Essex, Surrey, Hampshire and Oxfordshire. Little damage was done and reports indicate the number of killed was small."

Eastbourne, a fashionable watering place, is on the English channel in Sussex.

Tilbury Docks Bombed

In the attack on the London area, bombs fell on the great docksides at Tilbury and on a British airdrome in the Isle of Wight.

They fell, too, within eight miles of the vast domed St. Paul's cathedral in east-central London and upon the Thames estuary with its heavy shipping and industrial facilities.

There were casualties—an undisclosed list of dead and injured, and there was damaged residential property.

This ancient city's millions twice had to take cover—once at luncheon; again just at tea-time.

(From 10:30 a. m., to 3:19 p. m., eastern standard time, not a line of information dealing with the London raid was allowed to be transmitted by the censor.

Defend London Proper

The British defended this heart of the homeland with a savage efficiency; their own losses were put at only twelve planes and it was said that the pilots of eight of these were safe.

Fighter planes were not alone in the struggle: the hoarse bellow of "archies"—anti-aircraft guns—filled the skies.

From the far-scattered wreckage bodies were being brought forth tonight.

The invading Nazis struck at London in two big flying columns.

The first was split by the defending British and part of that wave was turned back before reaching the city's outskirts. The remaining bombers, racing above the Thames estuary, bombed it on both sides—hitting both the Tilbury docks and the Northfleet section across the

REFUSES DEMANDS

According to authoritative British sources, Greece's cabinet, headed by John Metaxas, above, has flatly rejected the Italo-German demands that Greece renounce her military pact with Great Britain. Also rejected were Italy's demands that Greece stop assisting British forces. As a climax to the two countries' strained relations, Premier Metaxas ordered communications with Italy's capital severed after the Greece light cruiser Helle was sunk in the Aegean sea by an unidentified submarine.

Floods Continue To Menace Large Area in Virginia

More Than 40 Primary Highways Closed by High Waters

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 16 (AP)—Flood waters that have spread over much of southwestern and southside Virginia lowlands during the past three days swirled eastward and southward today with a threat of increasing damage.

The first serious damage in the Shenandoah valley also was reported during the day at Waynesboro, where South river, swollen by tumbling mountain tributaries, inundated the industrial section and parts of the business area.

Upward of forty primary highways, including all highways into North Carolina between South Boston and Suffolk, were closed by the rampaging rivers and creeks.

Railway traffic also was blocked or impeded seriously in several places by high water and washouts.

Richmond, faced with the threat of a James river flood that might approach or exceed that of 1936, and Petersburg, apparently caught by a damaging crest from the Appomattox river, made ready to combat the overflow as best they could.

The James had reached a 14.1 foot

President Declares He Is Negotiating with Great Britain

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP)—Placing his emphasis heavily upon the "defense of the American hemisphere"—and especially the Panama Canal—President Roosevelt announced today he was negotiating with Great Britain for the acquisition of naval and air base sites, presumably in the southern Carribbean.

And, although he simultaneously cautioned newspaper correspondends against coupling the deal with proposals to deliver American over-age destroyers to England, he said that a quid pro quo was under discussion.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt told newsmen that the government was discussing, separately, with Canada questions of hemisphere defense. Some thought this might have to do with bases in Nova Scotia or at a point beaween Seattle and Alaska.

A few hours after he spoke, General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, endorsed the idea of acquiring bases and, in addition, told reporters that the United States faced a "critical situation as a result of developments in the European war.

May Need Army Soon

At a press conference, the general explained that he referred to "the possibilities of the next month in the Western Hemisphere."

In discussing the pending bill for conscription, he said: "No one can say with certainty, the way things are going abroad, that we won't need the additional manpower without delay."

"Time," he declared, "is the dominant factor, and time is fleeting."

The president's disclosure concerning naval bases recalled that military authorities have repeatedly pointed out that there is an avenue of possible enemy approach to the Panama Canal some 500 to

Revive Proposal To Give District Back to Maryland

Democrats Were Once against It, but Now Republicans Are Opposed

BALTIMORE, Aug. 16. (AP)—That proposal to give the district of Columbia back to Maryland is at least twenty years old, but opposition to it might come this time from the other side of the fence.

Back in 1921, news clippings show, a then current sponsor of the move reported Maryland Democrats were 'agin it" because they did not want to "absorb" all the Republicans then holding the fort in Washington.

Maryland Republicans volunteered no opinions today on the bill introduced by Representative Nichols (D-Okla) in the House to return the area to Maryland, but assistant Attorney-General William L. Henderson pointed out the Merger would raise a crop of problems.

The step might require a constitutional amendment by the state, especially if Maryland were to grant Washington a city charter and "home rule." This, Henderson explained, would give Washington and Baltimore not far from a majority in Maryland's House of Delegates, as well as about a third of the state senators, vitally affecting the state's "political balance of power."

Opposition from the counties on this score might be partially offset by support for the move from Prince George's and Montgomery counties, where merchants complain Washington merchants can undersell them through taxation advantages.

The state's expenses would be increased, but the taxable basis for property would be expanded. The school system probably would have to be expanded.

Nichols' bill would return all the area except enough for federal buildings and parks. After Maryland approved it, his bill explains, Washingtonians would vote on the proposal. Purpose of the bill is to give Washingtonians the right to vote and to representation in Congress.

GERMAN BOMBS BLAST CROYDON AIRPORT

The greatly increasing fury of German air raids on the British Isles was brought sharply home to Londoners when 40 Nazi dive bombers and fighting planes bombed and strafed the famed Croydon airport, only eight miles from the city limits of the capital of the British empire. Several persons were killed and hangars and other airport facilities were damaged.

Willkie Inspects Farms and Works On Acceptance

Republican Candidate Ready for Notification Ceremonies Today

By WILLIAM E. ARDERY

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Aug. 16. (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie inspected his five Indiana farms today and then put the final touches on the speech in which he will accept the Republican presidential nomination tomorrow in his home town of Elwood.

The nominee made an early morning drive to his farms—which total 1,400 acres—with Miss Mary Sleeth, who manages them for him. He talked with farm hands and looked over his crops, then returned to Rushville and stopped at the hotel where his staff is housed. He purchased some cigarettes there and went back to the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Cora Wilk.

Keeping his day clear of appointments, Willkie got some rest in the afternoon and prepared to get a full night's sleep before leaving about noon tomorrow for Elwood, fifty miles northwest. He is expected to speak for a half hour shortly after 4 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) and to outline broadly his views on all major issues.

Mysterious Blast Wrecks Plant of Powder Company

Five Workmen Killed and Small Unit Is Destroyed

JOPLIN, MO., Aug. 16, (AP) — A powder plant turning out over 1,000,000 pounds of T. N. T. monthly for the British government was the scene of a mysterious explosion today which killed five workmen and destroyed a small unit.

Officials of the Atlas powder plant, six miles east of Joplin, said the cause of the blast may never be known because the building where it occurred was destroyed and every man inside perished. Estimates of the amount of powder lost ranged from 1,000 to 2,000 pounds.

The force of the blast rattled windows in Joplin, Carthage, Carterville, Carl Junction and other communities over a wide area. The explosion occurred in the dynamite section which is apart from the T. N. T. units.

Immediately after the explosion, the number of guards on duty at the plant was increased, county officers rushed to the scene and the Federal Bureau of Investigation area office at Kansas City was notified. Dwight Brantley, head of the FBI office, said, however, he did not plan an investigation unless sabotage was indicated.

Sheriff Harry O. Rogers of Jasper county and Dempsey Southard, chief guard at the plant, said they found no evidence of sabotage.

Some 400 workmen are employed at the plant.

Defenders Battle Hordes Of Invaders with Fleet At Least 3,000 Planes

Nazis Hurl 2,500 Aircraft into Action and Inflict Heavy Damage over Large Section of England; Airports, Arsenals and Arms Factories Wrecked, Authorized Berlin Sources Declare

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Authorized German sources proclaimed tonight that wave after wave of bombers had hurled lavish destruction on the London environs late today, lining both banks of the Thames with fires, bomb craters and the wreckage of industrial plants.

The British fought back with 3,000 or more planes and with every weapon at their command. Their fury was that of men who know their very existence is in the balance. The Nazis sent 2,500 planes into action.

But the mass scale German attack, unprecedented in all history, is designed to prove that "no power on earth can stop the Nazi air force," declared German sorces.

Violent air battles raged over the heart of London, while the thunder of cannon reverberated in the mighty city that re-echoed with the incessant, eerie shrill of air raid sirens.

Break Through Defense

Nazi squardons broke through the British defense zone to the south, the Germans said, and burst into the iron ring of London with great blows at airports, arsenals, arms factories and industrial plants.

"Bomb hits, fires, bomb craters, destroyed houses, planes, tremendous detonations and high columns of fire show the work of the German bombers," declared the official German news agency, DNB, in a proud running description.

"There is air alarm after air alarm, the howl of sirens and the thunder of cannon in London.

"Extensive fighting is in progress. The British are exerting every effort to halt the Garman attack. One recognizes clearly in the English defense that they know everything is at stake—their very existence.

Trail of Smoke Last Badge

"Tenaciously the English and Germans tie into one another until one plane or the other shoots off to destruction. A trail of smoke is the last badge of a heroism that was.

"Here and there, billowing parachutes and the yellow puffs from antiaircraft explosions float through the air.

"On earth, the direct hits, the bomb craters and the number of planes shot down appears to be immense.

"German scouts, observing from a great height, are giving reports on developments."

The industrial east end of London was one teeming object of attack, the Germans said.

The squalid Cockney section, a vast beehive of docks, sprawling warehouses, factories and arsenals, lay under a pall of smoke, the raiders reported.

Explosions plumed up from Barking and Purfleet, crowded east-end industrial suburbs, said DNB, the official news agency, in a running account of the raid. Both are on the north bank of the Thames, some eight miles from Charing Cross.

The raiders met a hot fight from British fighter planes over both the channel coast and over London, but a late report said two German fighter squadrons had been shot down over London.

Authorized sources said the raiders' objectives were outlying "arsenals, warehouses and refrigerating plants" and asserted the center of London would be spared.

Boast of Nazi Power

"The German air force will prove that no power on earth can prevent it from dropping bombs anywhere in England, even over London itself," said a DNB announcement.

Subsequent accounts of the raid told of "great destruction to London's harbor zone" and said airports all around the city suffered heavily; that the Enfield powder plant in the outskirts was attacked and other armament and powder plants north of London bombed.

Before this "special action" began, wave after wave of German planes had thundered over England all day, smashing at industrial nerve centers of the Midlands, at the channel ports again, at airplane factories and armament works up and down and across the besieged kingdom.

There also was a great attack on harbor and air facilities at Chatham, a ship repair yard on the lower Thames, DNB, asserted. It described great conflagrations in docks, shipyards and coaling

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

Germany's smashing aerial onslaught against the citadel of Britain, topped off to date by Friday's titantic blow at the environs of London, went into its seventh consecutive day today (Saturday) while the big British Dominion of Canada discussed American hemisphere defense with the United States.

The British acknowledged that London's southwestern suburbs and the docks along the Thames river were bombed, but said that the main section of London was not touched. They coupled their admission with an official charge that the Nazi deliberately attacked the residential town of Eastbourne, on the English channel.

The Germans contended that huge areas of the London neighborhood along both sides of the Thames were wrecked or set afire.

Germans Renew Attack

German fliers came back this morning to Britain's southwest and southeast coasts, apparently for a renewal of their attacks.

President Roosevelt, who announced the U. S.-Canadian discussions, disclosed that he and Canada's Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie-King would dine together Saturday night in Ogdensburg, N. Y. Only the bare announcement was made.

Relaxing rigorous censorship which forbade any mention of the London air fighting for nearly five hours, the British permitted the Associated Press office in London to send a report on the fighting at 2:19 p. m., C. S. T.

This dispatch was followed promptly by an Air Ministry communique announcing that large forces of enemy bombers flew twice over the Thames and bombed and damaged property on both sides of the river.

The Air Ministry admitted a number of casualties resulted from the raids.

Casualty Reports Differ

The German reports of the raid as carried by DUB, official German news agency, said Nazi bombs rained on east, west and northern sections of London.

Bodies were being removed from debris soon after the Germans left.

The British declared seventy-one German planes were shot down during the day's fighting. Eighteen British fighters were lost.

The Germans put their own losses at fifteen and the British at sixty-five.

The German wireless said a British destroyer was sunk at Portsmouth and heavy damage was inflicted on Kent airdromes and coastal barrage balloons.

It was estimated that 2,500 German planes attacked London.

A German broadcast heard in New York by NBC said England was using "her entire air force of 3,000 planes to stave off German bombers and fighters."

Attack East End

DNB said Nazi dive bombers attacked the industrial east end of London and left that beehive of docks, warehouses, factories and arsenals under a pall of smoke.

Later German accounts told of

President Will Not Hear Willkie Speak; Plans To Inspect Troops

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16, (AP) — When Wendell Willkie steps before the microphone tomorrow afternoon to accept the Republican nomination for president, President Roosevelt will be watching maneuvers of the 91,000 soldiers now fighting a mock war in upstate New York.

The chief executive told his press conference today that he did not imagine he would be able to listen to the broadcast from Willkie's native Elwood, Ind. He would be with the troops, he explained, from the moment he arrived tomorrow at Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Mr. Roosevelt sped through a private schedule and left the capital for Ogdensburg tonight with Secretary of War Stimson, Chairman May (D.-Ky.), of the House Military Committee and Brigadier General Edwin M. Watson, presidential secretary.

Plans No Speech

The president said in response to a question that he did not intend to make a speech during his inspection of the regular army troops and the national guardsmen participating in the maneuvers under the command of Lieut. Gen. Hugh Drum.

He plans to make his inspection Saturday afternoon and to remain at Ogdensburg until Sunday afternoon, attending religious services in the field Sunday forenoon. Thereafter he intends to go to Hyde Park for several days.

Among his many callers today was Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., whose appointment to be coordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the United States and the other American republics was announced subsequently at the White House. Stephen Early, the president's press secretary, said Rockefeller would be "another $1-a-year man," receiving only subsistence and expenses.

Italian Official Apologizes for Attack upon Two Greek Destroyers

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, Aug. 16—The Italian naval attache was reported in reliable circles tonight to have apologized to Premier John Metaxas for the aerial bombing directed at two Greek destroyers today, declaring the Italian fliers had mistaken them for British ships.

(At this point the Greek censor cut the connection in which this story was being telephoned to Budapest. The following matter was received earlier in the evening.)

Mobilization Ordered

The Greek government, however, ordered partial mobilization. A high authority declared definitely that the commanders of the destroyers, against which seventeen bombs were directed without a hit, had identified the attacking planes as Italians. Witnesses told the same story.

In the mobilization call for Aug. 20 was one category which military quarters said included anti-aircraft gunners and observers.

Identification of the attacking planes as Italian was "absolute," the high informant said, and the officers of the warships—the Vasilevs Georgios I and the Vasilissa Olga—had so wirelessed the Greek navy ministry.

Destroyers Attacked

The destroyers were attacked en route to the island of Tinos in the Aegean sea, where only yesterday the Greek cruiser Helle was mysteriously torpedoed—by an "unidentified" submarine, said the Greek government.

There were signs that the government would maintain its policy of official silence, in the belief that these attacks were planned to force Greece to abandon her neutrality. The country has a guarantee of support from Britain if her independence is attacked.

(In Istanbul, the Turkish parliamentary deputy Husein Djahid Yaltchin declared that "any attack against Greece will have the consequence of British assistance and Turkish intervention."

Nazis Hurl 2,500 Aircraft into Action and Inflict Heavy Damage over Large Section of England; Airports, Arsenals and Arms Factories Wrecked, Authorized Berlin Sources Declare

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Authorized German sources proclaimed tonight that wave after wave of bombers had hurled lavish destruction on the London environs late today, lining both banks of the Thames with fires, bomb craters and the wreckage of industrial plants.

The British fought back with 3,000 or more planes and with every weapon at their command. Their fury was that of men who know their very existence is in the balance. The Nazis sent 2,500 planes into action.

But the mass scale German attack, unprecedented in all history, is designed to prove that "no power on earth can stop the Nazi air force," declared German sorces.

Violent air battles raged over the heart of London, while the thunder of cannon reverberated in the mighty city that re-echoed with the incessant, eerie shrill of air raid sirens.

Break Through Defense

Nazi squardons broke through the British defense zone to the south, the Germans said, and burst into the iron ring of London with great blows at airports, arsenals, arms factories and industrial plants.

"Bomb hits, fires, bomb craters, destroyed houses, planes, tremendous detonations and high columns of fire show the work of the German bombers," declared the official German news agency, DNB, in a proud running description.

"There is air alarm after air alarm, the howl of sirens and the thunder of cannon in London.

"Extensive fighting is in progress. The British are exerting every effort to halt the Garman attack. One recognizes clearly in the English defense that they know everything is at stake—their very existence.

Trail of Smoke Last Badge

"Tenaciously the English and Germans tie into one another until one plane or the other shoots off to destruction. A trail of smoke is the last badge of a heroism that was.

"Here and there, billowing parachutes and the yellow puffs from antiaircraft explosions float through the air.

"On earth, the direct hits, the bomb craters and the number of planes shot down appears to be immense.

"German scouts, observing from a great height, are giving reports on developments."

The industrial east end of London was one teeming object of attack, the Germans said.

The squalid Cockney section, a vast beehive of docks, sprawling warehouses, factories and arsenals, lay under a pall of smoke, the raiders reported.

Explosions plumed up from Barking and Purfleet, crowded east-end industrial suburbs, said DNB, the official news agency, in a running account of the raid. Both are on the north bank of the Thames, some eight miles from Charing Cross.

The raiders met a hot fight from British fighter planes over both the channel coast and over London, but a late report said two German fighter squadrons had been shot down over London.

Authorized sources said the raiders' objectives were outlying "arsenals, warehouses and refrigerating plants" and asserted the center of London would be spared.

Boast of Nazi Power

"The German air force will prove that no power on earth can prevent it from dropping bombs anywhere in England, even over London itself," said a DNB announcement.

Subsequent accounts of the raid told of "great destruction to London's harbor zone" and said airports all around the city suffered heavily; that the Enfield powder plant in the outskirts was attacked and other armament and powder plants north of London bombed.

Before this "special action" began, wave after wave of German planes had thundered over England all day, smashing at industrial nerve centers of the Midlands, at the channel ports again, at airplane factories and armament works up and down and across the besieged kingdom.

There also was a great attack on harbor and air facilities at Chatham, a ship repair yard on the lower Thames, DNB, asserted. It described great conflagrations in docks, shipyards and coaling

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

Germany's smashing aerial onslaught against the citadel of Britain, topped off to date by Friday's titantic blow at the environs of London, went into its seventh consecutive day today (Saturday) while the big British Dominion of Canada discussed American hemisphere defense with the United States.

The British acknowledged that London's southwestern suburbs and the docks along the Thames river were bombed, but said that the main section of London was not touched. They coupled their admission with an official charge that the Nazi deliberately attacked the residential town of Eastbourne, on the English channel.

The Germans contended that huge areas of the London neighborhood along both sides of the Thames were wrecked or set afire.

Germans Renew Attack

German fliers came back this morning to Britain's southwest and southeast coasts, apparently for a renewal of their attacks.

President Roosevelt, who announced the U. S.-Canadian discussions, disclosed that he and Canada's Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie-King would dine together Saturday night in Ogdensburg, N. Y. Only the bare announcement was made.

Relaxing rigorous censorship which forbade any mention of the London air fighting for nearly five hours, the British permitted the Associated Press office in London to send a report on the fighting at 2:19 p. m., C. S. T.

This dispatch was followed promptly by an Air Ministry communique announcing that large forces of enemy bombers flew twice over the Thames and bombed and damaged property on both sides of the river.

The Air Ministry admitted a number of casualties resulted from the raids.

Casualty Reports Differ

The German reports of the raid as carried by DUB, official German news agency, said Nazi bombs rained on east, west and northern sections of London.

Bodies were being removed from debris soon after the Germans left.

The British declared seventy-one German planes were shot down during the day's fighting. Eighteen British fighters were lost.

The Germans put their own losses at fifteen and the British at sixty-five.

The German wireless said a British destroyer was sunk at Portsmouth and heavy damage was inflicted on Kent airdromes and coastal barrage balloons.

It was estimated that 2,500 German planes attacked London.

A German broadcast heard in New York by NBC said England was using "her entire air force of 3,000 planes to stave off German bombers and fighters."

Attack East End

DNB said Nazi dive bombers attacked the industrial east end of London and left that beehive of docks, warehouses, factories and arsenals under a pall of smoke.

Later German accounts told of

President Will Not Hear Willkie Speak; Plans To Inspect Troops

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16, (AP) — When Wendell Willkie steps before the microphone tomorrow afternoon to accept the Republican nomination for president, President Roosevelt will be watching maneuvers of the 91,000 soldiers now fighting a mock war in upstate New York.

The chief executive told his press conference today that he did not imagine he would be able to listen to the broadcast from Willkie's native Elwood, Ind. He would be with the troops, he explained, from the moment he arrived tomorrow at Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Mr. Roosevelt sped through a private schedule and left the capital for Ogdensburg tonight with Secretary of War Stimson, Chairman May (D.-Ky.), of the House Military Committee and Brigadier General Edwin M. Watson, presidential secretary.

Plans No Speech

The president said in response to a question that he did not intend to make a speech during his inspection of the regular army troops and the national guardsmen participating in the maneuvers under the command of Lieut. Gen. Hugh Drum.

He plans to make his inspection Saturday afternoon and to remain at Ogdensburg until Sunday afternoon, attending religious services in the field Sunday forenoon. Thereafter he intends to go to Hyde Park for several days.

Among his many callers today was Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., whose appointment to be coordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the United States and the other American republics was announced subsequently at the White House. Stephen Early, the president's press secretary, said Rockefeller would be "another $1-a-year man," receiving only subsistence and expenses.

Italian Official Apologizes for Attack upon Two Greek Destroyers

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, Aug. 16—The Italian naval attache was reported in reliable circles tonight to have apologized to Premier John Metaxas for the aerial bombing directed at two Greek destroyers today, declaring the Italian fliers had mistaken them for British ships.

(At this point the Greek censor cut the connection in which this story was being telephoned to Budapest. The following matter was received earlier in the evening.)

Mobilization Ordered

The Greek government, however, ordered partial mobilization. A high authority declared definitely that the commanders of the destroyers, against which seventeen bombs were directed without a hit, had identified the attacking planes as Italians. Witnesses told the same story.

In the mobilization call for Aug. 20 was one category which military quarters said included anti-aircraft gunners and observers.

Identification of the attacking planes as Italian was "absolute," the high informant said, and the officers of the warships—the Vasilevs Georgios I and the Vasilissa Olga—had so wirelessed the Greek navy ministry.

Destroyers Attacked

The destroyers were attacked en route to the island of Tinos in the Aegean sea, where only yesterday the Greek cruiser Helle was mysteriously torpedoed—by an "unidentified" submarine, said the Greek government.

There were signs that the government would maintain its policy of official silence, in the belief that these attacks were planned to force Greece to abandon her neutrality. The country has a guarantee of support from Britain if her independence is attacked.

(In Istanbul, the Turkish parliamentary deputy Husein Djahid Yaltchin declared that "any attack against Greece will have the consequence of British assistance and Turkish intervention."

Three Held for Alleged Attack On Ida Headley

Her Husband and Two Women Charged with Trying To Murder Her

By WICK TEMPLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 16—Sheriff Henry Flowers tonight termed the "fake holdup" shooting of Mrs. Ada Hubb Headley "one of the worst" crimes in the history of this southwestern Pennsylvania county and charged it was "a plot" which would lead to the prosecution of her husband and two women.

Mrs. Headley, 44, fighting for her life in a Waynesburg hospital against peritonitis that developed after a two-hour emergency operation, was shot five times last Tuesday night at her home at nearby Pine Bank. Hospital attendants, reporting her slightly improved tonight, gave her a "50-50 chance" to recover.

No Formal Charges

Because of Mrs. Headley's condition, Flowers said formal charges would not be brought against her husband, Robert, a forty-nine-year-old gas field worker, until Monday, when two sisters already charged with disguising themselves in men's clothing and staging the fake holdup are scheduled to be given a hearing.

"I don't know what the charges against Headley will be pending the outcome of his wife's wounds," Flowers declared.

The sisters—Mrs. Otis Cumberledge, a plump, chestnut-haired widow of 36, and Mrs. Elizabeth Pettit, a slim, pretty brunette of 25—are charged with aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill. They and Headley were ordered held in jail pending the hearing.

Both sisters live at Nettle Hill, near Pine Bank, where Mrs. Headley was shot three times in the chest, once in the abdomen and once in the jaw when she, her husband and twelve-year-old son drove into the garage adjoining their neat, yellow frame home.

Accuses "Three Men"

Two figures stepped out of the shadows of the garage, one opening fire with a .22 calibre pistol. Headley and his son were not harmed, but Headley insisted his wife was shot by three men "who robbed me of between $30 and $40 and drove off in my car," Flowers declared.

Two suits of men's clothing were found nearby, belonged to Mrs. Cumberledge's 'teen-age son and nephew, the sheriff said.

After the shooting, Constable Ralph Loar noticed an automobile limping through nearby Kuhntown with a flat tire and followed it to the sisters' home. That and the clothing "broke" the case and implicated the sisters, Flowers said.

Deputy Sheriff Jake Orndoff described Headley and Mrs. Cumberledge as "friends."

Flowers charged Mrs. Pettit was the "trigger woman" and said the investigation was complete and that no more arrests were expected.

All-day Meeting Will Be Held at Davis Memorial Church

An all-day meeting will be held tomorrow at the Davis Memorial church on the Uhl highway. Six churches from the Oldtown circuit will be represented.

Sunday school will be held at 10 a. m. and the Rev. James A. Richards, pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. At noon, picnic lunches will be eaten on the church grounds.

An old fashioned song service, followed by a talk by the Rev. R. H. Parker, pastor of the Union Grove Methodist charge, will commence at 2 p. m. At 7 p. m., the Epworth League will hold an outdoor vesper service of candle light and at 8 p. m. the young people of the church will present a religious play.

A brass quartette from Cumberland will furnish the music and the Young People's choir will sing.

Rubber Workers Told To Fight Ordinance

Stanley Denlinger, general counsel for Local 26, United Rubber Workers of America, has instructed the union "that under no circumstances should our officers and members subject themselves to the burdensome and inquisitorial examination required" by Section 10 of Cumberland ordinance No. 1731.

O. J. Mortzfeldt, president of Local 26, said yesterday that Denlinger contends the section which pertains to distribution of handbills is unconstitutional. He also said a five page letter on the matter has been mailed to Mayor Harry Irvine by Denlinger.

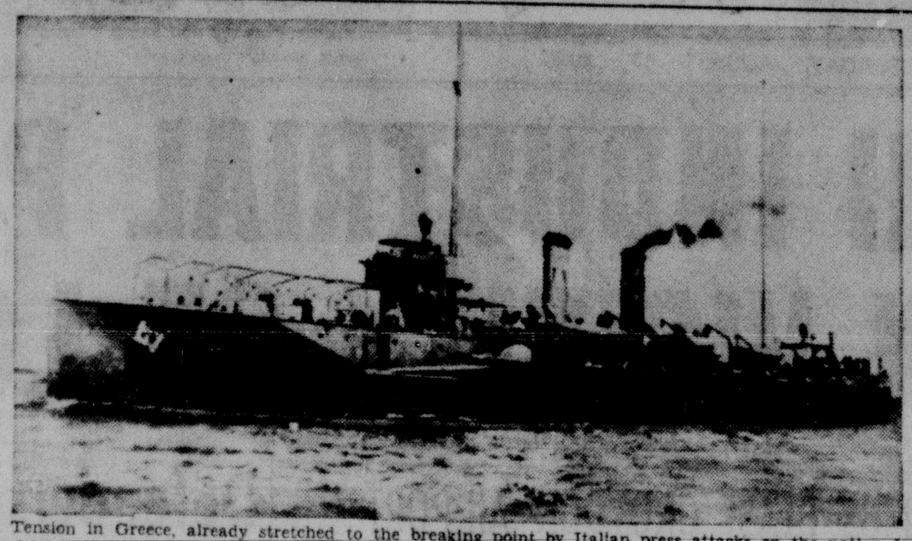

In his letter to the union the attorney states: "If any of our people are arrested, you must immediately see that they are properly defended and the constitutionality of this ordinance properly raised in the proceedings so that we may fight it to the bitter end."

Dead Grid Player's Number Is Retired

Columbia, Mo., Aug. 16 (AP)—There won't be a number 27 jersey among the football uniforms at the University of Missouri until 1942.

University officials explained that the "27" jersey worn by Ronald King, sophomore end who died recently of a tooth infection, would be "retired" from university equipment for the period that King might have worn it.

UNIDENTIFIED SUBMARINE SINKS GREEK CRUISER

Tension in Greece, already stretched to the breaking point by Italian press attacks on the nation for her friendliness to Great Britain, was intensified when an unidentified submarine torpedoed and sank the Greek light cruiser Helle as she lay at anchor in the harbor of Tinos in the Aegean sea. One petty officer was killed and 30 members of the crew were injured.

London Charges

estuary, the site of big cement works thirteen miles from London.

Here an undetermined number of dead was left.

The German column sped on then around the southeast of the city but dropped no bombs, said the air ministry.

Fresh Squadrons Arrive

Later, fresh Nazi squadrons roared up the estuary, loosing bombs in the southwestern suburbs.

(The Germans claimed to have bombed the populous east side of London and the northern and western suburbs as well.)

The first casualties found by an Associated Press correspondent in the southwestern area were two dead air raid wardens. One had been struck by a bomb fragment; the other showed not a mark.

A factory had been burned to the ground; windows within the radius of a mile were smashed; two saloons were wrecked; train service in the section was dislocated but a restoration did not require long.

The approach of the raiding bombers—an approach which because of censorship could not be told for five hours—was stealthy. They came at a high altitude, too high to be seen at first.

The first wave—only part of which reached the city—had crossed the southeast coast several hundred strong. Those able to break through and reach the London outskirts appeared to be avoiding the heart of the metropolitan area. Gunfire was heard in the suburbs across the city toward the western edge, and the boom of heavier explosives came from distant regions.

Many Londoners stood on their rooftops in an unsuccessful effort to see the action.

After it was all over, British sources declared it had proved that Britain, with her 400-mile-an-hour fighter planes and her anti-aircraft—still controlled the English skies despite the week-long efforts of thousands upon thousands of German planes to win a mastery of the air.

Today brought the greatest test yet seen.

All day long the kingdom had been pounded by a vast fleet of some 2,500 German bombers and fighters.

And then, as Germany wirelessed to London and the world that more were yet to come, this capital of empire itself was drawn into the theater of action—the theater of the great showdown.

A censorship fell tight upon London.

Hit Industrial Areas

They struck again and again at industrial areas, shipping, airdromes—at every point of British resistance in what seemed an obvious effort to break Britain from the air in a plan of strategy which if successful would avoid the great risk of trying an invasion across the English channel.

So great, so widespread, so thunderous was this arerial invasion that none could say how many thousands of planes were at grips.

It was the sixth successive day of mass raids over England—raids that every day had grown in ferocity—and by mid-afternoon it already had far outdone yesterday's attack, the biggest in history.

It was, as yesterday, an engagement so big as to be difficult to encompass: at one southeastern town alone, at one time, 400 German raiders were counted as they swept across the coastal frontier. The count was lost there; they came on and on after that.

The number of civilian dead was known only to be growing; there was no comprehensive count available and none in prospect.

The British meanwhile reported vast new bombing attacks of their own on military objectives in Italy, Germany and sections of Nazi-occupied France and Holland.

Attacked, said the air ministry, were:

Rain Saves Many Maryland Crops

Hundreds of Acres Escape Severe Losses from Near Drought

By The Associated Press

Rain overspread the bulk of Maryland's farming acreage today, in some cases providing the first moisture of consequence in weeks, and breaking a drought that had threatened to wreck August crops.

The Eastern Shore, the state's most fertile and productive vegetable-raising section, enjoyed 1.2 inches of rain in the thirty-six hours up to late yesterday (Friday) afternoon.

The warm rain pelted hundreds of acres of corn fields, tomato patches and other vegetable lands in Wicomico county, and has hailed by growers as a "million-dollar" downpour.

Tomato Market Off

Although the tomato market has been off because of the slackening demand, vines are laden with the fruit and growers faced a total loss had the dry weather continued a few more dyas.

Similar reports came from Dorchester county, where farmers were experiencing the worst drought in ten years. Corn fields benefitted particularly, because a forecast of a crop only fifty per cent normal had been made at the height of the drought several days ago.

Central Maryland caught almost a full half-inch of rain during a twenty-four-hour period, and more was in prospect for today.

Both Cumberland and Hagerstown in the western end of the state reported farmers rejoicing over the steady, hammering showers.

In addition to the benefit to maturing vegetable crops, Hagerstown area orchardists said the rain would be a factor in "sizing up" the late apple crop. The drought in this section had not reached serious proportions, however.

Allegany and Garrett county farmers said the rains allayed fears for the string beans, which had been drying up and dropping from the vines. Corn also had suffered from the hot spell, they said, much of it being dry and unpalatable.

British, Italians Both Drop Bombs

CAIRO, Aug. 16 (AP)—The British and Italian air forces traded bombs today from the Suez to Somaliland amid indications that British forces fighting on the southern shores of the Gulf of Aden might have to fall back, lacking reinforcements, on Berbera, their Somali capital and chief port.

The Italians bombed Alexandria anew overnight in an attempt to smash the British fleet concentration there, but failed to hit any warships.

Official British announcements detailed air raids on Italian objectives from Libya to the coastal and inland roads of Somaliland, where the Italian mechanized columns are fighting their way toward Berbera.

Although the raids in British Somaliland were stated to have been "successful," British spokesmen said that the military situation there was "rather critical" and that the British, now defending heights around Berbera, may be forced to retire to the town itself.

Frostburg Woman Is Injured in Fall

Miss Pearl Miller, 148 Bowery street, Frostburg, is a patient at Memorial hospital, suffering from injuries received in a fall at a camp near Terra Alta, W. Va., Thursday night.

Besides a lacerated face, Miss Miller has fractures of both wrists, X-rays disclosed.

Everett Forfeits Bond

Charles T. Everett, of RFD 1, Cumberland, forfeited $5.75 collateral yesterday in Trial Magistrates court when he failed to appear for a hearing on a charge of passing a motor vehicle on a curve.

State Trooper H. F. Schultheis arrested Everett Tuesday on the National highway, one mile west of Cumberland.

Roosevelt Urges

600 miles wide in the southern Caribbean which the United States could protect only with ships and planes operating at points far distant from their bases.

In this area lie the lesser Antilles, the leeward and windward islands, stretching eastward and southward in a rough semi-circle from the Virgin islands (the United States' present most southerly naval and airbase) to the South American coast.

British Own Islands

These islands are mostly owned by Great Britain, although they include the French possessions of Guadaloupe and Martinique. The largest of the British islands is Trinidad, just off the coast of South America.

From the Virgin islands to Florida, the island passage approaches to the canal are considered well protected, by bases existing or under construction at St. Thomas, V. I.; San Juan, Puerto Rico; Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and Key West. Most of these are now being extensively improved.

But the southerly stretch with its many channels between islands has frankly been a worry to the defense tacticians. What sites would be chosen, should the deal go through, probably would depend on where the most suitable port facilities could be obtained. A French naval base is already in existence at Martinique.

Roosevelt Pleased

Mr. Roosevelt was in an obviously buoyant mood when he met the press today. He began at once with an announcement that two American generals and an admiral were in Great Britain acting as observers at the invitation of the British government. Then, with an enigmatic reference to destroyers, he announced the British and Canadian negotiations, and proceeded to repeat his statement, saying he might be quoted directly.

"The United States government is holding conversations with the government of the British empire with regard to the acquisition of naval and air bases by the United States for the American hemisphere defense with special reference to the Panama Canal."

Pausing only to say that the British and Canadian discussions were separate, he added:

"The United States government is carrying on conversations with the Canadian government looking toward defense of the American hemisphere."

The question of delivering destroyers to Great Britain is rapidly becoming one of the most controversial to arise from the war abroad. Great Britain has repeatedly appealed for them and important administration circles are known to favor such a course.

Consider Exchange

Only yesterday, it was reliably reported in the Senate that the Washington and London governments were discussing a possible exchange of destroyers for naval and air base sites.

Some Congressional elements which have opposed the president's foreign policy have urged the acquisition of such sites, and thus coupling the two propositions with the emphasis on American defense might prove effective strategy.

Congressional comment found Senator Holt (D-WVa), who has opposed the Roosevelt foreign policy, lauding the move to acquire defensive sites. He said it "should have been the program long ago."

Senator Nye (R-SD) was against the whole proposal.

"I do not think we want any half-interest with any foreign power in any part of the earth," he said. "We certainly do not want to extend our frontiers any further than they are now on a half or a whole basis."

Duke of Windsor Takes Office Today

NASSAU, Bahamas, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor will be sworn in as governor-general of the Bahamas islands tomorrow morning in a traditional ceremony.

Accompanied by the Duchess, the new governor will first set foot on Bahaman soil about 9 a. m. (EST). The induction will take place immediately.

The Windsors came here from Bermuda, first stop on their voyage from Europe, on a vessel, the name of which was not disclosed because of war-time censorship.

A half-holiday was declared here in order that all citizens may turn out to honor the new governor.

Italians Declare British Torpedoed A Greek Cruiser

Fascists Charge Plot To Draw Greece into the European War

By The Associated Press

ROME, Aug. 16.—Fascists declared angrily today that the torpedoing of the Greek cruiser Helle was "a second Athenia," perpetrated by the British navy to provoke a Greek-Italian explosion.

At the same time, they said Italy would demand Greek reparations for the beheading, allegedly by two Greeks, of Daut Hoggia, Albanian "patriot," near the Greek border recently. This incident has been the cause celebre of recent Greek-Italian tension.

Persons who write with authority snapped back at suggestions that the Italians torpedoed the Helle off Tinos island yesterday and said it was evident to them that the whole thing was a "new plot."

Nothing was said immediately about the bombing of Greek warships today by planes declared in Athens to have been Italian.

By calling the case a "second Athenia," Fascists referred to German contentions that the British sank their own liner Athenia the night of last September 3 in the expectation that the tragedy would be blamed on the Germans.

Italy had another British air raid today, but authorities said only slight damage was done in two villages near the industrial city of Turin.

The Italian high command announced another raid on the Malta air base, Halfar.

Annual Meeting of Cumberland Valley Firemen Is Held

HAGERSTOWN, Aug. 16 (AP)—John D. Sanders, Hagerstown, today was elected president of the Cumberland Valley Firemen's Association at their thirty-ninth annual convention.

Grencastle was chosen as the 1941 convention town.

Other officers elected were: Vice-presidents, Marvin Gonso, Chambersburg; Doyal F. Skinner, Harrisburgh; Wesley Shockey, Martinsburg; Secretary, C. L. Jacobs, Waynesboro; Treasurer, George S. Ridgely, Hagerstown; Chaplain, the Rev. F. Blubaugh, Baltimore.

D. Fred Gibbs, 81, only living charter member of the association, told of his experiences when Chambersburg was set afire by the Confederates in 1864.

stage at 4 p. m. and was still rising at Richmond. Sixty miles upstream, Columbia recorded a 30.4 reading at 4 o'clock, a rise of 1.2 feet in three hours.

The Appomattox climbed toward the 18-foot mark at Petersburg. Already at 17.5, the river appeared certain to sweep into the Norfolk and Western yards and damage other industrial property.

Farmville, which had been cut off from outside travel, was relieved somewhat by the passing of the Appomattox river crest there.

Lynchburg prepared for a 19-foot flood stage after Weatherman David E. Nicholson warned that as long as it kept raining, "we might as well get prepared for anything."

13 Inches in Short Time

Roanoke, where more than thirteen inches fell in three and a half days, apprehensively watched Roanoke river rise again slightly after dropping nine feet from the 21.6 foot crest, but the lighter rain did not appear sufficient to return the stream near its former height.

Telephone service to several southwest points still was disrupted with prospects that several days would be required to restore it to normal.

The Appalachian Electric Power Company closed flood gates at Byllesby and Claytor dams on the New river Thursday and considered the worst was over. The Byllesby plant was said to be damaged considerably.

Highway commissioner Henry G. Shirley said it was too early to attempt any estimate of the highway and bridge damage but that apparently it would be heavy.

The absence of any definite predictions for cessation of the rainfall added worry for wearied flood workers, although they were given some hope that the continued showers would be lighter.

When one of the reporters asked whether state did not have a defense establishment that the president might inspect, Sawyer mentioned Wright field at Dayton and said:

"I sure wouldn't object if he showed up to look over that."

Another caller was Sir George Paish, British economist, who told the president that Britain would hold out if the United States gave her "reasonable" assistance.

NAZI TAIL FEATHERS PLUCKED

German soldiers examine the gaping hole shot through the tail of a Nazi bomber during a raid on Britain. The German censor points out that despite the wound the warbird regained its base. The damage, however, indicates the accuracy of Britain's defending gunners, who have brought down hundreds of the raiders.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Germany's all-out air drive to smash Britain to her knees has reached a pace foreshadowing a terrible week-end for England.

By unofficial estimate, Nazi planes in swarms five-foid as numerous as the first waves, 500 strong, which zoomed across the channel were loosing an inferno of death and destruction, with no assurance that even that 2,500 plane peak may not be passed tomorrow or next day. The very fury of the German stroke, however, means that it can not be long sustained, nor long endured. The crisis must come within days, even hours.

Weeks ago Prime Minister Churchill told the "fighter pilots" of Britain's Royal Air Force that they would "have the glory of saving our island home from the most deadly of all attacks." Their hour has come, and the world waits to learn whether the same dogged British grit that saved a third of a million French and British troops, trapped at Dunkerque, can save England now in the darkest moment in her history.

Miracle Unsurpassed

The miracle of Dunkerque wrote a glorious page into British history that not even ultimate British defeat could dim. It was an upsurge of British courage that knew no distinction of rank, age or even experience.

Against Nazi air blasting at England on a scale never dreamed of a dozen years ago, a new and more glorious chapter of British victory against all odds is being written—or England is going down to defeat.

Hours, another week at most, should tell the tale.

For it cannot be doubted that if Hitler's air legions fail him now and England survives, his dream of swift mastery of all Europe will begin to fade. It is based on air Nazi power, as Britain's ultimate hope is based on sea power.

The final test of air power against sea power is at hand for England and the destiny of the world hinges on its outcome. Failure of this mighty German effort to break British morale or pave the way for Nazi invasion would be a grim warning to Hitler that somewhere his waterloo awaits him, as it awaited Napoleon.

If British reports of air casualties on both sides are anywhere near the truth, it must in desperation that this final Nazi drive for victory was launched. By those figures Britain's home guard of the air is substantially intact, however worn and battle weary her fighting pilots.

Accept the German figures on losses suffered during the past six dreadful days and nights, and England seems doomed. If those figures are true Nazi raiders over London itself, with results unknown as this is written, is merely a dramatic finale, a mopping up operation.

Time, and not much of it at that, will tell which battle score was correct, which doctored to suit home front needs. If Britain beats off this air attack, she will have little need to fear invasion or even starvation for many months to come, if ever.

bombs fell.

Two men at work in a garage were killed, but two girl clerks in the adjoining office escaped uninjured.

A woman, who hurried home from the grocery when the raiders came, arrived just in time to be killed by a bomb.

One man said, "as soon as the raid started, I ran upstairs and got my wife, who is ill. I carried her to the passage. There was an explosion outside.

Bomb Kills Two Men

"The blast took me off my feet and the locks of the doors that were shut were completely smashed. The scullery door was blown off and all the windows were blown out."

Two men were killed where a bomb made a big crater.

In another place, a five-year old child in a shelter was wounded in the chest and leg by a bomb splinter which penetrated the back of the shelter.

One house which was badly damaged was also damaged by a bomb in the World war. (Apparently in one of the Zeppelin raids of that period.)

A mother who threw herself over her child in the street escaped injury, but another who tried the same tactic was wounded by a bomb splinter.

One suburb alone was struck by thirty to forty bombs.

Girls in a factory near where a bomb burst rushed outside. They said machine-gun bullets spattered about them when they reached the street.

Fragments of bicycles and baby carriages littered one street.

One man pointing up a street said: "Go up and take a look there and you'll know why I hope I'm called up for the RAF next week."

Tonight gas and water works demolition squads worked on repairs and cleared debris. People without other accommodation shovelled plaster and broken glass out of their blasted homes.

"great destruction" in London's harbor zone, damage to all airports around the city, and bomb attacks of armament and powder plants north of London.

British accounts told of damage to residential property, and bombing of docks at Tilsbury on the Thames, Thirteen miles east of London.

Greece and Italy, meanwhile, appeared to be on the threshold of war, declared or undeclared.

Greece ordered partial mobilization of her reserves for next Tuesday. First to be called up were anti-aircraft gunners and observers.

This action followed a Greek report of an unsuccessful attack by Italian planes on two Greek destroyers. A high Greek authority declared the commanding officers absolutely identified as Italian the planes which attacked their ships, the Vasilevs Georgios I and the Vasilissa Olga, as they were sailing to the island of Tinos in the Aegean sea, where on Thursday the Greek cruiser Helle was mysteriously torpedoed.

It was reliably reported in Athens that the Italian naval attache apologized to Premier John Metaxas of Greece for the air attack, saying the destroyers were mistaken for British ships.

Whether such an apology would make any difference in the strained relations of the two nations was not clear, for the Greek censor cut the connection as this one sentence was telephoned to Budapest.

Ford Will Make 4,000 Airplane Engines for U. S.

Will Fill Order from D fense Council for Air Cooled Type of Motors

By DAVID J. WILKIE

DETROIT, Aug. 16 (AP)—He Ford, who said several weeks that he could, under certain sp fied conditions, build 1,000 airpla a day, is going to make 4,000 a tion engines for the United St government.

The motors are to be built on order from the National Defe Council and will be of the air-coo type now made by the Pratt Whitney division of the Uni Aircraft Corporation.

Announcement of the undertak was made at the Ford offices Dearborn after Dr. George Jack Mead, a technical adviser to defense commission, had spent m of today in conference with F officials who in turn were in te phone communication with He Ford, now vacationing in the Hu mountains of northern Michigan

Ford, whose engineers have be experimenting for several mon on various types of foreign aviat engines, said the government or would not interfere with his pl to build his own liquid-cooled a plane motor. This latter is to be 12-cylinder, 1,500 horsepower un to power a plane for which Fo already has blue-prints drawn.

Details of the production progra for the air-cooled engine were n disclosed. However, a complete fa tory lay-out was prepared recen while a 9,000 unit order for Ro Royce motors was under conside ation, and presumably it can utilized.

Throughout his negotiations wi the defense commission Ford h insisted that he would permit United States plants to make w materials "for defensive purpos only."

It was this insistence that caus a break-down of negotiations the 9,000 Rolls Royce Merlin ty motors. The order was subsequen assigned to the Packard Mot Car Co.

Snake Bites Farmer, But for Last Time

BERLIN, Md., Aug. 16. (AP)—Joe Davis, 52-year-old east Berlin farmer, stealthily climbed up under the eaves of his barn and ran his hand into a nest to capture a pigeon.

Instead of a pigeon, Davis clamped down on a large coiled black snake which bit the farmer's hand.

Davis ran for the doctor, but advised the snake was not of poisonous variety, he got his son, Sidney, went back to the nest and chopped the reptile in half with an axe.

favors the draft principle if necessary to national defense.

As to foreign policy, the nominee has said he favored giving to Great Britain such aid as will not impair American defenses. He is expected to call, too, for a powerful national defense—to be built by coordination of manpower with the nation's industrial machinery.

The administration farm program Willkie has said, should be retained until something better is found.

Willkie will make his acceptance speech in Elwood's Callaway park, which was a cow pasture when he was a boy. Near the speaking stand runs Duck Creek, where he used to swim. As a boy he drove cows through the pasture for seventy-five cents a week.

Seventy Bands Will Play

The committee in charge of the notification ceremonies announced there would be seventy-odd bands and numerous parades by various state delegations to add to the gayety.

Special trains, automobile caravans and planes will carry Republican groups there from many parts of the country.

"Elwood is ready for any sized crowd," said Homer Capehart, in charge of arrangements.

Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, Republican national chairman, will notify Willkie formally of his nomination.

Preceding the formal ceremonies, Willkie will speak briefly from the steps of his old school in Elwood—a school from which he was thrice dismissed.

The nominee plans to return late Saturday to Rushville, the home town of Mrs. Willkie.

He is scheduled to speak here Monday, but his plans beyond that are indefinite.

Her Husband and Two Women Charged with Trying To Murder Her

By WICK TEMPLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 16—Sheriff Henry Flowers tonight termed the "fake holdup" shooting of Mrs. Ada Hubb Headley "one of the worst" crimes in the history of this southwestern Pennsylvania county and charged it was "a plot" which would lead to the prosecution of her husband and two women.

Mrs. Headley, 44, fighting for her life in a Waynesburg hospital against peritonitis that developed after a two-hour emergency operation, was shot five times last Tuesday night at her home at nearby Pine Bank. Hospital attendants, reporting her slightly improved tonight, gave her a "50-50 chance" to recover.

No Formal Charges

Because of Mrs. Headley's condition, Flowers said formal charges would not be brought against her husband, Robert, a forty-nine-year-old gas field worker, until Monday, when two sisters already charged wit' disguising themselves in men's clothing and staging the fake holdup are scheduled to be given a hearing.

"I don't know what the charges against Headley will be pending the outcome of his wife's wounds," Flowers declared.

The sisters—Mrs. Otis Cumberledge, a plump, chestnut-haired widow of 36, and Mrs. Elizabeth Pettit, a slim, pretty brunette of 25—are charged with aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill. They and Headley were ordered held in jail pending the hearing.

Both sisters live at Nettle Hill, near Pine Bank, where Mrs. Headley was shot three times in the chest, once in the abdomen and once in the jaw when she, her husband and twelve-year-old son drove into the garage adjoining their neat, yellow frame home.

Accuses "Three Men"

Two figures stepped out of the shadows of the garage, one opening fire with a .22 calibre pistol. Headley and his son were not harmed, but Headley insisted his wife was shot by three men "who robbed me of between $30 and $40 and drove off in my car," Flowers declared.

Two suits of men's clothing were found nearby, belonged to Mrs. Cumberledge's 'teen-age son and nephew, the sheriff said.

After the shooting, Constable Ralph Loar noticed an automobile limping through nearby Kuhntown with a flat tire and followed it to the sisters' home. That and the clothing "broke" the case and implicated the sisters, Flowers said.

Deputy Sheriff Jake Orndoff described Headley and Mrs. Cumberledge as "friends."

Flowers charged Mrs. Pettit was the "trigger woman" and said the investigation was complete and that no more arrests were expected.

All-day Meeting Will Be Held at Davis Memorial Church

An all-day meeting will be held tomorrow at the Davis Memorial church on the Uhl highway. Six churches from the Oldtown circuit will be represented.

Sunday school will be held at 10 a. m. and the Rev. James A. Richards, pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. At noon, picnic lunches will be eaten on the church grounds.

An old fashioned song service, followed by a talk by the Rev. R. H. Parker, pastor of the Union Grove Methodist charge, will commence at 2 p. m. At 7 p. m., the Epworth League will hold an outdoor vesper service of candle light and at 8 p. m. the young people of the church will present a religious play.

A brass quartette from Cumberland will furnish the music and the Young People's choir will sing.

Rubber Workers Told To Fight Ordinance

Stanley Denlinger, general counsel for Local 26, United Rubber Workers of America, has instructed the union "that under no circumstances should our officers and members subject themselves to the burdensome and inquisitorial examination required" by Section 10 of Cumberland ordinance No. 1731.

O. J. Mortzfeldt, president of Local 26, said yesterday that Denlinger contends the section which pertains to distribution of handbills is unconstitutional. He also said a five page letter on the matter has been mailed to Mayor Harry Irvine by Denlinger.

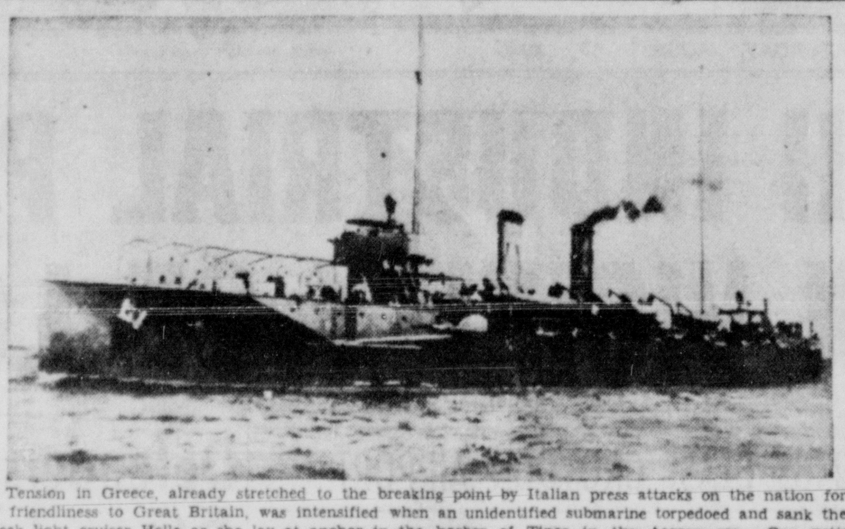

In his letter to the union the attorney states: "If any of our people are arrested, you must immediately see that they are properly defended and the constitutionality of this ordinance properly raised in the proceedings so that we may fight it to the bitter end."

Dead Grid Player's Number Is Retired

Columbia, Mo., Aug. 16 (AP)—There won't be a number 27 jersey among the football uniforms at the University of Missouri until 1942.

UNIDENTIFIED SUBMARINE SINKS GREEK CRUISER

Tension in Greece, already stretched to the breaking point by Italian press attacks on the nation for her friendliness to Great Britain, was intensified when an unidentified submarine torpedoed and sank the Greek light cruiser Helle as she lay at anchor in the harbor of Tinos in the Aegean sea. One petty officer was killed and 30 members of the crew were injured.

London Charges

estuary, the site of big cement works thirteen miles from London.

Here an undetermined number of dead was left.

The German column sped on then around the southeast of the city but dropped no bombs, said the air ministry.

Fresh Squadrons Arrive

Later, fresh Nazi squadrons roared up the estuary, loosing bombs in the southwestern suburbs.

(The Germans claimed to have bombed the populous east side of London and the northern and western suburbs as well.)

The first casualties found by an Associated Press correspondent in the southwestern area were two dead air raid wardens. One had been struck by a bomb fragment; the other showed not a mark.

A factory had been burned to the ground; windows within the radius of a mile were smashed; two saloons were wrecked; train service in the section was dislocated but a restoration did not require long.

The approach of the raiding bombers—an approach which because of censorship could not be told for five hours—was stealthy. They came at a high altitude, too high to be seen at first.

The first wave—only part of which reached the city—had crossed the southeast coast several hundred strong. Those able to break through and reach the London outskirts appeared to be avoiding the heart of the metropolitan area. Gunfire was heard in the suburbs across the city toward the western edge, and the boom of heavier explosives came from distant regions.

Many Londoners stood on their rooftops in an unsuccessful effort to see the action.

After it was all over, British sources declared it had proved that Britain, with her 400-mile-an-hour fighter planes and her anti-aircraft—still controlled the English skies despite the week-long efforts of thousands upon thousands of German planes to win a mastery of the air.

Today brought the greatest test yet seen.

All day long the kingdom had been pounded by a vast fleet of some 2,500 German bombers and fighters.

And then, as Germany wirelessed to London and the world that more were yet to come, this capital of empire itself was drawn into the theater of action—the theater of the great showdown.

A censorship fell tight upon London.

Hit Industrial Areas

They struck again and again at industrial areas, shipping, airdromes—at every point of British resistance in what seemed an obvious effort to break Britain from the air in a plan of strategy which if successful would avoid the great risk of trying an invasion across the English channel.

So great, so widespread, so thunderous was this arerial invasion that none could say how many thousands of planes were at grips.

It was the sixth successive day of mass raids over England—raids that every day had grown in ferocity—and by mid-afternoon it already had far outdone yesterday's attack, the biggest in history.

It was, as yesterday, an engagement so big as to be difficult to encompass: at one southeastern town alone, at one time, 400 German raiders were counted as they swept across the coastal frontier. The count was lost there; they came on and on after that.

The number of civilian dead was known only to be growing; there was no comprehensive count available and none in prospect.

The British meanwhile reported vast new bombing attacks of their own on military objectives in Italy, Germany and sections of Nazi-occupied France and Holland.

Attacked, said the air ministry, were:

Rain Saves Many Maryland Crops

By The Associated Press

Rain overspread the bulk of Maryland's farming acreage today, in some cases providing the first moisture of consequence in weeks, and breaking a drought that had threatened to wreck August crops.

The Eastern Shore, the state's most fertile and productive vegetable-raising section, enjoyed 1.2 inches of rain in the thirty-six hours up to late yesterday (Friday) afternoon.

The warm rain pelted hundreds of acres of corn fields, tomato patches and other vegetable lands in Wicomico county, and has hailed by growers as a "million-dollar" downpour.

Tomato Market Off

Although the tomato market has been off because of the slackening demand, vines are laden with the fruit and growers faced a total loss had the dry weather continued a few more dyas.

Similar reports came from Dorchester county, where farmers were experiencing the worst drought in ten years. Corn fields benefitted particularly, because a forecast of a crop only fifty per cent normal had been made at the height of the drought several days ago.

Central Maryland caught almost a full half-inch of rain during a twenty-four-hour period, and more was in prospect for today.

Both Cumberland and Hagerstown in the western end of the state reported farmers rejoicing over the steady, hammering showers.

In addition to the benefit to maturing vegetable crops, Hagerstown area orchardists said the rain would be a factor in "sizing up" the late apple crop. The drought in this section had not reached serious proportions, however.

Allegany and Garrett county farmers said the rains allayed fears for the string beans, which had been drying up and dropping from the vines. Corn also had suffered from the hot spell, they said, much of it being dry and unpalatable.

British, Italians Both Drop Bombs

CAIRO, Aug. 16 (AP)—The British and Italian air forces traded bombs today from the Suez to Somaliland amid indications that British forces fighting on the southern shores of the Gulf of Aden might have to fall back, lacking reinforcements, on Berbera, their Somali capital and chief port.

The Italians bombed Alexandria anew overnight in an attempt to smash the British fleet concentration there, but failed to hit any warships.

Official British announcements detailed air raids on Italian objectives from Libya to the coastal and inland roads of Somaliland, where the Italian mechanized columns are fighting their way toward Berbera.

Although the raids in British Somaliland were stated to have been "successful," British spokesmen said that the military situation there was "rather critical" and that the British, now defending heights around Berbera, may be forced to retire to the town itself.

Frostburg Woman Is Injured in Fall

Miss Pearl Miller, 148 Bowery street, Frostburg, is a patient at Memorial hospital, suffering from injuries received in a fall at a camp near Terra Alta, W. Va., Thursday night.

Besides a lacerated face, Miss Miller has fractures of both wrists, X-rays disclosed.

Everett Forfeits Bond

Charles T. Everett, of RFD 1, Cumberland, forfeited $5.75 collateral yesterday in Trial Magistrates court when he failed to appear for a hearing on a charge of passing a motor vehicle on a curve.

State Trooper H. F. Schultheis arrested Everett Tuesday on the National highway, one mile west of Cumberland.

600 miles wide in the southern Caribbean which the United States could protect only with ships and planes operating at points far distant from their bases.

In this area lie the lesser Antilles, the leeward and windward islands, stretching eastward and southward in a rough semi-circle from the Virgin islands (the United States' present most southerly naval and airbase) to the South American coast.

British Own Islands

These islands are mostly owned by Great Britain, although they include the French possessions of Guadaloupe and Martinique. The largest of the British islands is Trinidad, just off the coast of South America.

From the Virgin islands to Florida, the island passage approaches to the canal are considered well protected, by bases existing or under construction at St. Thomas, V. I.; San Juan, Puerto Rico; Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and Key West. Most of these are now being extensively improved.

But the southerly stretch with its many channels between islands has frankly been a worry to the defense tacticians. What sites would be chosen, should the deal go through, probably would depend on where the most suitable port facilities could be obtained. A French naval base is already in existence at Martinique.

Roosevelt Pleased

Mr. Roosevelt was in an obviously buoyant mood when he met the press today. He began at once with an announcement that two American generals and an admiral were in Great Britain acting as observers at the invitation of the British government. Then, with an enigmatic reference to destroyers, he announced the British and Canadian negotiations, and proceeded to repeat his statement, saying he might be quoted directly.

"The United States government is holding conversations with the government of the British empire with regard to the acquisition of naval and air bases by the United States for the American hemisphere defense with special reference to the Panama Canal."

Pausing only to say that the British and Canadian discussions were separate, he added:

"The United States government is carrying on conversations with the Canadian government looking toward defense of the American hemisphere."

The question of delivering destroyers to Great Britain is rapidly becoming one of the most controversial to arise from the war abroad. Great Britain has repeatedly appealed for them and important administration circles are known to favor such a course.

Consider Exchange

Only yesterday, it was reliably reported in the Senate that the Washington and London governments were discussing a possible exchange of destroyers for naval and air base sites.

Some Congressional elements which have opposed the president's foreign policy have urged the acquisition of such sites, and thus coupling the two propositions with the emphasis on American defense might prove effective strategy.

Congressional comment found Senator Holt (D-WVa), who has opposed the Roosevelt foreign policy, lauding the move to acquire defensive sites. He said it "should have been the program long ago."

Senator Nye (R-SD) was against the whole proposal.

"I do not think we want any half-interest with any foreign power in any part of the earth," he said. "We certainly do not want to extend our frontiers any further than they are now on a half or a whole basis."

Duke of Windsor Takes Office Today

NASSAU, Bahamas, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor will be sworn in as governor-general of the Bahamas islands tomorrow morning in a traditional ceremony.

Accompanied by the Duchess, the new governor will first set foot on Bahaman soil about 9 a. m. (EST). The induction will take place immediately.

The Windsors came here from Bermuda, first stop on their voyage from Europe, on a vessel, the name of which was not disclosed because of war-time censorship.

A half-holiday was declared here in order that all citizens may turn out to honor the new governor.

Italians Declare British Torpedoed A Greek Cruiser

Fascists Charge Plot To Draw Greece into the European War

By The Associated Press

ROME, Aug. 16.—Fascists declared angrily today that the torpedoing of the Greek cruiser Helle was "a second Athenia," perpetrated by the British navy to provoke a Greek-Italian explosion.

At the same time, they said Italy would demand Greek reparations for the beheading, allegedly by two Greeks, of Daut Hoggia, Albanian "patriot," near the Greek border recently. This incident has been the cause celebre of recent Greek-Italian tension.

Persons who write with authority snapped back at suggestions that the Italians torpedoed the Helle off Tinos island yesterday and said it was evident to them that the whole thing was a "new plot."

Nothing was said immediately about the bombing of Greek warships today by planes declared in Athens to have been Italian.

By calling the case a "second Athenia," Fascists referred to German contentions that the British sank their own liner Athenia the night of last September 3 in the expectation that the tragedy would be blamed on the Germans.

Italy had another British air raid today, but authorities said only slight damage was done in two villages near the industrial city of Turin.

The Italian high command announced another raid on the Malta air base, Halfar.

Annual Meeting of Cumberland Valley Firemen Is Held

Grencastle was chosen as the 1941 convention town.

Other officers elected were: Vice-presidents, Marvin Gonso, Chambersburg; Doyal F. Skinner, Harrisburgh; Wesley Shockey, Martinsburg; Secretary, C. L. Jacobs, Waynesboro; Treasurer, George S. Ridgely, Hagerstown; Chaplain, the Rev. F. Blubaugh, Baltimore.

D. Fred Gibbs, 81, only living charter member of the association, told of his experiences when Chambersburg was set afire by the Confederates in 1864.

stage at 4 p. m. and was still rising at Richmond. Sixty miles upstream, Columbia recorded a 30.4 reading at 4 o'clock, a rise of 1.2 feet in three hours.

The Appomattox climbed toward the 18-foot mark at Petersburg. Already at 17.5, the river appeared certain to sweep into the Norfolk and Western yards and damage other industrial property.

Farmville, which had been cut off from outside travel, was relieved somewhat by the passing of the Appomattox river crest there.

Lynchburg prepared for a 19-foot flood stage after Weatherman David E. Nicholson warned that as long as it kept raining, "we might as well get prepared for anything."

13 Inches in Short Time

Roanoke, where more than thirteen inches fell in three and a half days, apprehensively watched Roanoke river rise again slightly after dropping nine feet from the 21.6 foot crest, but the lighter rain did not appear sufficient to return the stream near its former height.

Telephone service to several southwest points still was disrupted with prospects that several days would be required to restore it to normal.

The Appalachian Electric Power Company closed flood gates at Byllesby and Claytor dams on the New river Thursday and considered the worst was over. The Byllesby plant was said to be damaged considerably.

Highway commissioner Henry G. Shirley said it was too early to attempt any estimate of the highway and bridge damage but that apparently it would be heavy.

The absence of any definite predictions for cessation of the rainfall added worry for wearied flood workers, although they were given some hope that the continued showers would be lighter.

When one of the reporters asked whether state did not have a defense establishment that the president might inspect, Sawyer mentioned Wright field at Dayton and said:

"I sure wouldn't object if he showed up to look over that."

Another caller was Sir George Paish, British economist, who told the president that Britain would hold out if the United States gave her "reasonable" assistance.

NAZI TAIL FEATHERS PLUCKED

German soldiers examine the gaping hole shot through the tail of a Nazi bomber during a raid on Britain. The German censor points out that despite the wound the warbird regained its base. The damage, however, indicates the accuracy of Britain's defending gunners, who have brought down hundreds of the raiders.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Germany's all-out air drive to smash Britain to her knees has reached a pace foreshadowing a terrible week-end for England.

By unofficial estimate, Nazi planes in swarms five-fold as numerous as the first waves, 500 strong, which zoomed across the channel were loosing an inferno of death and destruction, with no assurance that even that 2,500 plane peak may not be passed tomorrow or next day. The very fury of the German stroke, however, means that it can not be long sustained, nor long endured. The crisis must come within days, even hours.

Weeks ago Prime Minister Churchill told the "fighter pilots" of Britain's Royal Air Force that they would "have the glory of saving our island home from the most deadly of all attacks." Their hour has come, and the world waits to learn whether the same dogged British grit that saved a third of a million French and British troops, trapped at Dunkerque, can save England now in the darkest moment in her history.

Miracle Unsurpassed

The miracle of Dunkerque wrote a glorious page into British history that not even ultimate British defeat could dim. It was an upsurge of British courage that knew no distinction of rank, age or even experience.

Against Nazi air blasting at England on a scale never dreamed of a dozen years ago, a new and more glorious chapter of British victory against all odds is being written—or England is going down to defeat.

Hours, another week at most, should tell the tale.

For it cannot be doubted that if Hitler's air legions fail him now and England survives, his dream of swift mastery of all Europe will begin to fade. It is based on air Nazi power, as Britain's ultimate hope is based on sea power.

The final test of air power against sea power is at hand for England and the destiny of the world hinges on its outcome. Failure of this mighty German effort to break British morale or pave the way for Nazi invasion would be a grim warning to Hitler that somewhere his waterloo awaits him, as it awaited Napoleon.

If British reports of air casualties on both sides are anywhere near the truth, it must in desperation that this final Nazi drive for victory was launched. By those figures Britain's home guard of the air is substantially intact, however worn and battle weary her fighting pilots.

Accept the German figures on losses suffered during the past six dreadful days and nights, and England seems doomed. If those figures are true Nazi raiders over London itself, with results unknown as this is written, is merely a dramatic finale, a mopping up operation.

Time, and not much of it at that, will tell which battle score was correct, which doctored to suit home front needs. If Britain beats off this air attack, she will have little need to fear invasion or even starvation for many months to come, if ever.

bombs fell.

Two men at work in a garage were killed, but two girl clerks in the adjoining office escaped uninjured.

A woman, who hurried home from the grocery when the raiders came, arrived just in time to be killed by a bomb.

One man said, "as soon as the raid started, I ran upstairs and got my wife, who is ill. I carried her to the passage. There was an explosion outside.

Bomb Kills Two Men

"The blast took me off my feet and the locks of the doors that were shut were completely smashed. The scullery door was blown off and all the windows were blown out."

Two men were killed where a bomb made a big crater.

In another place, a five-year old child in a shelter was wounded in the chest and leg by a bomb splinter which penetrated the back of the shelter.

One house which was badly damaged was also damaged by a bomb in the World war. (Apparently in one of the Zeppelin raids of that period.)

A mother who threw herself over her child in the street escaped injury, but another who tried the same tactic was wounded by a bomb splinter.

One suburb alone was struck by thirty to forty bombs.

Girls in a factory near where a bomb burst rushed outside. They said machine-gun bullets spattered about them when they reached the street.

Fragments of bicycles and baby carriages littered one street.

One man pointing up a street said: "Go up and take a look there and you'll know why I hope I'm called up for the RAF next week."

Tonight gas and water works demolition squads worked on repairs and cleared debris. People without other accommodation shovelled plaster and broken glass out of their blasted homes.

"great destruction" in London's harbor zone, damage to all airports around the city, and bomb attacks of armament and powder plants north of London.

British accounts told of damage to residential property, and bombing of docks at Tilsbury on the Thames, Thirteen miles east of London.

Greece and Italy, meanwhile, appeared to be on the threshold of war, declared or undeclared.

Greece ordered partial mobilization of her reserves for next Tuesday. First to be called up were anti-aircraft gunners and observers.

This action followed a Greek report of an unsuccessful attack by Italian planes on two Greek destroyers. A high Greek authority declared the commanding officers absolutely identified as Italian the planes which attacked their ships, the Vasilevs Georgios I and the Vasilissa Olga, as they were sailing to the island of Tinos in the Aegean sea, where on Thursday the Greek cruiser Helle was mysteriously torpedoed.

It was reliably reported in Athens that the Italian naval attache apologized to Premier John Metaxas of Greece for the air attack, saying the destroyers were mistaken for British ships.

Whether such an apology would make any difference in the strained relations of the two nations was not clear, for the Greek censor cut the connection as this one sentence was telephoned to Budapest.

Ford Will Make 4,000 Airplane Engines for U. S.

Will Fill Order from Defense Council for Air-Cooled Type of Motors

By DAVID J. WILKIE

DETROIT, Aug. 16 (AP)—Henry Ford, who said several weeks ago that he could, under certain specified conditions, build 1,000 airplanes a day, is going to make 4,000 aviation engines for the United States government.

The motors are to be built on an order from the National Defense Council and will be of the air-cooled type now made by the Pratt & Whitney division of the United Aircraft Corporation.

Announcement of the undertaking was made at the Ford offices in Dearborn after Dr. George Jackson Mead, a technical adviser to the defense commission, had spent most of today in conference with Ford officials who in turn were in telephone communication with Henry Ford, now vacationing in the Huron mountains of northern Michigan.

Ford, whose engineers have been experimenting for several months on various types of foreign aviation engines, said the government order would not interfere with his plan to build his own liquid-cooled airplane motor. This latter is to be a 12-cylinder, 1,500 horsepower unit, to power a plane for which Ford already has blue-prints drawn.

Details of the production program for the air-cooled engine were not disclosed. However, a complete factory lay-out was prepared recently while a 9,000 unit order for Rolls Royce motors was under consideration, and presumably it can be utilized.

Throughout his negotiations with the defense commission Ford had insisted that he would permit his United States plants to make war materials "for defensive purposes only."

It was this insistence that caused a break-down of negotiations for the 9,000 Rolls Royce Merlin type motors. The order was subsequently assigned to the Packard Motor Car Co.

Dies To Name Film Communists in Report

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16 (AP)—Charges of Communist party affiliation or sympathy levelled against numerous members of the Hollywood film colony either will be proved or disproved and the findings made public, Chairman Dies of the House Committee on un-American activities said today.

The Texas representative issued invitations to forty-three unidentified movie personalities to appear before his committee, explaining:

"The name of every actor or actress, no matter how popular or wealthy he may be, will be announced to the public as cleared or found guilty."

He said subpoenas would be issued, if necessary, and that those now in the east would be given an opportunity to appear before the committee reports to Congress Jan. 3.

Dies' statement came after conferences with Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, and Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary, and Laurence Bielenson, attorney for the Screen Actors' Guild.

John J. Leech, former secretary of the Communist party here, who told a county grand jury earlier this week a number of Hollywood persons were Communists or sympathizers, appeared before the committee today and "made some additions" to his grand jury story, Dies said.

Willkie Inspects

favors the draft principle if necessary to national defense.

As to foreign policy, the nominee has said he favored giving to Great Britain such aid as will not impair American defenses. He is expected to call, too, for a powerful national defense—to be built by coordination of manpower with the nation's industrial machinery.

The administration farm program, Willkie has said, should be retained until something better is found.

Willkie will make his acceptance speech in Elwood's Callaway park, which was a cow pasture when he was a boy. Near the speaking stand runs Duck Creek, where he used to swim. As a boy he drove cows through the pasture for seventy-five cents a week.

Seventy Bands Will Play

The committee in charge of the notification ceremonies announced there would be seventy-odd bands and numerous parades by various state delegations to add to the gayety.

Special trains, automobile caravans and planes will carry Republican groups there from many parts of the country.

"Elwood is ready for any sized crowd," said Homer Capehart, in charge of arrangements.

Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, Republican national chairman, will notify Willkie formally of his nomination.

Preceding the formal ceremonies, Willkie will speak briefly from the steps of his old school in Elwood—a school from which he was thrice dismissed.

The nominee plans to return late Saturday to Rushville, the home town of Mrs. Willkie.

Long Practiced by The Monarchies

SHOULD this Congress incorporate in American life compulsory military service in time of peace this country, the greatest of all democracies, will have merged back into a deep historical background on one score at least by participating at last in a practice in which monarchy long specialized, to wit: the practice of occupying the attention of the people of a country by presenting them with the always absorbing business of war.

Written history does not go back far enough to identify the first potentate who took his subjects out and led, or pushed, them into battle. Virtually all the pioneer princes of this world practiced this with their people. Several ideas were behind it.

First, it expanded the potentate's dominion, as in the case of Alexander. Second, it gave the potentate political control at home, as in the case of Augustus and the Conscript Guard. Third, it took up unemployment slack on occasion, as in the case of the Pharaohs, who, when there were no unconquered neighbors left, put the people to work building the pyramids.

Probably a huge army in time of peace will not result in attack upon the neighbors of the United States. Perhaps it will not give the man occupying the White House a political cinch on the country. But it certainly will take up the unemployment slack and so associate America in history with the ancient autocracy which flourished when the Pharaohs were on top.

Propaganda That Feeds on Hysteria

HYSTERIA is again riding pretty high throughout the nation, so high that it threatens to bury reason. Part of it is due to this matter of conscription and part of it is due to the persistent propaganda for extending futher aid to Great Britain, even to the point of stripping the nation of part of its own means of defending itself, if the need for such defense should arise.

That, by the way, is a propaganda of purely American origin. Perhaps it is expressive of a sincere belief. But it is based on fear and feeds on hysteria.

Unquestionably, America purposes in some way to prepare itself to meet whatever it may be called upon to meet. Unquestionably, too, American sympathies call for extension of whatever aid can be given to preserve freedom in government elsewhere. But how either of these things shall best be done can not be determined in an atmosphere which threatens to submerge reason.

This is not a time for emotional excitability, either in or out of Congress. Some incidents of recent debate in the national legislative body as well as in less formal discussions indicate that there is danger that reason will be buried when there is need of calm study if safe conclusions are to be reached.

Right now Americans need to take a long breath and count at least to ten.

Broadcasting Chains Are on the Spot

WHEN, in the course of a presidential campaign, is a "fireside chat" not a campaign speech? That is a question engaging the National Association of Broadcasters no less than the supporters of Wendell Willkie. From the broadcasters' point of view the question has a distinct pocketbook interest, involving, as it does, free use of the air by rival candidates to the exclusion of profitable commercial programs.

The association has accepted the recommendation of its code committee to give an equal amount of free use of the air to candidates of all political parties regardless of size, which includes, of course, the Communist.

Mr. Roosevelt's emanations over the air from the White House from now until the evening of November 4 will, it is assured, be acid-tested for intent. That is because the broadcasters have ruled that the burden of proof that the president is campaigning when he takes "my friends" into his confidence as to performance or purpose will rest upon oposition parties. His clear, warm and persuasive tones, therefore, will fall upon plenty of ears presensitized to analysis of intent.

As between reporting "on the state of the nation" and bidding for support at the polls, some mighty fine distinctions are sure to be drawn. Some of the broadcasting chains such as the Columbia—which the Republicans charged with discriminating against them in 1936—are on the spot because of the trend of the election.

High Time To Consider This Pressing Problem

IT IS REFRESHING to note that some attention is being given to the snowball-like increase in the cost of government. This has been done by Daniel Boone Dawson, former mayor of Charleston, W. Va., the Republican nominee for governor of that state, in his address before the state judicial convention of the party just held in that city.

"During the next few years," Dawson said, "taxes will be one of our most important economic problems. It will be a burden that will have to be borne as far as he is able by every citizen of our state. A person who pays taxes in West Virginia has a right not only to see that his taxes are properly applied after he pays them, but that he gets a full dollar's worth of value for every dollar he pays. He has the right to say to those in charge and responsible for the government that they shall be economical, that they shall administer the finances of government soundly.

"It has been my experience that no person objects to paying taxes so long as he receives something of value for them. In my experience as mayor of the city of Charleston, I have found that the people of this community and all other communities are willing to pay taxes for public improvements, things that contribute to the sound government and welfare of the community in which they live and likewise this is true of the state. But I do not think they are willing to pay taxes for the purpose of building up political machines to obtain power for some person who is ambitious politically and who is willing to put on the payroll key politicians for the purpose of building what is called an organization. I have always believed the best politics is efficiency in government, and that the people of this democratic nation will support an executive and party that will guarantee to them full value for their tax money."

Mayor Dawson is quite right in that belief, and it is good to have him give the attention he has to this serious problem. What he says of the West Virginia state government is even more applicable to the national government, and in that application it is unfortunately being purposely buried under defense pleas, but it is, nevertheless, one of the most important and most serious things before the country. It is important in view of the senseless squandering of our means that has gone on for so long and has piled up a mountain of debt the taxpayers will have to discharge some way or other at some time or other.

In view of the conflicting reports from belligerent propaganda bureaus, the man at the next desk thinks that what this war really needs is an official scorer.

Two world wars and depressions, fore, aft and in-between, have finally convinced us that the world's smartest people are the Eskimos.

Tea in Britain is now rationed to twenty-five cups weekly per person, but that ought to be enough to buck up even an Englishman.

A one-cent stamp, valued at $50,000, has just been sold. Jim Farley seems to have quit just when business was picking up.

Everybody may be able to tune in on the next war by television and keep his own count of the airplanes shot down.

A Tokyo spokesman is squawking that the empire is crawling with fifth columnists and trojan horses. Goodie!

The Browser's Findings

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser notices in a nostalgic mood that B. M. Bower is dead—and if that name means nothing to you, then he is very, very sorry for you. Because

Marshall Maslin

B. M. Bower was a woman who wrote many a wild western story, and she meant much to the Browser when he was a little lad who lived in the West but had never seen an old cowhand, even though he lived less than thirty miles from Salinas, which in those days had not yet decided to commercialize the rodeo.

In that era B. M. Bower's "Chip of the Flying U" was the young Browser's favorite hero, surpassing in nobility and moral excellence and physical achievement even the young heroes of G. A. Henty's masterpieces. (And the Browser has decided to start looking around in the old book stores for copies of those Henty books for his small boy to read some day.) . . He knows nothing about B. M. Bower but her name and the books she used to write. She never did stop writing them until death stayed her hand, but alas! the Browser's taste changed and he began to read Galsworthy and Conrad and W. H. Hudson and then Branch Cabell and Floyd Dell and Carl Van Vechten and Wells and Willa Cather and Aldous Huxley and Hemingway and Faulkner and such. He still admires these authors of his maturity but he admits that have never excited him as much as B. M. Bower did. . . O, why is trash so lovely!

But after all such men as Charles Allen Smart are the real writers for us, after we grow up. Mr. Smart is the man who wrote "R. F. D." a year or so ago. He is a bright young man who went to Harvard, went to work for a publisher, then decided ten years ago that what he wanted most to do was work a farm near Chillecothe, Ohio. Although he has written four books he still thinks of himself as a farmer and not as a writer; which is a healthy point of view indeed. His fourth book, which the Browser has before him now, is Rosscommon (Random House), a beautifully written and originally conceived Utopia.

In every age men have tried to create some society in which men may live happily together on the land in small groups, free from the diseases of civilization. In this compact book Smart has told the story of Macdonald whose farm, once the best in the countryside, has gone to ruin until at last it is sold at auction. The evening before that sale Smart and a young boy call on Macdonald and find him burning a great stack of manuscript. It is his story of a golden dream, of a Utopian life which a group of men and women had brought to success on Rosscommon. While he was writing it, the farm itself had gone to pieces and on this last day he has decided that even his story of that adventure was inadequate and deserving only of destruction. But through the long night, urged by Smart, he tells in detail what that farm Utopia was.

Fact and fancy are so cleverly interwoven in the story that one hardly knows which detail is reality and which is the substance of a dream. To some readers, this book may have no more reality than one of the products of B. M. Bower's typewriter, but it is essentially a serious effort on the part of Charles Allen Smart to make man's old dream of a perfect life come true. . . The publishers say on the jacket of the book that they are "proud of it". They should be.

A larger field than a county Utopia is John Strachey's in "A Programme for Progress" (Random House) Mr. Strachey was a Communist, he is still far from being a capitalist but he now makes different deductions from the beliefs he holds. The man who was once forbidden to stay in this country now believes that the genuinely democratic and progressive nations of this world are able to modify capitalism and achieve an economy that will work even in peace time, without recourse to the ghastly refuge of war. . The Browser frankly admits that some of the reasoning was too rarefied for him, but it seemed sound . . . and that's enough from Marsh Maslin

HUGH S. JOHNSON

KANSAS CITY, Thursday — The Willkie "ersatz" headquarters of amateurs breaks up today. The temporary general staff is departing in every direction. A new and permanent organization will be formed, in the creation of which Mr. Willkie will have a chance to ues his undoubtedly great executive ability.

Hugh Johnson

My three days of observation of the candidate have been eye-openers to me—well as I thought I knew him. This column isn't going to make the mistake it made in 1936 and take a strong partisan position. But it feels a certain sense of responsibility for insisting on the availability of this man for almost two years and getting a good many raspberries for its alleged "goofiness."

The "eye-opener" at Colorado springs was this guys sturdy independence, I think he is another, but a pleasanter, Grover Cleveland. I sensed, and sometimes saw, the strongest kinds of pulls and pressures applied to him in these few days. Some of them were from the mightiest of political leaders. Others were of the modern telegraph-barrage variety—"Speaking for 6,000,000 farmers, we urge"; "Speaking for 21,000,000 Catholics, we demand"; "As representative of 13,000,000 Negroes we ask"; "If you won't do so-and-so, you will lose New York State and the whole Atlantic seaboard."

The candidate answers genially and courteously. He checks facts from every source he can command. He continues to pursue the even tenor of his way and thought with a smiling urbanity that seems a miracle to me. I know only one other man who could take such pushing, pulling and pawing with as much good nature, as little disturbance of his convictions and as little loss of sleep. His name is Franklin Roosevelt.

Opinion Asked

I do not for a moment mean to suggest that Wendell Willkie is a stubborn dogmatist. He is just the reverse of that. He has the usual business habit of putting up an alert defensive to any professional sales talk. But he also uses the efficient business man's practice of overlooking no promising "proposition" and of getting every fact and expert opinion available before he decides. There has been a good deal of speculation about why I went to Colorado Springs (through force of habit I had almost written Warm Springs). Mr. Willkie asked me to come to give my opinion on certain aspects of the farm, labor and defense problems, with all of which I have had some experience and have expressed strong views.

Well, he winnowed whatever brains I have with a fine-tooth comb, so far as I know accepted nothing, put up as able and well informed debate as I have yet encountered — and left me in complete ignorance as to his final judgment.

To me, all this seems a good sign. The greatest blunder in a recent government has been, I think, a sort of trout-like snapping at and swallowing whole of any attractive brainstorm, with little or no attempt to get an objective analysis or hear any worthwhile contrary opinion.

Would Be Good President

Of one thing I am sure. Nobody is going to shove this shaggy Hoosier around, sell him any gold bricks or push him off of any important moral position, for the sake of any expedient political advantage. The latter has, to my knowledge, been vainly attempted with dire threats of defeat if Willkie did not instantly knuckle. He just laughed.

He has another quality of Franklin Roosevelt. Nobody rejected ever goes away mad. But while the President accomplishes this by saying, "Yes, yes, yes — you are perfectly right", and then acts just as he pleases; Mr. Willkie somehow manages to keep them cheerful with something like: "Yours received and contents noted. I will study it carefully. Just now it looks lousy" — or "attractive", as the case may be.

I still say he would be a great president.—Distributed by the United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

THAT UNEXPECTED ADDITION TO THE WALL

Political Morality of the New Deal Is Put in Bad Light by Wendell Willkie

By FRANKLYN WALTMAN

Wendell Willkie has demonstrated to the country the kind of leadership it can expect from him if he is elected to the presidency. He did this in connection with the very smelly campaign book activities of the Democratic National Committee.

Likewise Mr. Willkie has demonstrated how practical application with vigor and punch can be given to platitudes about the "moral climate" of America and "political morality" of which President Roosevelt is always talking.

It will be recalled that in 1936 the Democratic National Committee devised the advertising racket in a convention book in order to shake down corporations for campaign contributions and thus evade the Federal Corrupt Practices act.

Corporations "Forced To Buy"

Subsequently the committee "sold" many thousands of these books to corporations, first at $2:50 a copy, then at $5 a copy and finally, with Mr. Roosevelt's autograph as the alleged bait, at $250 a copy. The corporations which were forced—and that word is used literally—to buy advertising in the book or the books themselves were with few exceptions either doing business with the federal government or under some form of regulation of the federal government.

The fact that the Democratic National Committee took in some $1,200,000 from these operations, as reported by the committee to Congress, did not arouse public indignation so much as did the revelation of the methods used to shake down these corporations.

Well-authenticated stories were put in the Congressional Record showing in 1936 that corporations doing business with the federal government were threatened, intimidated and coerced into signing on the dotted line—or else!

When these sordid stories became public it might have been expected that Mr. Roosevelt would have denounced the whole business—would have rebuked his national committee for engaging in a project which so flagrantly violated the Federal Corrupt Practices act which makes unlawful the giving or taking of contributions by or from corporations in connection with the election of Federal officers.

Blessed by Roosevelt

Mr. Roosevelt, of course, did nothing of the sort. Indeed, he gave the whole unlawful mess his benediction by autographing more than 1,000 of these books so they could be sold again to corporations, this time at the ridiculous price of $250 each. Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly thought he was making the bad corporations pay through the nose for his campaign expenses. How he must have chuckled!

But old John Q. Public, the average man on the street, did not see the joke. He was somewhat outraged at such brazen political immorality. So, when Congress came to revise the Hatch act several months ago it undertook to make unlawful the merchandising of advertising, articles and commodities for the benefit of a political campaign. Mr. Roosevelt professed to favor that legislation—although representatives of his national committee did their best to have it pigeonholed.

Failing to stop the passage of the new law, the representatives of the Democratic National Committee decided to ignore it. They went ahead with plans for the solicitation of advertising for this year's convention book—and Mr. Roosevelt aided and abetted them by holding the bill for eight days on his desk before signing it—until the Democratic national convention was over.

Announcement Ignored Law

But even the signing of the law did not deter the Democratic leaders. They blandly announced that they proposed to proceed with the sale of their convention book. The only difference from 1936 was that this year they proposed to charge only twenty-five cents for it.

Again, did Mr. Roosevelt denounce this flagrant violation of the law? He did not. Wendell Willkie, however, got quick action with a mighty blast about the whole business. Immediately after the Willkie attack, New Deal Attorney General Robert H. Jackson pronounced the Democratic National Committee plan as unlawful. So did Democratic Senator Hatch, author of the legislation prohibiting such undertakings. Some days have passed—but not one word has been heard from the great preacher of "political morality"—Mr. Roosevelt.

It is no wonder that self-respecting Democrats are deserting their party by the tens of thousands to support Wendell Willkie. They are tired of a man who talks one way and acts another.

It Will Not Add Up

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

The administration has inclined favorably from the first to the proposition of turning over more or less obsolete American naval craft to the Allies. Nobody in the administration has come out quite so boldly as has General Pershing or Senator Pepper, but the sentiment has been very strong in this direction.

All of which is difficult to reconcile with executive orders just issued prohibiting the export of aviation gasoline to points outside of the Western Hemisphere—a move made, we are told, "in the interest of national defense."

Europe has taken some 1,076,238 of the 1,164,343 barrels of this fuel shipped out of the country during the first six months of 1940. France took 513,513 barrels, England, 504,196. Germany and Italy bought none.

Unless the plan is to let England obtain aviation gasoline through Canada, and to prevent Germany from obtaining use of French imports, it would appear that while we are anxious to thrust our navy on England, we are unwilling to provide her with fuel for her airplanes. Moreover, if our need is so dire that we cannot spare gasoline which can be provided on short notice, what business have we getting rid of fighting ships?

Caboose Goes High Hat

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

Well, well! The caboose that tail-end unit of a freight train, is about to achieve grandeur, after all these years. Though it may still be referred to by veteran railroaders as a crummy, a cage, the clown wagon, the monkey house, the hut, parlor, hack or doghouse, it is about to feel the touch of modernization and go deluxe.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has started it with an order for twenty-five new cabooses that will embody such features as modern refrigerators, running water, a real combination heating and cooking stove, deep-tufted bunks for comfortable rest when the crew isn't otherwise engaged, a cushioning pad to protect the person working at the desk from sudden jerks and bodily injury.

The old-time railroaders, toughened to the discomforts of the hard bunk, smoky stove and water bucket, may consider the new model caboose a hack for "softies" but we have an idea that they won't enter any protest against this effort to make them comfortable and before long may even have some words of praise for it.

We have our doubts, however, whether it will ever be able to shake off some of its affectionately disrespectful sobriquets, even when it becomes as modern as the streamlined passenger car

Rediscovering America

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., News

A travel-loving people whose restless spirit and boundless curiosity once made Europeans gape, is shut off now from its old stamping ground. In any other summer New York and other ports would be jammed with ships of many flags moving thousands of eager Americans toward what they had always imagined to be the supreme experience in travel.

Europe was to American tourists a land of castles and museums, of fabled cities and villages, of gracious innkeepers and quaintly dressed peasants. American tourists were to Europe a race of high-spirited children with a passion for going places and with a talent for easy spending. Where the spending is done now, in a summer when tragic events have closed Europe as a vacation center, is a question that travelers throughout the nation are asking.

Many answered the question by deciding to see their own country; others made steamship reservations to near ports in the Caribbean and to far ports in South America and the Pacific. These regions are benefiting by the diversion of tourist traffic from Europe, while Americans discover that the field of foreign travel is wider than they had imagined.

The splendors of the Great Lakes, where luxurious cruise ships may still ply cold waters without fear of hovering bombers or lurking submarines, is unrolling before a host of summer visitors. Advance booking for the popular seven-day cruises, and for shorter trips as well, far exceed those of any previous year. Consequently, steamship lines and travel agencies in the area are expecting the biggest season in their history.

Odds Go Haywire On All Wagering, Hymie Augen Says

By EDWIN C. HILL

Mr. Hymie Augen, stuss-dealer emeritus, political railbird for many years, finds it much harder to make a book in this election year than in previous years. He sees new elements of uncertainty and confusion in both national and local politics. Naturally, his outlook is somewhat parochial, conditioned, perhaps, more by the Red Hook than the Washington viewpoint, but Mr. Augen reads the papers and makes remote and irrelevant matters somehow fit into larger patterns patterns if you just give him time.

Edwin C. Hill

I am afraid he would have become tiresomely didactic if he had had more formal training in the art of off-hand discourse. When he drops in to spill something about the state of the nation, he always talks standing up, resting his right foot on the rung of a chair. The chair rung obviously is a substitute for a brass-rail. I have known several brass-rail philosophers who could not talk sitting down, any more than a horse could kick if you tied his ears forward. Didn't Dr. Holmes write a brief monograph on something like that?

Nearly Fought

"I like this Vosnick. This is a free country and down at Ryan's poolroom last Saturday night I started touting Vosnick and I almost had a fight on my hands," said Mr. Augen. "Some big lug said he wouldn't stand around and hear anybody making dirty cracks about Medwick, and then some others began yelling about Reese and Camilli and Lavagetto until they almost had to call the cops. I was lucky I didn't get a bust on the conk with a billiard cue. See what I mean?"

"No, I don't," I answered. "You sound off about this tricky election year, and then you ramble off on a poolroom brawl about ball-players. If that means anything, I'm Ducky Medwick."

Picture Suggested

"I suppose I'll have to draw a picture for you, or show you something in a book or maybe pull some affidavits on you," said Mr. Augen wearily. "I don't see how you mugs ever get out a newspaper the way everything has to be spelled out for you.

"Listen, do you think for a minute that the public can keep its mind on politics when Brooklyn is winning ballgames and has a chance to snag a pennant? You ought to know better than that. I was just going to say, when you flagged me down, that after we got through this brawling match about Vosnick, etc., a little runt that looked like he was looking for trouble tried to kick up an argument about politics and nobody would give him a tumble.

"He said this and that big-time politician was just a heel and a low-down body-snatcher and a porch-climber and one thing and another and nobody was listening. This runt blew himself through a tin horn and finally got so mad he was pasting both Roosevelt and Willkie at the same time and everybody just let him make his own ticket. All they was worrying about was the Dodgers.

Nothing Like It Was

"What I mean is, politics this year is just like a deck with two jokers and everything wild. You can make a book on a campaign where everything is running along just like it was. These days nothing ain't like it was. A year ago you wouldn't of bet on Brooklyn winning a pennant any more than you would on a man with a wooden leg winning the six-day bicycle race. You wouldn't of bet on this Stalin and Hitler going into a waltz after they had been telling for years how they would gouge each other's eyes out and knock their teeth down their throat, etc. You wouldn't of bet on France being a pushover for this Hitler, who everybody said for years was just punk and you couldn't of put a dime on this added starter Willkie, who had never been figured anywhere by any handicapper.

"Brokers are smarter than crap-shooters or horse-players. Anyway they ought to be. Most of them went to college. What do they do? They just sit out this war and election. The public is that way, too. When everything is haywire, it ain't safe to figure odds. You might even pick up a paper some day and read that Fainting Phil Scott had come back over here and knocked Joe Louis horizontal. — Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Long Practiced by The Monarchies

SHOULD this Congress incorporate in American life compulsory military service in time of peace this country, the greatest of all democracies, will have merged back into a deep historical background on one score at least by participating at last in a practice in which monarchy long specialized, to wit: the practice of occupying the attention of the people of a country by presenting them with the always absorbing business of war.

Written history does not go back far enough to identify the first potentate who took his subjects out and led, or pushed, them into battle. Virtually all the pioneer princes of this world practiced this with their people. Several ideas were behind it.

First, it expanded the potentate's dominion, as in the case of Alexander. Second, it gave the potentate political control at home, as in the case of Augustus and the Conscript Guard. Third, it took up unemployment slack on occasion, as in the case of the Pharaohs, who, when there were no unconquered neighbors left, put the people to work building the pyramids.

Probably a huge army in time of peace will not result in attack upon the neighbors of the United States. Perhaps it will not give the man occupying the White House a political cinch on the country. But it certainly will take up the unemployment slack and so associate America in history with the ancient autocracy which flourished when the Pharaohs were on top.

Propaganda That Feeds on Hysteria

HYSTERIA is again riding pretty high throughout the nation, so high that it threatens to bury reason. Part of it is due to this matter of conscription and part of it is due to the persistent propaganda for extending futher aid to Great Britain, even to the point of stripping the nation of part of its own means of defending itself, if the need for such defense should arise.

That, by the way, is a propaganda of purely American origin. Perhaps it is expressive of a sincere belief. But it is based on fear and feeds on hysteria.

Unquestionably, America purposes in some way to prepare itself to meet whatever it may be called upon to meet. Unquestionably, too, American sympathies call for extension of whatever aid can be given to preserve freedom in government elsewhere. But how either of these things shall best be done can not be determined in an atmosphere which threatens to submerge reason.

This is not a time for emotional excitability, either in or out of Congress. Some incidents of recent debate in the national legislative body as well as in less formal discussions indicate that there is danger that reason will be buried when there is need of calm study if safe conclusions are to be reached.

Right now Americans need to take a long breath and count at least to ten.

Broadcasting Chains Are on the Spot

WHEN, in the course of a presidential campaign, is a "fireside chat" not a campaign speech? That is a question engaging the National Association of Broadcasters no less than the supporters of Wendell Willkie. From the broadcasters' point of view the question has a distinct pocketbook interest, involving, as it does, free use of the air by rival candidates to the exclusion of profitable commercial programs.

The association has accepted the recommendation of its code committee to give an equal amount of free use of the air to candidates of all political parties regardless of size, which includes, of course, the Communist.

Mr. Roosevelt's emanations over the air from the White House from now until the evening of November 4 will, it is assured, be acid-tested for intent. That is because the broadcasters have ruled that the burden of proof that the president is campaigning when he takes "my friends" into his confidence as to performance or purpose will rest upon opposition parties. His clear, warm and persuasive tones, therefore, will fall upon plenty of ears presensitized to analysis of intent.

As between reporting "on the state of the nation" and bidding for support at the polls, some mighty fine distinctions are sure to be drawn. Some of the broadcasting chains such as the Columbia—which the Republicans charged with discriminating against them in 1936—are on the spot because of the trend of the election.

High Time To Consider This Pressing Problem

IT IS REFRESHING to note that some attention is being given to the snowball-like increase in the cost of government. This has been done by Daniel Boone Dawson, former mayor of Charleston, W. Va., the Republican nominee for governor of that state, in his address before the state judicial convention of the party just held in that city.

"During the next few years," Dawson said, "taxes will be one of our most important economic problems. It will be a burden that will have to be borne as far as he is able by every citizen of our state. A person who pays taxes in West Virginia has a right not only to see that his taxes are properly applied after he pays them, but that he gets a full dollar's worth of value for every dollar he pays. He has the right to say to those in charge and responsible for the government that they shall be economical, that they shall administer the finances of government soundly.

"It has been my experience that no person objects to paying taxes so long as he receives something of value for them. In my experience as mayor of the city of Charleston, I have found that the people of this community and all other communities are willing to pay taxes for public improvements, things that contribute to the sound government and welfare of the community in which they live and likewise this is true of the state. But I do not think they are willing to pay taxes for the purpose of building up political machines to obtain power for some person who is ambitious politically and who is willing to put on the payroll key politicians for the purpose of building what is called an organization. I have always believed the best politics is efficiency in government, and that the people of this democratic nation will support an executive and party that will guarantee to them full value for their tax money."

Mayor Dawson is quite right in that belief, and it is good to have him give the attention he has to this serious problem. What he says of the West Virginia state government is even more applicable to the national government, and in that application it is unfortunately being purposely buried under defense pleas, but it is, nevertheless, one of the most important and most serious things before the country. It is important in view of the senseless squandering of our means that has gone on for so long and has piled up a mountain of debt the taxpayers will have to discharge some way or other at some time or other.

In view of the conflicting reports from belligerent propaganda bureaus, the man at the next desk thinks that what this war really needs is an official scorer.

Two world wars and depressions, fore, aft and in-between, have finally convinced us that the world's smartest people are the Eskimos.

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser notices in a nostalgic mood that B. M. Bower is dead—and if that name means nothing to you, then he is very, very sorry for you. Because B. M. Bower was a woman who wrote many a wild western story, and she meant much to the Browser when he was a little lad who lived in the West but had never seen an old cowhand, even though he lived less than thirty miles from Salinas, which in those days had not yet decided to commercialize the rodeo.

Marshall Maslin

In that era B. M. Bower's "Chip of the Flying U" was the young Browser's favorite hero, surpassing in nobility and moral excellence and physical achievement even the young heroes of G. A. Henty's masterpieces. (And the Browser has decided to start looking around in the old book stores for copies of those Henty books for his small boy to read some day.) . . He knows nothing about B. M. Bower but her name and the books she used to write. She never did stop writing them until death stayed her hand, but alas! the Browser's taste changed and he began to read Galsworthy and Conrad and W. H. Hudson and then Branch Cabell and Floyd Dell and Carl Van Vechten and Wells and Willa Cather and Aldous Husley and Hemingway and Faulkner and such. He still admires these authors of his maturity but he admits that have never excited him as much as B. M. Bower did. . . O, why is trash so lovely!

But after all such men as Charles Allen Smart are the real writers for us, after we grow up. Mr. Smart is the man who wrote "R. F. D." a year or so ago. He is a bright young man who went to Harvard, went to work for a publisher, then decided ten years ago that what he wanted most to do was work a farm near Chillecothe, Ohio. Although he has written four books he still thinks of himself as a farmer and not as a writer; which is a healthy point of view indeed. His fourth book, which the Browser has before him now, is Rosscommon (Random House), a beautifully written and originally conceived Utopia.

In every age men have tried to create some society in which men may live happily together on the land in small groups, free from the diseases of civilization. In this compact book Smart has told the story of Macdonald whose farm, once the best in the countryside, has gone to ruin until at last it is sold at auction. The evening before that sale Smart and a young boy call on Macdonald and find him burning a great stack of manuscript. It is his story of a golden dream, of a Utopian life which a group of men and women had brought to success on Rosscommon. While he was writing it, the farm itself had gone to pieces and on this last day he has decided that even his story of that adventure was inadequate and deserving only of destruction. But through the long night, urged by Smart, he tells in detail what that farm Utopia was.

Fact and fancy are so cleverly interwoven in the story that one hardly knows which detail is reality and which is the substance of a dream. To some readers, this book may have no more reality than one of the products of B. M. Bower's typewriter, but it is essentially a serious effort on the part of Charles Allen Smart to make man's old dream of a perfect life come true. . . The publishers say on the jacket of the book that they are "proud of it". They should be.

A larger field than a county Utopia is John Strachey's in "A Programme for Progress" (Random House). Mr. Strachey was a Communist, he is still far from being a capitalist but he now makes different deductions from the beliefs he holds. The man who was once forbidden to stay in this country now believes that the genuinely democratic and progressive nations of this world are able to modify capitalism and achieve an economy that will work even in peace time, without recourse to the ghastly refuge of war. . . The Browser frankly admits that some of the reasoning was too rarefied for him, but it seemed sound . . . and that's enough from Marsh Maslin

The fact that the Democratic National Committee took in some $1,200,000 from these operations, as reported by the committee to Congress, did not arouse public indignation so much as did the revelation of the methods used to shake down these corporations.

Well-authenticated stories were put in the Congressional Record showing in 1936 that corporations doing business with the federal government were threatened, intimidated and coerced into signing on the dotted line—or else!

When these sordid stories became public it might have been expected that Mr. Roosevelt would have denounced the whole business—would have rebuked his national committee for engaging in a project which so flagrantly violated the Federal Corrupt Practices act which makes unlawful the giving or taking of contributions by or from corporations in connection with the election of Federal officers.

Blessed by Roosevelt

Mr. Roosevelt, of course, did nothing of the sort. Indeed, he gave the whole unlawful mess his benediction by autographing more than 1,000 of these books so they could be sold again to corporations, this time at the ridiculous price of $250 each. Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly thought he was making the bad corporations pay through the nose for his campaign expenses. How he must have chuckled!

But old John Q. Public, the average man on the street, did not see the joke. He was somewhat outraged at such brazen political immorality. So, when Congress came to revise the Hatch act several months ago it undertook to make unlawful the merchandising of advertising, articles and commodities for the benefit of a political campaign. Mr. Roosevelt professed to favor that legislation—although representatives of his national committee did their best to have it pigeonholed.

Failing to stop the passage of the new law, the representatives of the Democratic National Committee decided to ignore it. They went ahead with plans for the solicitation of advertising for this year's convention book—and Mr. Roosevelt aided and abetted them by holding the bill for eight days on his desk before signing it—until the Democratic national convention was over.

Announcement Ignored Law

But even the signing of the law did not deter the Democratic leaders. They blandly announced that they proposed to proceed with the sale of their convention book. The only difference from 1936 was that this year they proposed to charge only twenty-five cents for it.

Again, did Mr. Roosevelt denounce this flagrant violation of the law? He did not. Wendell Willkie, however, got quick action with a mighty blast about the whole business. Immediately after the Willkie attack, New Deal Attorney General Robert H. Jackson pronounced the Democratic National Committee plan as unlawful. So did Democratic Senator Hatch, author of the legislation prohibiting such undertakings. Some days have passed—but not one word has been heard from the great preacher of "political morality"—Mr. Roosevelt.

It is no wonder that self-respecting Democrats are deserting their party by the tens of thousands to support Wendell Willkie. They are tired of a man who talks one way and acts another.

It Will Not Add Up

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

The administration has inclined favorably from the first to the proposition of turning over more or less obsolete American naval craft to the Allies. Nobody in the administration has come out quite so boldly as has General Pershing or Senator Pepper, but the sentiment has been very strong in this direction.

All of which is difficult to reconcile with executive orders just issued prohibiting the export of aviation gasoline to points outside of the Western Hemisphere—a move made, we are told, "in the interest of national defense."

Europe has taken some 1,076,238 of the 1,164,343 barrels of this fuel shipped out of the country during the first six months of 1940. France took 513,513 barrels, England, 504,196. Germany and Italy bought none.

Unless the plan is to let England obtain aviation gasoline through Canada, and to prevent Germany from obtaining use of French imports, it would appear that while we are anxious to thrust our navy on England, we are unwilling to provide her with fuel for her airplanes. Moreover, if our need is so dire that we cannot spare gasline which can be provided on short notice, what business have we getting rid of fighting ships?

Caboose Goes High Hat

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

Well, well! The caboose that tail-end unit of a freight train, is about to achieve grandeur, after all these years. Though it may still be referred to by veteran railroaders as a crummy, a cage, the clown wagon, the monkey house, the hut, parlor, hack or doghouse, it is about to feel the touch of modernization and go deluxe.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has started it with an order for twenty-five new cabooses that will embody such features as modern refrigerators, running water, a real combination heating and cooking stove, deep-tufted bunks for comfortable rest when the crew isn't otherwise engaged, a cushioning pad to protect the person working at the desk from sudden jerks and bodily injury.

The old-time railroaders, toughened to the discomforts of the hard bunk, smoky stove and water bucket, may consider the new model caboose a hack for "softies" but we have an idea that they won't enter any protest against this effort to make them comfortable and before long may even have some words of praise for it.

We have our doubts, however, whether it will ever be able to shake off some of its affectionately disrespectful sobriquets, even when it becomes as modern as the streamlined passenger car

Rediscovering America

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., News

A travel-loving people whose restless spirit and boundless curiosity once made Europeans gape, is shut off now from its old stamping ground. In any other summer New York and other ports would be jammed with ships of many flags moving thousands of eager Americans toward what they had always imagined to be the supreme experience in travel.

Europe was to American tourists a land of castles and museums, of fabled cities and villages, of gracious innkeepers and quaintly dressed peasants. American tourists were to Europe a race of high-spirited children with a passion for going places and with a talent for easy spending. Where the spending is done now, in a summer when tragic events have closed Europe as a vacation center, is a question that travelers throughout the nation are asking.

Many answered the question by deciding to see their own country; others made steamship reservations to near ports in the Caribbean and to far ports in South America and the Pacific. These regions are benefiting by the diversion of tourist traffic from Europe, while Americans discover that the field of foreign travel is wider than they had imagined.

The splendors of the Great Lakes, where luxurious cruise ships may still ply cold waters without fear of hovering bombers or lurking submarines, is unrolling before a host of summer visitors. Advance booking for the popular seven-day cruises, and for shorter trips as well, far exceed those of any previous year. Consequently, steamship lines and travel agencies in the area are expecting the biggest season in their history.

Odds Go Haywire On All Wagering, Hymie Augen Says

Edwin C. Hill

Mr. Hymie Augen, stuss-dealer emeritus, political railbird for many years, finds it much harder to make a book in this election year than in previous years. He sees new elements of uncertainty and confusion in both national and local politics. Naturally, his outlook is somewhat parochial, conditioned, perhaps, more by the Red Hook than the Washington viewpoint, but Mr. Augen reads the papers and makes remote and irrelevant matters somehow fit into larger patterns patterns if you just give him time.

I am afraid he would have become tiresomely didactic if he had had more formal training in the art of off-hand discourse. When he drops in to spill something about the state of the nation, he always talks standing up, resting his right foot on the rung of a chair. The chair rung obviously is a substitute for a brass-rail. I have known several brass-rail philosophers who could not talk sitting down, any more than a horse could kick if you tied his ears forward. Didn't Dr. Holmes write a brief monograph on something like that?

Nearly Fought

"I like this Vosnick. This is a free country and down at Ryan's poolroom last Saturday night I started touting Vosnick and I almost had a fight on my hands," said Mr. Augen. "Some big hug said he wouldn't stand around and hear anybody making dirty cracks about Medwick, and then some others began yelling about Reese and Camilli and Lavagetto until they almost had to call the cops. I was lucky I didn't get a bust on the conk with a billiard cue. See what I mean?"

"No, I don't," I answered. "You sound off about this tricky election year, and then you ramble off on a poolroom brawl about ball-players. If that means anything, I'm Ducky Medwick."

Picture Suggested

"I suppose I'll have to draw a picture for you, or show you something in a book or maybe pull some affidavits on you," said Mr. Augen wearily. "I don't see how you mugs ever get out a newspaper the way everything has to be spelled out for you.

"Listen, do you think for a minute that the public can keep its mind on politics when Brooklyn is winning ballgames and has a chance to snag a pennant? You ought to know better than that. I was just going to say, when you flagged me down, that after we got through this brawling match about Vosnick, etc., a little runt that looked like he was looking for trouble tried to kick up an argument about politics and nobody would give him a tumble.

"He said this and that big-time politician was just a heel and a low-down body-snatcher and a porch-climber and one thing and another and nobody was listening. This runt blew himself through a tin horn and finally got so mad he was pasting both Roosevelt and Willkie at the same time and everybody just let him make his own ticket. All they was worrying about was the Dodgers.

Nothing Like It Was

"What I mean is, politics this year is just like a deck with two jokers and everything wild. You can make a book on a campaign where everything is running along just like it was. These days nothing ain't like it was. A year ago you wouldn't of bet on Brooklyn winning a pennant any more than you would on a man with a wooden leg winning the six-day bicycle race. You wouldn't of bet on this Stalin and Hitler going into a waltz after they had been telling for years how they would gouge each other's eyes out and knock their teeth down their throat, etc. You wouldn't of bet on France being a pushover for this Hitler, who everybody said for years was just punk and you couldn't of put a dime on this added starter Willkie, who had never been figured anywhere by any handicapper.

"Brokers are smarter than crap-shooters or horse-players. Anyway they ought to be. Most of them went to college. What do they do? They just sit out this war and election. The public is that way, too. When everything is haywire, it ain't safe to figure odds. You might even pick up a paper some day and read that Fainting Phil Scott had come back over here and knocked Joe Louis horizontal. — Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Love without Music

by Helen Welshimer

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

LINDA had to wait a long time before her call to Robert's club was answered. Finally a sleepy servitor murmured the name of the association and waited.

"May I speak to Mr. Barton, Mr. Robert Barton?" she asked. "He may be there. He's taking a late train upstate tonight."

The sleepy voice became awake. "Yes, Miss, he's here. You're Miss Trent, aren't you? He said he was expecting a call and it was important. Wait, I'll get him."

The man did not give her a chance to say that she was not Billie Anne, and in another moment she heard Robert's eager tones, calling her by another girl's name.

She did not answer. She knew that her voice would break if she should try.

Instead she hung up and buried her face in the pillows. Sob after sob shook her slender body. Maybe this was a good thing, she tried to reason. She would cry it all out now—all the disappointment and heartbreak—and go dry-eyed forever.

The next day was hot. The thin white linen dress she wore seemed to cling to her and her amber curls, instead of staying in the even rows in which she had trained them, spun all over her head. Her eyes were a clear, cool green. She was methodical and orderly and worked rapidly.

About noon Mr. Bagley came out of his office bringing a noted photographer with him. They eyed Linda critically. Her employer explained: "This is Mr. Harrison, as you know, Linda. He has to supply a whole series of pictures for a fashion magazine — the girl in everything from a bathing suit and negligee to an evening gown. It's to be a honeymoon outfit. And he likes your looks. Want to try it?"

Anything was better than sitting at a desk, answering a white ivory telephone which rang with every kind of business engagement and nothing else, ever.

"Hortense will take over for you," Mr. Bagley said.

Linda got her turban, which was made from the same crushed linen as the dress, and went with the photographer. It was odd that he had come down to talk over models. Usually artists and illustrators and advertisers alike had the agency send out one whom the director thought acceptable, or at the best, a few from whom to choose.

She spent the afternoon in the studio, posing in one outfit after another. She told herself that the whole set-up was slightly ironical. Here she was, going to move to a woman's club, and she was asked to be a magazine bride.

She did not go to the office the next day, either, for the pictures were not completed until dusk. When she sat down at her desk the third day Hortense said:

"There's a telephone message for you somewhere. Long distance. The operator tried to call you twice. Now where did I put it?"

She searched the desk, but the scrap of paper did not appear.

"When did the call come in?" Linda asked. Was it yesterday? Was it the afternoon before? And from whom had it come? She told herself that it was an unimportant message, but she dared to hope, as women have always hoped, that Robert had tried to reach her.

And yet, why should he? He had said goodby, definitely, and had gone away. He had no way of knowing that she had tried to reach him.

She spent the afternoon in the studio, posing in one outfit after another.

The message could not be found, so Hortense gave up at last and went back to her desk. A few minutes later some of the pictures of Linda came in. She looked at herself, serene and cool, in the borrowed finery. No one ever would know that that girl had wanted something she could not have.

Maybe life was like that, asking you to take a pose and keep it, to wear a mask all of your days, so other people would think that you were happy and contented.

Whatever the message was, if it were important it would be found, or the party would call again, she reminded herself.

That night she moved out of the apartment, into the hotel for women. She left no farwarding address. Instead, she notified the postoffice where to send her mail.

When you closed a door it was best to lock it. Forever. And throw away the key.

But during the days that followed, now and then she wondered why Billie Anne had called Robert twice that evening. There had been a call for Robert from her at police headquarters and another when he had been at the club later that night.

Quietly one evening Ronald and Sarah slipped away to be married and take a boat southward. Linda read about it in the newspapers.

Hortense expressed startled indignation. "He's yours. You can't let that glamor whosit march him off. Why don't you do something?"

"He isn't mine," Linda answered. "That's all washed up. He and Sarah are right for each other."

"And what about you? Going to stay here and model clothes when you get a chance and answer the telephone and make out the bills the rest of the time? Thought about that?"

"Oh, I'll get along." (I'll get along without Robert. I'll get up every morning at eight o'clock, join the subway procession at half-past eight, and sit down at a desk at nine. And all of the time I'll be wondering why things didn't work on a better schedule. But I'll get along!)

Later in the day word came that some of the group of fashion pictures were to be used in a photogravure display in a daily paper and Linda received another modeling assignment.

She was weary when she left the office that night. She bought a paper, noticed that a jury was being chosen and a date selected for the Nevins trial, and read that Mina was pleading insanity. It was true, too. The actress' sanity had been doubted for a long time by Robert. She realized she and Robert would be subpenaed as witnesses. Well, anyway, she would get to see him. She would have one long last look at the browned face, the far-seeing eyes, the mouth that curved into laughter. She would put it away, then, and not look at the picture until it was too old to hurt.

For a girl named Billie Anne Trent was the winner now.

If she hadn't gone into the drug store at the club for a late milk shake, she would not have glanced over someone's shoulder at a headline in a paper. And if she had not seen it, she would have gone upstairs to sleep in her chintz and maple room, instead of staring wide-eyed at the headlines.

But one thought ran through her mind. Were newspapers always, always going to upset her life? Would they forever bring the news?

Then she was hurrying toward the elevators with only one thought in her mind. She must pack a bag and leave. Quickly.

THE DAILY STORY

SHAMUS DHOO

He Was Only a Wandering Man of the Road but for the Sake of the Widow He Could Be a Master Strategist

BY MARTIN ROWAN

"They tell me that Shamus Dhoo the tinker, was arrested about sunset for not having a light on his cart," said Mickey Nellie, as he joined the company in Andy Joe's house in Ballycladdy. "It will be hard on the poor man."

"He deserves it," said Michael Doogan. "That's not the first time for Shamus Dhoo to be in trouble. It is often before he has had scrapes with the law."

"I always likes Shamus Dhoo myself," said Andy Joe. "It is many the good turn I have seen him do for people right here in Ballycladdy, and he did not expect no payment for it , either."

"When a man is breaking the law, Andy Joe, it is how he must expect the trouble to be on him all his life," said Michael Doogan. "It is what I'd like to know is why do Shamus Dhoo be doing the tricks that do put him in the trouble? It is not for want of knewledge he does do those things."

"There are few more brilliant men walking the roads of Ireland, or, for that matter, sitting in their studies in educational institutions today than Shamus Dhoo," said the Druid. "That mas is a scholar of great ability."

"I thought you were a policeman."

"Musha! It is how he should be ashamed of himself, then," said Michael Doogan. "A man who cannot make no better use of education than making tin saucpans and peddling them along the bohreens of Ireland for tuppence apiece does not have much to be proud of."

"The reason for Shamus Dhoo being a man of the road is something we will not talk about at this time," said Andy Joe.

"You are right, Andy," said the Druid. "The time has not come to tell that story."

"It must be a mean man who do always be against the law, just the same," said Michael Doogan.

"It is not so much that Shamus Dhoo is against the law as that he gets amusement out of matching wits with the police. His law breaking at worst should be called prankish rather than harmful."

"But see what Shamus Dhoo did to the District Inspector about 10 years ago," said Michael Doogan. "Isn't it how he nearly destroyed the man?"

"What was that, Thady?" asked Michael Burke, the schoolmaster.

"That happened a long time before you came to Ballycladdy, Michael," said the Druid. "There was a district inspector of police stationed in Hungry Hill at the time. It was apparent that he felt that the fate of the empire rested entirely on his own shoulders, for he punished the slightest infraction of the law.

"At that time a few of the more destitute residents of Ballycladdy were endeavoring to turn a dishonest penny by making potcheen. There was a widow on Thirsty Top who had been caught in that noble Arabian art of distilling on two occasions and given a stiff fine. That, however, was before the advent of District Inspector Simpson to Hungry Hill.

"One day Inspector Simpson entered the Widow Wallace's cabin on Thirsty Top. He posed as a buyer of cattle who had attended the Ballycaddy Fair the day previous. He asked for refreshments. The widow brought him a glass of water.

"'Now! Now! My good woman,' said the inspector. 'You know it is a good drink of potcheen that I want instead. It is often before I got it here when I came in from the fair with the other jobbers.'

"'It is how I thought you were a policeman,' said the widow.

"The inspector laughed. 'Have no fear of that, my dear lady. A quart of potcheen it is and no more talk about the law.'

"Well, the poor widow brought out the potcheen, sold it to the inspector, who immediately placed her under arrest, took the liquor along for evidence and placed her in the local barracks. She stayed there for a whole day before bail could be furnished to get her out.

"That evening Inspector Simpson caught up with Shamus Dhoo on the road. He told Shamus about the great piece of work he had done and how it would go hard with the widow as it was her third offense.

"Shamus Dhoo said nothing. Inspector Simpson and the tinker entered a public house in Mulranny to buy a legitimate drink of whiskey. Just as soon as the inspector finished his drink, for some reason, which only Shamus knew, he fell sound asleep.

"Shamus Dhoo took the quart of the widow's potcheen out of the inspector's pocket, drilled a hole in the bottom (as the inspector had his own private seal on it) and drained the potcheen out into another bottle. He refilled the first bottle with clear spring water and sealed the hole in the bottom with solder.

"When the trial came off at the Castlebar Assizes the seal was broken on the widow's bottle. When it was found it held only water the widow was released and District Inspector Simpson became the laughhing stock of the community."

"Long life to Shamus Dhoo," said Mickey Nellie.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate.

She spent the afternoon in the studio, posing in one outfit after another. She told herself that the whole set-up was slightly ironical. Here she was, going to move to a woman's club, and she was asked to be a magazine bride.

She did not go to the office the next day, either, for the pictures were not completed until dusk. When she sat down at her desk the third day Hortense said:

"There's a telephone message for you somewhere. Long distance. The operator tried to call you twice. Now where did I put it?"

She searched the desk, but the scrap of paper did not appear.

"When did the call come in?" Linda asked. Was it yesterday? Was it the afternoon before? And from whom had it come? She told herself that it was an unimportant message, but she dared to hope, as women have always hoped, that Robert had tried to reach her.

And yet, why should he? He had said goodby, definitely, and had gone away. He had no way of knowing that she had tried to reach him.

She spent the afternoon in the studio, posing in one outfit after another.

The message could not be found, so Hortense gave up at last and went back to her desk. A few minutes later some of the pictures of Linda came in. She looked at herself, serene and cool, in the borrowed finery. No one ever would know that that girl had wanted something she could not have.

Maybe life was like that, asking you to take a pose and keep it, to wear a mask all of your days, so other people would think that you were happy and contented.

Whatever the message was, if it were important it would be found, or the party would call again, she reminded herself.

That night she moved out of the apartment, into the hotel for women. She left no farwarding address. Instead, she notified the postoffice where to send her mail.

When you closed a door it was best to lock it. Forever. And throw away the key.

But during the days that followed, now and then she wondered why Billie Anne had called Robert twice that evening. There had been a call for Robert from her at police headquarters and another when he had been at the club later that night.

Quietly one evening Ronald and Sarah slipped away to be married and take a boat southward. Linda read about it in the newspapers.

Hortense expressed startled indignation. "He's yours. You can't let that glamor whosit march him off. Why don't you do something?"

"He isn't mine," Linda answered. "That's all washed up. He and Sarah are right for each other."

"And what about you? Going to stay here and model clothes when you get a chance and answer the telephone and make out the bills the rest of the time? Thought about that?"

"Oh, I'll get along." (I'll get along without Robert. I'll get up every morning at eight o'clock, join the subway procession at half-past eight, and sit down at a desk at nine. And all of the time I'll be wondering why things didn't work on a better schedule. But I'll get along!)

Later in the day word came that some of the group of fashion pictures were to be used in a photogravure display in a daily paper and Linda received another modeling assignment.

She was weary when she left the office that night. She bought a paper, noticed that a jury was being chosen and a date selected for the Nevins trial, and read that Mina was pleading insanity. It was true, too. The actress' sanity had been doubted for a long time by Robert. She realized she and Robert would be subpenaed as witnesses. Well, anyway, she would get to see him. She would have one long last look at the browned face, the far-seeing eyes, the mouth that curved into laughter. She would put it away, then, and not look at the picture until it was too old to hurt.

For a girl named Billie Anne Trent was the winner now.

If she hadn't gone into the drug store at the club for a late milk shake, she would not have glanced over someone's shoulder at a headline in a paper. And if she had not seen it, she would have gone upstairs to sleep in her chintz and maple room, instead of staring wide-eyed at the headlines.

But one thought ran through her mind. Were newspapers always, always going to upset her life? Would they forever bring the news?

Then she was hurrying toward the elevators with only one thought in her mind. She must pack a bag and leave. Quickly.

THE DAILY STORY

SHAMUS DHOO

He Was Only a Wandering Man of the Road but for the Sake of the Widow He Could Be a Master Strategist

BY MARTIN ROWAN

"They tell me that Shamus Dhoo the tinker, was arrested about sunset for not having a light on his cart," said Mickey Neille, as he joined the company in Andy Joe's house in Ballycladdy. "It will be hard on the poor man."

"He deserves it," said Michael Doogan. "That's not the first time for Shamus Dhoo to be in trouble. It is often before he has had scrapes with the law."

"I always likes Shamus Dhoo myself," said Andy Joe. "It is many the good turn I have seen him do for people right here in Ballycladdy, and he did not expect no payment for it, either."

"When a man is breaking the law, Andy Joe, it is how he must expect the trouble to be on him all his life," said Michael Doogan. "It is what I'd like to know is why do Shamus Dhoo be doing the tricks that do put him in the trouble? It is not for want of knewledge he does do those things."

"There are few more brilliant men walking the roads of Ireland, or, for that matter, sitting in their studies in educational institutions today than Shamus Dhoo," said the Druid. "That mas is a scholar of great ability."

"Musha! It is how he should be ashamed of himself, then," said Michael Doogan. "A man who cannot make no better use of education than making tin saucpans and peddling them along the bohreens of Ireland for tuppence apiece does not have much to be proud of."

"The reason for Shamus Dhoo being a man of the road is something we will not talk about at this time," said Andy Joe.

"You are right, Andy," said the Druid. "The time has not come to tell that story."

"It must be a mean man who do always be against the law, just the same," said Michael Doogan.

"It is not so much that Shamus Dhoo is against the law as that he gets amusement out of matching wits with the police. His law breaking at worst should be called prankish rather than harmful."

"But see what Shamus Dhoo did to the District Inspector about 10 years ago," said Michael Doogan. "Isn't it how he nearly destroyed the man?"

"What was that, Thady?" asked Michael Burke, the schoolmaster.

"That happened a long time before you came to Ballycladdy, Michael," said the Druid. "There was a district inspector of police stationed in Hungry Hill at the time. It was apparent that he felt that the fate of the empire rested entirely on his own shoulders, for he punished the slightest infraction of the law.

"At that time a few of the more destitute residents of Ballycladdy were endeavoring to turn a dishonest penny by making potcheen. There was a widow on Thirsty Top who had been caught in that noble Arabian art of distilling on two occasions and given a stiff fine. That, however, was before the advent of District Inspector Simpson to Hungry Hill.

"One day Inspector Simpson entered the Widow Wallace's cabin on Thirsty Top. He posed as a buyer of cattle who had attended the Ballycaddy Fair the day previous. He asked for refreshments. The widow brought him a glass of water.

"'Now! Now! My good woman,' said the inspector. 'You know it is a good drink of potcheen that I want instead. It is often before I got it here when I came in from the fair with the other jobbers.'

"'It is how I thought you were a policeman,' said the widow.

"The inspector laughed. 'Have no fear of that, my dear lady. A quart of potcheen it is and no more talk about the law.'

"Well, the poor widow brought out the potcheen, sold it to the inspector, who immediately placed her under arrest, took the liquor along for evidence and placed her in the local barracks. She stayed there for a whole day before bail could be furnished to get her out.

"That evening Inspector Simpson caught up with Shamus Dhoo on the road. He told Shamus about the great piece of work he had done and how it would go hard with the widow as it was her third offense.

"Shamus Dhoo said nothing. Inspector Simpson and the tinker entered a public house in Mulranny to buy a legitimate drink of whiskey. Just as soon as the inspector finished his drink, for some reason, which only Shamus knew, he fell sound asleep.

"Shamus Dhoo took the quart of the widow's potcheen out of the inspector's pocket, drilled a hole in the bottom (as the inspector had his own private seal on it) and drained the potcheen out into another bottle. He refilled the first bottle with clear spring water and sealed the hole in the bottom with solder.

"When the trial came off at the Castlebar Assizes the seal was broken on the widow's bottle. When it was found it held only water the widow was released and District Inspector Simpson became the laughhing stock of the community."

"Long life to Shamus Dhoo," said Mickey Nellie.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate.

"I thought you were a policeman."

Foster Parents On Increase in United States

Emphasis Has Shifted from Institutional Care to Normal Home for Tots

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

With thousands of refugee European children headed for Canada and the United States, the problem of the foster parent is increasing.

Independent of the war, foster parenthood has been growing rapidly in the United States. In recent years child caring (welfare) agencies have been shifting emphasis from institutional care of the homeless child to his care in normal homes and families.

The demand for foster homes for delinquent and dependent children has been growing rapidly during the past few years, much greater than the supply. In some cities there has been a strong effort by the welfare federation to stimulate greater readiness among married pairs to provide homes for homeless children. It should be observed that most of the children for whom foster homes are desired are not delinquent or destitute children, or children whose homes are considered by the court as unfit for them.

Boarding Parents

Some parents and childless married couples obligate themselves to become foster parents without pay. Others receive a nominal hum for board, henced called "boarding parents." Sometimes the foster parents desire to adopt the child after they have had him in their home for some while.

It is the practice of the child caring agency to check carefully upon the home before placing the child in it, as a temporary home or for adoption. Unless or until the child is adopted, the agency keeps in touch with the foster home and exercising general supervision over the child.

During a forum discussion with 450 foster mothers of Allegheny county, at Pittsburgh, some months ago, I learned that some parents or childless couples serve as foster parents of one or several children for years and report great personal satisfaction with the undertaking.

This was a kind of "experience meeting" in which many foster parents told of the children they had mothered who turned out well and developed into good, useful citizens. As I said to the audience, I hardly know when I ever stood before so many unselfish souls. They are doing more good than they will ever know.

Modern Challenge

Refugee children offer a peculiar challenge today. Making a home for them may, however, carry with it a greater obligation than that of being foster parents to children in the immediate community.

The average refugee child has been unaccustomed to so much luxury and freedom as our native children and there will be a strong temptation of some who mother these children to be over-indulgent toward them. Some will fail to train these children in self-reliance, self-sacrifice and responsibility.

Then there is the problem of relatives and neighbors who, with a kind of morbid curiousity, will want to know all the details about the child's experiences incident to the war.

Let them mind their own business. Refuse to discuss such matters with them, especially in the child's presence. Don't allow them to "pump" the child. Try to act toward this child as toward any other normal child. The more you can help him forget his tragic past the better.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. How long should an infant sleep in each 24 hours?

A. From birth to four months, practically all the time when not being fed and bathed; from 5 months to 1 year, 16 to 18 hours; from 1 to 2 years, 14 to 16 hours; from 2 to 4 years, 13 to 14 hours; 4 to 6 years, 12 to 13 hours.

Q. Suppose the grandmother, mother or neighbor recognizes clear symptoms of measles, or chicken pox, or the like developing in the child, and does not call the doctor so the family won't be quarantined, even though they quarantine themselves?

A. In the first place, her "diagnosis" might be wholly wrong and, on that account, the child might lose his life. Then, if she is right, the child's life and future health may be endangered. These children's diseases are treacherous; all too many children stoll die from them. But almost none do whenre the child is under proper medical care early enough. Here let me plead with parents whose children of any age who have recovered from one of the infectious or contagious diseases to keep in touch with your doctor, and have him check the child thoroughly every month or so for the next several months.

Girdle-Waisted Jumper Style

Marian Martin
PATTERN 9495

What is the all-time favorite in schoolgirl style? The jumper, of course! Marian Martin offers a new version of this old favorite in Pattern 9495—the pinafore influence in a tailored jumper. First, there's a back buttoning that opens to below the waistline, eliminating any need for a side placket. Then there's the pointed front girdle that makes your waist look really tiny. The huge pockets are optional but very smart. A crisp long or short sleeved blouse is included in the pattern—wouldn't it be gay with a bright cravat tie? This style is very simple to make under the Sew Chart's directions!

Pattern 9495 may be ordered only in junior miss sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17. Size 13, jumper, requires 2⅝ yards 35 inch fabric and blouse, 1⅛ yards contrast.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin patern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

Your Fashion Future is in the new Marian Martin pattern book. . . . just off the press. A brilliant forecast of Fall and Winter, with stunning costumes for every age and type. There are pages of "good black dresses" . . . gay "party lines" for evening . . . a college wardrobe line-up . . . youngster school and dress-up modes. You'll see slimming forty-plus frocks, North and South sports clothes and many tailored suits and dresses. Order your copy now. Book fifteen cents. Pattern fifteen cents. Too Much Shooting In Frederick County

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 16 (AP) — Roving hunters who unthinkingly take pot shots at tin cans, sign posts and other handy targets have finally got the Frederick county sheriff's office up in arms.

It was bad enough, Deputy Sheriff Horace M. Alexander said, when residents reported thoughtless gunners had shot their mail boxes so full of holes "they looked like sieves."

But when a fisherman at Buckeystown dam reported a stray bullet knocked his fishing rod out of his hands, the sheriff decided it was time to act.

"Anyone caught shooting rifles along righways or along creeks, rivers or streams will be prosecuted," Alexander warned. In addition, their guns will be confiscated, the officer declared.

Frederick residents said they docked their boats along county streams at night and returned the next morning to find the craft full of water with the bottoms peppered with shot.

$250,000 Advertising Campaign for Army

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP) — Preparations to accelerate further the army's drive for volunteer recruits—already coming in at the record rate of more than 1,000 a day—were announced today by War Department officials.

A Philadelphia concern was put in charge of a $250,000 advertising campaign to reinforce recruiting methods already being employed with the aim of expanding the regular army's enlisted strength to its full authorized limit of 375,000 by January 1.

Rep. Cole Guest at Rally at Taneytown

TANEYTOWN, Md., Aug. 16 (AP) — The Carroll county fair's "political night" program wound up here as an unprogrammed rally for Rep. William P. Cole (D-Md).

Cole was the only one of four invited political leaders who showed up.

The two Republicans who got invitations—former Gov. Harry W. Nice and Theodore S. Brown, Westminster Congressional candidate—were enroute to Indiana for the Willkie notification ceremonies. The other Democrat, Senator George L. Radcliffe, was not immediately accounted for by fair officials.

Cole, with the platform to himself, told the crowd it was a "relief" to get away from the tribulations of Washington and attend a county fair.

"In no other place on the face of the earth could we have a gathering like this," he commented, adding that Congress was seeking to "perpetuate those traditions and those ideals on which this country has thrived.

Committee Changes Excess Profits Tax

WASHINGTON, Aug., 16 (AP)—The House Ways and Means Committee has made a change in the proposed excess profits tax which, treasury experts later informed the legislators, would reduce the levy's yield for 1940 from $190,000,000 to $107,000,000.

The basic idea of the legislation is to apply a tax on part of the profits which are in excess of a concern's average earnings during a base period in the past. Originally, a sub-committee decided to make this base period the four years 1936—1939, exclusive.

Today the full committee decided to let each corporation select, as its base, the three of those years in which it had its best earnings. The elimination of the worst year would increase—in most cases—the amount of income exempt from the profits tax.

When the treasury estimate of the $83,000,000 revenue loss was received, some committee members talked of moving to reverse the decision but action was delayed until tomorrow.

Former Baseball Star Declared a Suicide

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16 (AP) —A coroner's jury returned a verdict of "suicide by firearms" today in the death of Charles J. Hollocher, 43-year old former star shortstop and captain of the Chicago Cubs, who was found shot to death near his suburban home here yesterday.

A new sixteen-gauge shotgun was found near the body.

A star with the Cubs from 1918 until 1923 when ill health forced his retirement from baseball, Hollacher is survived by his widow and one daughter.

Marian Martin

What is the all-time favorite in schoolgirl style? The jumper, of course! Marian Martin offers a new version of this old favorite in Pattern 9495—the pinafore influence in a tailored jumper. First, there's a back buttoning that opens to below the waistline, eliminating any need for a side placket. Then there's the pointed front girdle that makes your waist look really tiny. The huge pockets are optional but very smart. A crisp long or short sleeved blouse is included in the pattern—wouldn't it be gay with a bright cravat tie? This style is very simple to make under the Sew Chart's directions!

Pattern 9495 may be ordered only in junior miss sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17. Size 13, jumper, requires 2⅝ yards 35 inch fabric and blouse, 1⅛ yards contrast.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin patern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

Your Fashion Future is in the new Marian Martin pattern book. . . . just off the press. A brilliant forecast of Fall and Winter, with stunning costumes for every age and type. There are pages of "good black dresses" . . . gay "party lines" for evening . . . a college wardrobe line-up . . . youngster school and dress-up modes. You'll see slimming forty-plus frocks, North and South sports clothes and many tailored suits and dresses. Order your copy now. Book fifteen cents. Pattern fifteen cents. Book and pattern together, twenty-five cents.

Too Much Shooting in Frederick County

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 16 (AP) — Roving hunters who unthinkingly take pot shots at tin cans, sign posts and other handy targets have finally got the Frederick county sheriff's office up in arms.

It was bad enough, Deputy Sheriff Horace M. Alexander said, when residents reported thoughtless gunners had shot their mail boxes so full of holes "they looked like sieves."

But when a fisherman at Buckeystown dam reported a stray bullet knocked his fishing rod out of his hands, the sheriff decided it was time to act.

"Anyone caught shooting rifles along righways or along creeks, rivers or streams will be prosecuted," Alexander warned. In addition, their guns will be confiscated, the officer declared.

Frederick residents said they docked their boats along county streams at night and returned the next morning to find the craft full of water with the bottoms peppered with shot.

$250,000 Advertising Campaign for Army

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP) — Preparations to accelerate further the army's drive for volunteer recruits—already coming in at the record rate of more than 1,000 a day—were announced today by War Department officials.

A Philadelphia concern was put in charge of a $250,000 advertising campaign to reinforce recruiting methods already being employed with the aim of expanding the regular army's enlisted strength to its full authorized limit of 375,000 by January 1.

Laura Wheeler Designs a Patch Quilt that Is Easy To Cut

Every quiltmaker will love this favorite, Magnolia. With most of the patches the same width, you can cut the material in strips, and snip off the pieces as needed. Pattern 2592 contains accurate pattern pieces; diagram of block; instructions for making quilt; yardages; diagram of quilt.

Send ten cents in coin for this pattern to The Cumberland News, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

Rep. Cole Guest at Rally at Taneytown

TANEYTOWN, Md., Aug. 16 (AP) — The Carroll county fair's "political night" program wound up here as an unprogrammed rally for Rep. William P. Cole (D-Md).

Cole was the only one of four invited political leaders who showed up.

The two Republicans who got invitations—former Gov. Harry W. Nice and Theodore S. Brown, Westminster Congressional candidate—were enroute to Indiana for the Willkie notification ceremonies. The other Democrat, Senator George L. Radcliffe, was not immediately accounted for by fair officials.

Cole, with the platform to himself, told the crowd it was a "relief" to get away from the tribulations of Washington and attend a county fair.

"In no other place on the face of the earth could we have a gathering like this," he commented, adding that Congress was seeking to "perpetuate those traditions and those ideals on which this country has thrived.

Committee Changes Excess Profits Tax

WASHINGTON, Aug., 16 (AP)—The House Ways and Means Committee has made a change in the proposed excess profits tax which, treasury experts later informed the legislators, would reduce the levy's yield for 1940 from $190,000,000 to $107,000,000.

The basic idea of the legislation is to apply a tax on part of the profits which are in excess of a concern's average earnings during a base period in the past. Originally, a sub-committee decided to make this base period the four years 1936—1939, exclusive.

Today the full committee decided to let each corporation select, as its base, the three of those years in which it had its best earnings. The elimination of the worst year would increase—in most cases—the amount of income exempt from the profits tax.

When the treasury estimate of the $83,000,000 revenue loss was received, some committee members talked of moving to reverse the decision but action was delayed until tomorrow.

Former Baseball Star Declared a Suicide

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16 (AP) —A coroner's jury returned a verdict of "suicide by firearms" today in the death of Charles J. Hollocher, 43-year old former star shortstop and captain of the Chicago Cubs, who was found shot to death near his suburban home here yesterday.

A new sixteen-gauge shotgun was found near the body.

A star with the Cubs from 1918 until 1923 when ill health forced his retirement from baseball, Hollacher is survived by his widow and one daughter.

God's Care of His People

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Psalm 23.

By Alfred J. Buescher

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters."

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil."

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; Thou anointest my head with oil."

"And I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." (GOLDEN TEXT—Ps. 23:1)

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 8-17

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Aug. 18 is Psalm 23, the Golden Text being Psalm 23:1, "Jehovah is my shepherd; I shall not want.")

THE PSALM which is the subject of today's lesson is short, but it is probably the best known and loved of all the psalms. It has no date. Some put it early in David's life, some place it late. It might have been written about 1040 B C. David lived through most of the 11th century.

Let us read it over and then talk about it.

"Jehovah is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures:
He leadeth me beside still waters.
He restoreth my soul:
He guideth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me;
Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies;
Thou anointest my head with oil;
My cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and loving-kindness shall follow me all the days of my life;
And I shall dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

"Jehovah is my shepherd." The Jews were a pastoral people, and shepherds guarded their flocks with their lives, if necessary. Therefore, there was no higher conception of tender care and watchfulness over those in his charge, than that of the shepherd and his flock. A shepherd saw that his charges had the best of pasture available, that they had water, that they had a place to rest; and if one was lost, the shepherd sought for it until it was found and restored to the flock.

Trust in the Lord

Thus does Jehovah watch over His people. If we but trust in Him, we, too, shall be taken care of—led to green pastures beside still waters, our souls restored when they are weary.

We shall be led into paths of righteousness — not wickedness. And even if we are compelled to walk "through the valley of the shadow of death"—which we all must do some time in our lives—we should "fear no evil," for our God is with us; His rod and His staff shall comfort us—again symbols of the shepherd, for each shepherd carries a staff to lean upon and to touch the sheep with, and a rod with which he could strike down a wild beast that threatened his sheep.

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies." We all have enemies—evil thoughts that would lead us astray, temptations of many kinds that beset us and to which we may give way. But if we turn to Jehovah, our Shepherd, we will not turn from the paths of righteousness, but feast in the presence of these same enemies, and grow strong to withstand all such assaults.

Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over."

Anointing the head of a guest with sweet-smelling oil was an old Oriental custom. Do you remember when the woman anointed Jesus' head with precious ointment in the house of Simon? Jesus' host expostulated, and Jesus rebuked him, saying, "My head with oil thou didst not anoint." Simon had not treated the Lord as an honored guest, and had no right to reprove the woman who recognized her Savior.

Our cup of joy, therefore, is running over, because of our sureness of God's tender care.

And last, we must have faith that we shall be taken care of in the future—no matter what happens. "Surely goodness and loving kindness shall follow me all the days of my life; and I shall dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

How many of us can rely confidently on this promise in these troubled times? Surely the Lord has not failed us. We can still trust in Him and be serene even as "the old order changeth," and we fear for the future of thousands of the human race.

Surely we can have faith that we shall "dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Aug. 18 is Psalm 23, the Golden Text being Psalm 23:1, "Jehovah is my shepherd; I shall not want.")

THE PSALM which is the subject of today's lesson is short, but it is probably the best known and loved of all the psalms. It has no date. Some put it early in David's life, some place it late. It might have been written about 1040 B C David lived through most of the 11th century.

Let us read it over and then talk about it.

"Jehovah is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures;
He leadeth me beside still waters.
He restoreth my soul:
He guideth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me;
Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies;
Thou anointest my head with oil;
My cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and loving-kindness shall follow me all the days of my life;
And I shall dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

"Jehovah is my shepherd." The Jews were a pastoral people, and shepherds guarded their flocks with their lives, if necessary. Therefore, there was no higher conception of tender care and watchfulness over those in his charge, than that of the shepherd and his flock. A shepherd saw that his charges had the best of pasture available, that they had water, that they had a place to rest; and if one was lost, the shepherd sought for it until it was found and restored to the flock.

Trust in the Lord

Thus does Jehovah watch over His people. If we but trust in Him, we, too, shall be taken care of—led to green pastures beside still waters, our souls restored when they are weary.

We shall be led into paths of righteousness — not wickedness. And even if we are compelled to walk "through the valley of the shadow of death"—which we all must do some time in our lives—we should "fear no evil," for our God is with us; His rod and His staff shall comfort us—again symbols of the shepherd, for each shepherd carries a staff to lean upon and to touch the sheep with, and a rod with which he could strike down a wild beast that threatened his sheep.

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies." We all have enemies—evil thoughts that would lead us astray; temptations of many kinds that beset us and to which we may give way. But if we turn to Jehovah, our Shepherd, we will not turn from the paths of righteousness, but feast in the presence of these same enemies, and grow strong to withstand all such assaults.

Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over."

Anointing the head of a guest with sweet-smelling oil was an old Oriental custom. Do you remember when the woman anointed Jesus' head with precious ointment in the house of Simon? Jesus' host expostulated, and Jesus rebuked him, saying, "My head with oil thou didst not anoint." Simon had not treated the Lord as an honored guest, and had no right to reprove the woman who recognized her Savior.

Our cup of joy, therefore, is running over, because of our sureness of God's tender care.

And last, we must have faith that we shall be taken care of in the future—no matter what happens. "Surely goodness and loving kindness shall follow me all the days of my life; and I shall dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

How many of us can rely confidently on this promise in these troubled times? Surely the Lord has not failed us. We can still trust in Him and be serene even as "the old order changeth," and we fear for the future of thousands of the human race.

Surely we can have faith that we shall "dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

Mrs. Thomas Rennie spent Wednesday visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alex Rennie, Lonaconing.

Roy Morton returned to New Jersey after spending a week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Morton.

Miss Erma Barber spent several days visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Willets, LaVale.

Aid Society Has Chicken Dinner

MIDLAND, Aug. 16—The Ladies Aid Society of Grace Methodist church held its regular meeting Wednesday evening at the farm home of Charles Layman with a chicken dinner. Thirty-four members were in attendance. After the dinner the business session was held followed by group singing and an impromptu program. Plans were made for the Society's annual supper to be held on September 26 in the Firemen's Hall.

Annual Picnic

The annual picnic of the Grace Methodist Sunday School will be held at the Celanese picnic grounds August 22. Buses will leave Midland, from in front of Ash's store, at 10 a. m. A bus will also be in Gilmore at the same time to get the picnicers from that vicinity. Not only are members of the Sunday school invited but any member of the church can also attend.

Personals

Eleven members of the Sub Deb Club, Lonaconing, are vacationing at the camp of Dr. Henry Hodgson at Green Spring. Elaine Ort, Midland, is among those attending.

Mrs. John L. Ort has returned to her home after a week's trip in New York state motoring around the Finger Lakes. Mrs. Ort was accompanied by Mrs. Sarah Wright, Margaret Price, Mabel Meyers and Virginia Neff, all of Frostburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jones announce the birth of a son.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wade, Carlos, announce the birth of a son.

Thomas Woods and son, Francis, Aliquippa, are visiting with Mrs. Mary Woods.

Virginia Blank, Frostburg, was a dinner guest with Mrs. William A. Wilson.

WHAT CHURCH DO YOU ATTEND?

It makes little difference at this lovely hotel, located in the beautiful Park Place section overlooking the Boardwalk and Ocean, as churches of all denominations are close by and here you will find congenial friends of all faiths, the kind with whom you prefer to associate.

Added to this, you have the assurance of a most hospitable management and courteous servants to anticipate your wishes. Sleep in fine beds, cheerful rooms and enjoy an abundance and variety of foods.

No liquor served.

But best of all, you will be astounded to learn how moderate the rates are. Write TODAY.

Delicious Cases

Cheese flavored tarts make delicious cases for fresh apple sauce, lemon or cocoanut cream fillings. Fit pie crust into muffin or tart pans, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake as usual. When time to serve fill with the desired sauce.

Cleans Coffee Pot

A weekly soda water bath helps keep the coffee pot clean. Fill the pot with boiling water, add two teaspoons of soda and simmer half an hour. Drain, rinse in boiling water and drain.

Better for Sandwiches

Day-old bread cuts better for sandwiches than fresh bread. When making sandwiches into fancy shapes, slice the loaf lengthwise; this will give you a larger area to work on.

A New Chocolate Ice Cream Pie

Chocolate ice cream pie is a dessert that makes everyone sit up and take notice. See how quick and easy it is to prepare! Simply fill a flaky pie shell with chocolate ice cream and spread with a fluffy meringue. Then brown in a very hot oven.

Here's the secret of doing this without melting your ice cream. Have the cream firm. The pie shell and the meringue keep oven heat from the ice cream. When you pile on your meringue, be sure to spread it evenly up to the fluted edge, so that no little gap lets in the hot air.

Surprise your family with this novel dessert soon. For variety, ice cream pie is delicious made of strawberry cream, and the meringue flavored with a teaspoon of lemon juice.

Grand Summer Desserts

Try flaky shortening pastry shells for fruit pies and tarts, too. Like ice cream pie, they're so refreshing in hot summer weather. And with pure triple-creamed shortening, you can make pastry so delicate in flavor, so flaky and tender, that is a perfect accompaniment for tart fresh fruits .

It is easy to make a pie shell or tarts early. Just before serving, fill with fresh fruit or berries; top with whipped cream. Fruit gelatins with fresh fruits added make temping pie fillings, too. Fill pie shell as soon as the gelatin begins to set, then chill in refrigerator. Top with a thin layer of whipped cream just before serving. Cut out this pie shell recipe now and you will never be at a loss for summer desserts.

Chocolate Ice Cream Pie

1 baked shortening pie Shell
3 egg whites
9 tablespoons sifted confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ pints chocolate ice cream

Chill baked pie shell thoroughly. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Add sugar gradually (about one tablespoon at a time) beating after each addition until stiff. Beat in vanilla. Spread ice cream in chilled pie shell. Pile meringue lightly on ice cream. Bake in very hot oven (500° F.) two to three minutes. Chill and serve, within thirty minutes. Serves six.

Baked Pie Shell

½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup Spry (triple-creamed shortening)
3 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt together. Add one-half of shortening and cut in until mixture is as fine as corn meal. Add remaining shortening and continue cutting until particles are size of a navy bean. Sprinkle water, one tablespoon at a time, over mixture. With a fork, work lightly together until a dough is formed. Roll dough one-eighth inch thick and prick with fork. Place dough in pie plate and let relax five minutes. Pat with ball of dough. Trim pastry one-half inch larger than pan and turn back edge. Flute rim. Bake in very hot oven (450° F.) fifteen minutes.

(All measurements in these recipes are level).

Good Partners in a Summer Dessert

Apricots and blueberries make delightful partners in summer desserts. Peel the apricots and cut them into thin slices, sweeten slightly and add equal portions of blueberries. Chill until serving time and then heap them into small tart cases scooped out drop cakes or cooky cases. Top them with ice cream, pineapple sherbet or whipped cream.

Hints Are Given On How To Cook The Fall Jellies

College Park, Aug. 17.—If there are yawning gaps in the jelly cupboard, now is the season to fill them, according to Margaret McPheeters, specialist in nutrition for the University of Maryland Extension Service. The fall fruits—crab and other tart apples, quinces, and grapes, and making their call to jelly makers.

These fruits are included in the top-ranking list of good jelly fruits. They rate high because of their good flavor, and they contain sufficient amounts of both pectin and acid, two of the substances needed to make jelly "jell."

To a Minimum

A fundamental rule for jelly making is "keep cooking time to a minimum." On that rule hang three important directions.

First, use only a minimum amount of water to cook the fruit; just enough to cook it soft. Since any excess water has to be cooked off, it lengthens unnecessarily the time the jelly must be on the stove. Second, use a large, flat-bottomed pan. That shortens cooking time by permitting rapid evaporation of liquid. Third, after the juice has been extracted from the fruit, combine it with the required amount of sugar without preheating the juice. This not only cuts down on cooking time, but the sugar tends to prevent the destruction of the pectin.

A Common Fault

Those who make pectin from Concord grapes should guard against a common fault of this jelly—the formation of tiny crystals. These are cream of tartar crystals, harmless, but objectionable because they give the jelly a gritty texture.

One way to prevent cream of tartar crystals in jelly is to let grape juice stand overnight in a solid place before combining it with sugar. The crystals settle to the bottom. Pour off the juice and strain it again. Then go on with the jelly making. Another way to prevent crystals in jelly is to combine grape juice with the juice of other fruits.

Delicious Cases

Cheese flavored tarts make delicious cases for fresh apple sauce, lemon or cocoanut cream fillings. Fit pie crust into muffin or tart pans, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake as usual. When time to serve fill with the desired sauce.

Cleans Coffee Pot

A weekly soda water bath helps keep the coffee pot clean. Fill the pot with boiling water, add two teaspoons of soda and simmer half an hour. Drain, rinse in boiling water and drain.

Better for Sandwiches

Day-old bread cuts better for sandwiches than fresh bread. When making sandwiches into fancy shapes, slice the loaf lengthwise; this will give you a larger area to work on.

A New Chocolate Ice Cream Pie

Chocolate ice cream pie is a dessert that makes everyone sit up and take notice. See how quick and easy it is to prepare! Simply fill a flaky pie shell with chocolate ice cream and spread with a fluffy meringue. Then brown in a very hot oven.

Here's the secret of doing this without melting your ice cream. Have the cream firm. The pie shell and the meringue keep oven heat from the ice cream. When you pile on your meringue, be sure to spread it evenly up to the fluted edge, so that no little gap lets in the hot air.

Surprise your family with this novel dessert soon. For variety, ice cream pie is delicious made of strawberry cream, and the meringue flavored with a teaspoon of lemon juice.

Grand Summer Desserts

Try flaky shortening pastry shells for fruit pies and tarts, too. Like ice cream pie, they're so refreshing in hot summer weather. And with pure triple-creamed shortening, you can make pastry so delicate in flavor, so flaky and tender, that is a perfect accompaniment for tart fresh fruits .

It is easy to make a pie shell or tarts early. Just before serving, fill with fresh fruit or berries; top with whipped cream. Fruit gelatins with fresh fruits added make temping pie fillings, too. Fill pie shell as soon as the gelatin begins to set, then chill in refrigerator. Top with a thin layer of whipped cream just before serving. Cut out this pie shell recipe now and you will never be at a loss for summer desserts.

Chocolate Ice Cream Pie

1 baked shortening pie Shell
3 egg whites
9 tablespoons sifted confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ pints chocolate ice cream

Chill baked pie shell thoroughly. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Add sugar gradually (about one tablespoon at a time) beating after each addition until stiff. Beat in vanilla. Spread ice cream in chilled pie shell. Pile meringue lightly on ice cream. Bake in very hot oven (500° F.) two to three minutes. Chill and serve, within thirty minutes. Serves six.

Baked Pie Shell

1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup Spry (triple-creamed shortening)
3 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt together. Add one-half of shortening and cut in until mixture is as fine as corn meal. Add remaining shortening and continue cutting until particles are size of a navy bean. Sprinkle water, one tablespoon at a time, over mixture. With a fork, work lightly together until a dough is formed. Roll dough one-eighth inch thick and prick with fork. Place dough in pie plate and let relax five minutes. Pat with ball of dough. Trim pastry one-half inch larger than pan and turn back edge. Flute rim. Bake in very hot oven (450° F.) fifteen minutes.

(All measurements in these recipes are level).

Good Partners in a Summer Dessert

Apricots and blueberries make delightful partners in summer desserts. Peel the apricots and cut them into thin slices, sweeten slightly and add equal portions of blueberries. Chill until serving time and then heap them into small tart cases scooped out drop cakes or cooky cases. Top them with ice cream, pineapple sherbet or whipped cream.

Hints Are Given On How To Cook The Fall Jellies

College Park, Aug. 17.—If there are yawning gaps in the jelly cupboard, now is the season to fill them, according to Margaret McPheeters, specialist in nutrition for the University of Maryland Extension Service. The fall fruits—crab and other tart apples, quinces, and grapes, and making their call to jelly makers.

These fruits are included in the top-ranking list of good jelly fruits. They rate high because of their good flavor, and they contain sufficient amounts of both pectin and acid, two of the substances needed to make jelly "jell."

To a Minimum

A fundamental rule for jelly making is "keep cooking time to a minimum." On that rule hang three important directions.

First, use only a minimum amount of water to cook the fruit; just enough to cook it soft. Since any excess water has to be cooked off, it lengthens unnecessarily the time the jelly must be on the stove. Second, use a large, flat-bottomed pan. That shortens cooking time by permitting rapid evaporation of liquid. Third, after the juice has been extracted from the fruit, combine it with the required amount of sugar without preheating the juice. This not only cuts down on cooking time, but the sugar tends to prevent the destruction of the pectin.

A Common Fault

Those who make pectin from Concord grapes should guard against a common fault of this jelly—the formation of tiny crystals. These are cream of tartar crystals, harmless, but objectionable because they give the jelly a gritty texture.

One way to prevent cream of tartar crystals in jelly is to let grape juice stand overnight in a solid place before combining it with sugar. The crystals settle to the bottom. Pour off the juice and strain it again. Then go on with the jelly making. Another way to prevent crystals in jelly is to combine grape juice with the juice of other fruits.

Willkie's Acceptance Speech Will Be Carried by All Radio Networks

Event at Elwood, Ind., Will Start at 4 This Afternoon

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—Wendell L. Willkie's acceptance speech as Republican presidential candidate will be carried by all networks Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, coming from his home town of Elwood, Ind. Stations comprising NBC, CBS and MBS will be hooked together. Other speakers are Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana and Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts.

This broadcast will be preceded by another over WJZ-NBC, CBS and MBS at 3:15 of an informal reception to Willkie, in which Sen. J. J. Davis, of Pennsylvania is to introduce the candidate. At 10:15 CBS will carry review of editorial comment on Willkie.

Chicago Music Festival

For an hour and a half, beginning at 8:30, MBS will have its microphones in action from the Chicagoland music festival, with 8,000 musicians and singers expected to take part. A feature is "The Pageant of America."

Ralph Edwards quiz show, Truth or Consequences, which had been carried on a small group of CBS stations, revives itself on WEAF-NBC at 7:30, extending its chain to 30 or more stations.

Among other developments:

Husband Questioned In Shooting of Wife

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 16 (AP)—State motor police and county authorities questioned Robert Headley, 49, utilities company employe, about the mysterious shooting of his wife which they have charged was committed by two sisters acting as pseudo-bandits.

Mrs. Ada Hubb Headley, 44, the wife, was given a "50-50 chance" of surviving by the hospital. She was hit by five bullets Tuesday night as she and her husband reached their barn-garage in Pine Bank, fourteen miles southwest of here.

Deputy sheriff Jack Orndoff said the sisters, Mrs. Otis Cumberledge, 36, plump widow, and Mrs. Elizabeth Pettit, 25, who lived a few miles from the Headleys, admitted posing as masked robbers and shooting Mrs. Headley.

Orndoff, who filed charges of aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill against the two women, said Headley and Mrs. Cumberledge had been friends for years. He added that Headley has insisted he knew nothing of any plot to shoot his wife.

Find Body of Missing 12-year Old Boy

BALTIMORE, Aug. 16 (AP) — The body of 12-year old Thomas Hart, Williamsport, Pa., newsboy who disappeared from the steamer Yorktown in Chesapeake Bay last Monday, was recovered yesterday on the beach at Cedar Point, in southern Maryland.

Alexander Sheehan, Cedar Point resident, discovered the body while strolling. It was removed to a Leonardtown undertaking establishment and Baltimore police notified the boy's father, John E. Hart.

Police Capt. John Carey said the Elder Hart left Williamsport for Baltimore immediately.

Young Thomas was one of seventy-four newsboys on a week-end excursion to Virginia Beach, Va. He was missing from his stateroom when the Yorktown docked here on the return trip.

W. T. Snader, circulation manager of the Harrisburg Telegraph, which sponsored the trip, theorized the boy either fell overboard while sleep-walking or mistook the cabin window for a door.

Jousting Tournament Planned at Leonardtown

LEONARDTOWN, Md., Aug. 16 (AP)—Plans for St. Mary's county's first jousting tournament of the season, an all-day program in which persons from several sections of southern Maryland are scheduled to take part, were announced here.

Stellar riders from southern Maryland are expected to take part

The tournament also will set the stage for some pre-campaign activity by the state's two candidates for the U. S. Senate, George L. Radcliffe, the democratic incumbent, and his republican opponent, former governor Harry W. Nice.

Senator Radcliffe will deliver the oration in the afternoon and Nice will be the principal speaker at night.

WABC-CBS 7, Columbia workshop drama, "The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins."

A three-network brodacast by WJZ-NBC, CBS and MBS is being set up for 6 p. m. to carry the address of Ambassador William C. Bullitt, recently returned from France, on "The World Political Situation as it Affects the United States." He speaks at a mass meeting Independence square Philadelphia.

Babies Cannot Cry until Three Months of Age

This Is because the Tear Glands Are Not Developed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

1. Good and bad advice about babies.

1. Babies can wail lustily at birth, but they can't cry for three months because the tear glands aren't developed until then, according to Dr. A. F. Guttmacher in "Into the Universe: The Story of Human Birth."

An expectant mother should not eat for two: an ordinary amount of food is quite sufficient.

High heels worn by a gravid woman will not make her child cross-eyed, nor will it be strangled if she lifts her arms above her head.

Women have suffered broken limbs in automobile smash-ups, have jumped off sixteen foot cliffs without injuring the child or terminating pregnancy.

Twenty-five percent of all births are perfectly normal, but all expectant mothers worry about complications, fear their offspring may be defective. Malformations are decimally rare.

Dermatitis Cause

2. Dermatitis from spectacle frames.

2. Among the queer itches that result from the contact of the skin with modern industrial processes is dermatitis from spectacle frames. The location of such a dermatitis gives the clue to the cause—around the ears, along the bridge of the nose. White gold spectacle frames, that are really chromium or nickel, are sometimes offenders, and calluloid, bakelite and the newer compounds are occasionally guilty. So-called horn spectacle frames may contain dyes that are irritating as are the chrome and lime used in polishing.

3. What should athletes be taught about the proper way of breathing?

3. Nothing, according to professional trainers. This, of course, naturally excludes aquatic athletics.

Takes Mind Off

If you try to teach a runner a correct method of breathing you take his mind off more valuable things. He should concentrate on perfecting the synchrony of the movements of the muscles which propel the body forward.

A famous short-distance runner when asked how he breathed, looked blank for a while and then said he didn't know. He had to go through a practice dash to find out. Then he said, "When 'on your mark' is shouted, I take a deep breath and then hold it and breathe again when the race is over." But it was noticed during that dash he ran about half as fast as usual. It took him some time to forget about his breathing. It's like the fellow who didn't know whether he slept with his beard inside or outside the covers—he acquired chronic insomnia trying to find out.

26 Known Dead In Southern Flood

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 15 (AP)—Swollen streams receded today leaving at least twenty-six dead, millions of dollars damage to property, crops and highways in five states, which the oceanward sweep of the muddy flood waters menaced vast areas of flatlands.

While the inhabitants of the mountain sections hit by the worst inundation in years began to struggle back to normal existence, there was a general evacuation of homes in low-lying sections along the lower reaches of the rampaging streams.

Communication was still cut off or crippled in many of the mountain communities, but reports indicated that at least twenty-six persons were drowned or killed in landslides. There were reports of other casualties but they could not be confirmed.

The death toll by states:

North Carolina, twelve; Tennessee, 5; Virginia, five; Georgia, four. A report from Boone, N. C., said that at least ten lives were lost and possibly a score of persons injured in landslides and by drowning in the communities of Meat Gap, Deep Gap, Banner Elk, and Stony Fork.

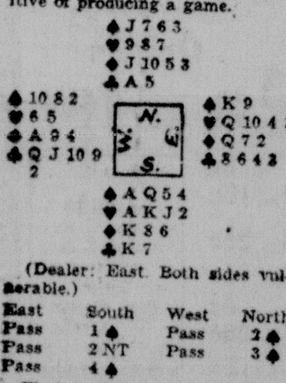

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

TRY TO MAKE CERTAIN

WHEN YOU know, beyond all reasonable doubt, that there is a game in the hand, your job is to make sure it gets bid, if you can. The sort of bid which seems 99 per cent certain to be kept open is not the thing to use if you can find one which is 100 per cent positive of producing a game.

(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

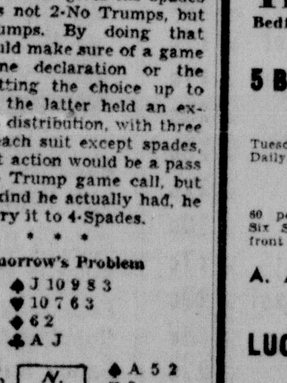

That is the bidding which developed at one table of a duplicate game—rather sound and conservative in a timid sort of way, but not so good in another. South's bid of only 2-No Trumps on his second turn was a highly hazardous procedure. Indeed, at one other table, where that same bid was made, North dropped it, feeling that he had an utterly irreducible minimum for his single raise. And was his face red after South took ten tricks, failing to get a game.

All of the spade players made an unbid small slam, losing no trick except to the diamond A, since East's three face cards were all under the hammer of South's tenace positions.

Really South's correct second bid, after North gives his spades a raise, is not 2-No Trumps, but 3-No Trumps. By doing that South would make sure of a game bid in one declaration or the other, putting the choice up to North. If the latter held an exactly even distribution, with three cards in each suit except spades, his correct action would be a pass of the No Trump game call, but with the kind he actually had, he should carry it to 4-Spades.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

If South opens this deal with 1-Diamond, West doubles and North passes, what should East do?

Willkie's Acceptance Speech Will Be Carried by All Radio Networks

Event at Elwood, Ind., Will Start at 4 This Afternoon

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—Wendell L. Willkie's acceptance speech as Republican presidential candidate will be carried by all networks Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, coming from his home town of Elwood, Ind. Stations comprising NBC, CBS and MBS will be hooked together. Other speakers are Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana and Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts.

This broadcast will be preceded by another over WJZ-NBC, CBS and MBS at 3:15 of an informal reception to Willkie, in which Sen. J. J. Davis, of Pennsylvania is to introduce the candidate. At 10:15 CBS will carry review of editorial comment on Willkie.

Chicago Music Festival

For an hour and a half, beginning at 8:30, MBS will have its microphones in action from the Chicagoland music festival, with 8,000 musicians and singers expected to take part. A feature is "The Pageant of America."

Ralph Edwards quiz show, Truth or Consequences, which had been carried on a small group of CBS stations, revives itself on WEAF-NBC at 7:30, extending its chain to 30 or more stations.

Husband Questioned In Shooting of Wife

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 16 (AP)—State motor police and county authorities questioned Robert Headley, 49, utilities company employe, about the mysterious shooting of his wife which they have charged was committed by two sisters acting as pseudo-bandits.

Mrs. Ada Hubb Headley, 44, the wife, was given a "50-50 chance" of surviving by the hospital. She was hit by five bullets Tuesday night as she and her husband reached their barn-garage in Pine Bank, fourteen miles southwest of here.

Deputy sheriff Jack Orndoff said the sisters, Mrs. Otis Cumberledge, 36, plump widow, and Mrs. Elizabeth Pettit, 25, who lived a few miles from the Headleys, admitted posing as masked robbers and shooting Mrs. Headley.

Orndoff, who filed charges of aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill against the two women, said Headley and Mrs. Cumberledge had been friends for years. He added that Headley has insisted he knew nothing of any plot to shoot his wife.

Find Body of Missing 12-year Old Boy

BALTIMORE, Aug. 16 (AP)—The body of 12-year old Thomas Hart, Williamsport, Pa., newsboy who disappeared from the steamer Yorktown in Chesapeake Bay last Monday, was recovered yesterday on the beach at Cedar Point, in southern Maryland.

Alexander Sheehan, Cedar Point resident, discovered the body while strolling. It was removed to a Leonardtown undertaking establishment and Baltimore police notified the boy's father, John E. Hart.

Police Capt. John Carey said the Elder Hart left Williamsport for Baltimore immediately.

Young Thomas was one of seventy-four newsboys on a week-end excursion to Virginia Beach, Va. He was missing from his stateroom when the Yorktown docked here on the return trip.

W. T. Snader, circulation manager of the Harrisburg Telegraph, which sponsored the trip, theorized the boy either fell overboard while sleep-walking or mistook the cabin window for a door.

Jousting Tournament Planned at Leonardtown

LEONARDTOWN, Md., Aug. 16 (AP)—Plans for St. Mary's county's first jousting tournament of the season, an all-day program in which persons from several sections of southern Maryland are scheduled to take part, were announced here.

Stellar riders from southern Maryland are expected to take part.

The tournament also will set the stage for some pre-campaign activity by the state's two candidates for the U. S. Senate, George L. Radcliffe, the democratic incumbent, and his republican opponent, former governor Harry W. Nice.

Senator Radcliffe will deliver the oration in the afternoon and Nice will be the principal speaker at night.

WABC-CBS 7, Columbia workshop drama, "The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins."

A three-network brodacast by WJZ-NBC, CBS and MBS is being set up for 6 p. m. to carry the address of Ambassador William C. Bullitt, recently returned from France, on "The World Political Situation as it Affects the United States." He speaks at a mass meeting Independence square Philadelphia.

Babies Cannot Cry until Three Months of Age

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

1. Good and bad advice about babies.

1. Babies can wail lustily at birth, but they can't cry for three months because the tear glands aren't developed until then, according to Dr. A. F. Guttmacher in "Into the Universe: The Story of Human Birth."

An expectant mother should not eat for two: an ordinary amount of food is quite sufficient.

High heels worn by a gravid woman will not make her child cross-eyed, nor will it be strangled if she lifts her arms above her head.

Women have suffered broken limbs in automobile smash-ups, have jumped off sixteen foot cliffs without injuring the child or terminating pregnancy.

Twenty-five percent of all births are perfectly normal, but all expectant mothers worry about complications, fear their offspring may be defective. Malformations are decimally rare.

Dermatitis Cause

2. Dermatitis from spectacle frames.

2. Among the queer itches that result from the contact of the skin with modern industrial processes is dermatitis from spectacle frames. The location of such a dermatitis gives the clue to the cause—around the ears, along the bridge of the nose. White gold spectacle frames, that are really chromium or nickel, are sometimes offenders, and celluloid, bakelite and the newer compounds are occasionally guilty. So-called horn spectacle frames may contain dyes that are irritating as are the chrome and lime used in polishing.

Takes Mind Off

If you try to teach a runner a correct method of breathing you take his mind off more valuable things. He should concentrate on perfecting the synchrony of the movements of the muscles which propel the body forward.

A famous short-distance runner when asked how he breathed, looked blank for a while and then said he didn't know. He had to go through a practice dash to find out. Then he said, "When 'on your mark' is shouted, I take a deep breath and then hold it and breathe again when the race is over." But it was noticed during that dash he ran about half as fast as usual. It took him some time to forget about his breathing. It's like the fellow who didn't know whether he slept with his beard inside or outside the covers—he acquired chronic insomnia trying to find out.

26 Known Dead In Southern Flood

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 15 (AP)—Swollen streams receded today leaving at least twenty-six dead, millions of dollars damage to property, crops and highways in five states, which the oceanward sweep of the muddy flood waters menaced vast areas of flatlands.

While the inhabitants of the mountain sections hit by the worst inundation in years began to struggle back to normal existence, there was a general evacuation of homes in low-lying sections along the lower reaches of the rampaging streams.

Communication was still cut off or crippled in many of the mountain communities, but reports indicated that at least twenty-six persons were drowned or killed in landslides. There were reports of other casualties but they could not be confirmed.

The death toll by states:

North Carolina, twelve; Tennessee, 5; Virginia, five; Georgia, four. A report from Boone, N. C., said that at least ten lives were lost and possibly a score of persons injured in landslides and by drowning in the communities of Meat Gap, Deep Gap, Banner Elk, and Stony Fork.

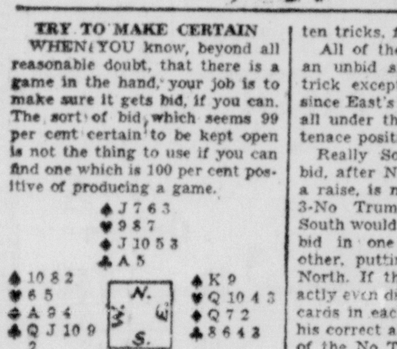

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

TRY TO MAKE CERTAIN

WHEN YOU know, beyond all reasonable doubt, that there is a game in the hand, your job is to make sure it gets bid, if you can. The sort of bid which seems 99 per cent certain to be kept open is not the thing to use if you can find one which is 100 per cent positive of producing a game.

(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

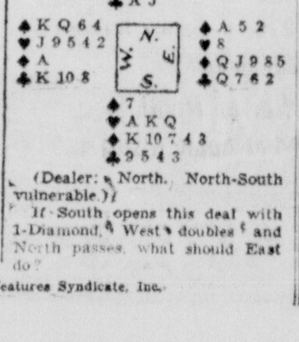

That is the bidding which developed at one table of a duplicate game—rather sound and conservative in a timid sort of way, but not so good in another. South's bid of only 2-No Trumps on his second turn was a highly hazardous procedure. Indeed, at one other table, where that same bid was made, North dropped it, feeling that he had an utterly irreducible minimum for his single raise. And was his face red after South took ten tricks, failing to get a game.

All of the spade players made an unbid small slam, losing no trick except to the diamond A, since East's three face cards were all under the hammer of South's tenace positions.

Really South's correct second bid, after North gives his spades a raise, is not 2-No Trumps, but 3-No Trumps. By doing that South would make sure of a game bid in one declaration or the other, putting the choice up to North. If the latter held an exactly even distribution, with three cards in each suit except spades, his correct action would be a pass of the No Trump game call, but with the kind he actually had, he should carry it to 4-Spades.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

'Flash' Rise Is Cause of Great Damage in W. Va.

Unofficial Losses Are Placed at $1,000,000; Many Are Homeless

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 16 — A "flash" rise of the great Kanawha river and the New river, its tributary, left behind today mud-covered communities unofficial losses at nearly $1,000,000.

Principal damages were to industrial property in the sudden swell of the rivers, which inundated towns along a 99-mile front from Hinton to Charleston and caused destruction of numerous river craft.

One steamboat and at least half a dozen barges sank in the Kanawha within limits of the capital. The river, receding rapidly, still was too high for salvage operations, but the channel was not blocked.

100 Families are Homeless

Relief agencies, the Red Cross and other civic organizations, meanwhile, set up programs to aid flood sufferers, including at lest 100 homeless families.

Losses in the little town of Gauley Bridge, where the New and Gauley rivers unite to form the Kanawha, were placed by one official at between $80,000 and $200,000.

Charleston, Montgomery, Hinton and other towns along the mountain-fringed New river and the bigger stream added still other thousands to the damage total.

The West Virginia Sand and Gravel Company, which owned part of the runaway craft damaged or sunk, placed its losses at $75,000. Damage to property of the Hatfield-Campbell's Creek Coal Company was given unofficially as $100,000.

The loading tipple of the Kanawha By Products Company was knocked over by a drifting barge.

Red Cross On Job

At Fort Defiance, a tourist camp near Gauley Bridge, a small restaurant building, skating rink and six cottages were swept away.

Water rose to six feet in streets of the little river junction town itself, flooding all business houses except a drug store and severely damaging stocks.

Relief agencies, cared for more than seventy-five homeless families at Charleston, and a refugee station was set up at Montgomery, upstream, by the chamber of commerce and Red Cross.

Waters backed up in tributaries of the Kanawha downstream, and settlements below Charleston escaped severe damage.

Flight Instructor Killed as Plane Crashes into River

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 16 (AP)—A student training plane which struck a wire and crashed into the Kanawha river carried Troy W. Newkirke, 43-year-old negro CAA flight instructor, to his death today.

State Aeronautics Inspector Hubert Stark said Newkirke, who came here July 11 from Roosevelt Field, New York, apparently was knocked unconscious in the crash and was drowned.

A negro student flyer, Esther Smott, 19-year-old student at West Virginia state college where Newkirke conducted the Civil Aeronautics Association program, was uninjured when the plane catapulted into the river.

She swam to safety after vainly trying to rescue the instructor.

Charleston firemen rushed to the crash scene, about two miles east of the Charleston airport, and tried for two hours to revive Newkirke.

The instructor was the husband of a superintendent of nurses at a New York hospital.

SPARTANBURG, S. C. (AP)—A Spartanburg undertaker stopped just short of burying a corpse in the wrong grave. Two graves had been dug in the cemetery and the undertaker was mixed up on their positions.

Open and Shut Case

LONDON, Ky. (AP)—Circuit Judge Franklin P. Stivers fines court attaches who are absent or tardy at trials.

CANADA'S FIRST SUPER HIGHWAY

Built at an average cost of $120,000 per mile, Canada's recently completed 91-mile Queen Elizabeth Way is ready to handle fast motor traffic between Niagara Falls and Toronto. Engineers built the express route as the "crow flies" to shorten the distance between the two cities and to eliminate turns. A section of the modern highway is shown above.

Frostburg Couple Will Celebrate Golden Anniversary Wednesday

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Krietzburg Will Hold Open House

FROSTBURG, Aug. 16 — Mr. and Mrs. William H. Krietzburg, 68 Washington street, will observe their fiftieth wedding anniversary Wednesday, August 21, when they will hold open house at their home from 7 to 10 p. m. They were married August 21, 1890, at the home of the bride's parents, George and Anna Martha (Brandau) Lammert, Eckhart Mines, and had as their attendants the late John Marshall and Mrs. Katherine Lutz, a sister of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the late Rev. A. G. Gekeler, then pastor of Salem Reformed church.

Mr. and Mrs. Krietzburg have one son, F. Earle Krietzburg, cashier of the Frostburg National Bank, and two grandchildren, Elizabeth and Laurel Krietzburg, 141 Center street.

Mr. Krietzburg, a son of the late Henry A., and Isabelle (Robertson) Krietzburg, retired several years ago after being in the employ of the Consolidation Coal Company for a half century. He is a devout churchman, having served as superintendant of the Sunday school of First Baptist church, Eckhart, for 25 years, and has been a deacon of the church for 35 years.

Mr. Krietzburg takes pride in the fact that his father served with the Union army in the Civil war, being attached to the troops before Richmond when the Confederate capitol surrendered. His mother was one of sixty-two persons bearing the name of Robertson who emigrated from Scotland on the same ship which landed them at Nova Scotia.

Mr. Krietzburg has two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson and Mrs. Katherine Weisenborne, both of Barberton, Ohio, and a half brother, Frederick Baltau, serving as a missionary to China. Mrs. Krietzburg has two brothers, former Mayor Peter Lammert and William Lammert, this city, and two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Dudley, Cumberland, and Mrs. Katie Lewis, Dearborn, Michigan.

To Re-Dedicate Zihlman Church

The Rev. Norris A. Lineweaver, pastor of the Eckhart Methodist circuit, will preside Sunday, 2:30 p. m., at the re-dedication of the Allegany Methodist church, Zihlman, which was recently improved. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Harry Evaul, Hagerstown, district superintendant of the Methodist church.

The improvements to the church, done with the cooperation of the forty members of the congregation at a cost of about $500, include new double doors with an archway entrance, concrete steps at front and rear, a new furnace and redecorating both on the exterior and interior. The outside is white and the inside is buff with walnut ceiling. The carpet and velvet draperies are of maroon shade.

A new communion rail of walnut has been built and a new communion table was presented to the church by Carl Pollack and Daniel Miller and other members of the family as a memorial to the late Mrs. Daniel Miller and her son, the late Ralph Pollack.

Myers To Speak

Dr. and Mrs. Gary C. Myers will spend a day at the State Teachers College, Frostburg, in September. They will speak at the college assembly and at the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the college elementary school. Dr. Myers is a national authority on school and child training problems. He is the author of numerous books and writes a syndicated column for newspapers. He is also editor-in-chief of CHILDREN'S ACTIVITIES magazine. He has acted as forum demonstration leader for the United States Office of Education and has spoken before groups and conventions in sixty large cities and in over thirty states.

He lectures on such subjects as "How We Parents Annoy our Children," "Our Children and Religion," and "Building Personality in Children." At the State Teachers College, he and Mrs. Myers will likely speak on the topics, "When Are We Grown Up?" "Helping Children Succeed at School," and "Mental Health and the Classroom."

Parents and teachers of this entire section will be offered an opportunity to hear Dr. and Mrs. Myers.

Moorefield Moose Want Prominent Speaker For Labor Day Fete

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Aug. 16—Officials of Moorefield Lodge No. 358, Loyal Order of Moose, who are planning to hold a giant celebration on Labor Day, yesterday wired Representative Jennings Randolph to enlist his aid in obtaining a speaker of national prominence for the event.

The Moose committee notified Randolph they would like to have "Mrs. Roosevelt, Louis Johnson, Governor Homer "Rocky" Holt, Knox, Stimson, or some other person of national importance" for the affair.

Miller's Mighty Shows, a carnival of twenty-five side shows and nine rides, has been contracted for the celebration and the rest of the week.

Frostburg Briefs

Van Beeman, local Celanese worker, will preach Sunday morning at the Barton Methodist church and Sunday evening at the Lonaconing Methodist church. He will also have charge of the mid-week service of First Methodist church, this city, next Wednesday evening.

Scores of Frostburg boys and girls, owners of bicycles, appeared at the city hall Thursday morning and had the machines examined and then purchased license tags for twenty-five cents, the annual fee.

The main lobby of the Lyric Theater is being torn out in preparation for the construction of a modern entrance with the ticket office facing the street from the center of the lobby. The finish will be brick veneer. A number of interior improvements will also be made.

Announcement was made yesterday at the office of State Teachers College that Miss Katherine Meese, 10 Dudley street, Lonaconing, a 1940 graduate of the college, has been appointed a primary teacher and music instructor in elementary grades in Charles county. During her senior year at the college, Miss Meese was president of the Day Students' Council and member of the Student Congress. In her senior year she was on the "Topper" staff.

The Rev. J. F. Smeltzer, supply pastor at Salem Reformed church last Sunday was the guest of William Sipple, Uhl street, a classmate at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.

Traffic Deaths in W. Va. Increase 21 Percent

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 16 (AP)—West Virginia ranked second among eastern states in the increase of traffic deaths during the first six months of 1940 over the same period of 1939, the department of public safety announced today.

New Hampshire led with 30 per cent. West Virginia had an increase of 21 per cent.

CAT "ADOPTS" FAWN

One of the most timid of creatures, this three-weeks-old fawn, pet of Perk, Joe and Billy Hazlegrove, has made itself quite at home in the Hazelgroves' Roanoke, Va., residence. Its favorable companion is the family cat, here sharing milk with the fawn.

Art and Crafts Will Be Studied At Hyndman, Pa.

Martin Boyer Will Conduct Two Day Program of Instruction

HYNDMAN, Pa., Aug. 16 —Robert Kinton, Sr., supervisor of the Hyndman Playground, announces that Martin Boyer, a specialist in art and crafts, will conduct a two days' program of instruction at the Public school building, August 26 and 27, from 9 a. m., to noon, and from 1 to 4 p. m.

Persons wishing to take this training, should provide and bring the following material, irrespective of what special subject he or she may choose: — A pen knife, a sucker stick or nut-pick, a pencil, a ruler, a box of crayons, a compass, an ounce of Germantown yarn, a ball of carpenter's chalk line, and a small supply of dry spaghetti.

Receive Pheasants

The State Game Commission has provided the local Sportsmen's Club with a supply of fifty ring-neck pheasants for purposes of replenishing the suply of game in forestlands surrounding Hyndman. These birds are only about a third grown and are to be raised in cativity.

A large enclosed pen was constructed on town property owned by Reuben S. Clapper, a prominent local sportsman, and the pheasants are to be kept until fully matured, before being released in nearby woodlands.

'Flash' Rise Is Cause of Great Damage in W. Va.

Unofficial Losses Are Placed at $1,000,000; Many Are Homeless

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 16 — A "flash" rise of the great Kanawha river and the New river, its tributary, left behind today mud-covered communities unofficial losses at nearly $1,000,000.

Principal damages were to industrial property in the sudden swell of the rivers, which inundated towns along a 99-mile front from Hinton to Charleston and caused destruction of numerous river craft.

One steamboat and at least half a dozen barges sank in the Kanawha within limits of the capital. The river, receding rapidly, still was too high for salvage operations, but the channel was not blocked.

100 Families are Homeless

Relief agencies, the Red Cross and other civic organizations, meanwhile, set up programs to aid flood sufferers, including at lest 100 homeless families.

Losses in the little town of Gauley Bridge, where the New and Gauley rivers unite to form the Kanawha, were placed by one official at between $80,000 and $200,000.

Charleston, Montgomery, Hinton and other towns along the mountain-fringed New river and the bigger stream added still other thousands to the damage total.

The West Virginia Sand and Gravel Company, which owned part of the runaway craft damaged or sunk, placed its losses at $75,000. Damage to property of the Hatfield-Campbell's Creek Coal Company was given unofficially as $100,000.

The loading tipple of the Kanawha By Products Company was knocked over by a drifting barge.

Red Cross On Job

At Fort Defiance, a tourist camp near Gauley Bridge, a small restaurant building, skating rink and six cottages were swept away.

Water rose to six feet in streets of the little river junction town itself, flooding all business houses except a drug store and severely damaging stocks.

Relief agencies, cared for more than seventy-five homeless families in Charleston, and a refugee station was set up at Montgomery, upstream, by the chamber of commerce and Red Cross.

Waters backed up in tributaries of the Kanawha downstream, and settlements below Charleston escaped severe damage.

Flight Instructor Killed as Plane Crashes into River

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 16 (AP)—A student training plane which struck a wire and crashed into the Kanawha river carried Troy W. Newkirke, 43-year-old negro CAA flight instructor, to his death today.

State Aeronautics Inspector Hubert Stark said Newkirke, who came here July 11 from Roosevelt Field, New York, apparently was knocked unconscious in the crash and was drowned.

A negro student flyer, Esther Smott, 19-year-old student at West Virginia state college where Newkirke conducted the Civil Aeronautics Association program, was uninjured when the plane catapulted into the river.

She swam to safety after vainly trying to rescue the instructor.

Charleston firemen rushed to the crash scene, about two miles east of the Charleston airport, and tried for two hours to revive Newkirke.

The instructor was the husband of a superintendent of nurses at a New York hospital.

Frostburg Couple Will Celebrate Golden Anniversary Wednesday

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Krietzburg Will Hold Open House

FROSTBURG, Aug. 16 — Mr. and Mrs. William H. Krietzburg, 68 Washington street, will observe their fiftieth wedding anniversary Wednesday, August 21, when they will hold open house at their home from 7 to 10 p. m. They were married August 21, 1890, at the home of the bride's parents, George and Anna Martha (Brandau) Lammert, Eckhart Mines, and had as their attendants the late John Marshall and Mrs. Katherine Lutz, a sister of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the late Rev. A. G. Gekeler, then pastor of Salem Reformed church.

Mr. and Mrs. Krietzburg have one son, F. Earle Krietzburg, cashier of the Frostburg National Bank, and two grandchildren, Elizabeth and Laurel Krietzburg, 141 Center street.

Mr. Krietzburg, a son of the late Henry A., and Isabelle (Robertson) Krietzburg, retired several years ago after being in the employ of the Consolidation Coal Company for a half century. He is a devout churchman, having served as superintendant of the Sunday school of First Baptist church, Eckhart, for 25 years, and has been a deacon of the church for 35 years.

Mr. Krietzburg takes pride in the fact that his father served with the Union army in the Civil war, being attached to the troops before Richmond when the Confederate capitol surrendered. His mother was one of sixty-two persons bearing the name of Robertson who emigrated from Scotland on the same ship which landed them at Nova Scotia.

Mr. Krietzburg has two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson and Mrs. Katherine Weisenborne, both of Barberton, Ohio, and a half brother, Frederick Baltau, serving as a missionary to China. Mrs. Krietzburg has two brothers, former Mayor Peter Lammert and William Lammert, this city, and two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Dudley, Cumberland, and Mrs. Katie Lewis, Dearborn, Michigan.

To Re-Dedicate Zihlman Church

The Rev. Norris A. Lineweaver, pastor of the Eckhart Methodist circuit, will preside Sunday, 2:30 p. m., at the re-dedication of the Allegany Methodist church, Zihlman, which was recently improved. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Harry Evaul, Hagerstown, district superintendant of the Methodist church.

The improvements to the church, done with the cooperation of the forty members of the congregation at a cost of about $500, include new double doors with an archway entrance, concrete steps at front and rear, a new furnace and redecorating both on the exterior and interior. The outside is white and the inside is buff with walnut ceiling. The carpet and velvet draperies are of maroon shade.

A new communion rail of walnut has been built and a new communion table was presented to the church by Carl Pollack and Daniel Miller and other members of the family as a memorial to the late Mrs. Daniel Miller and her son, the late Ralph Pollack.

Services for Mrs. Catherine Housel Raupach were held this morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank C. Robertson, Lincoln avenue. She was born in Meyersdale March 3, 1900, and was the youngest daughter of Urias M. and Barbara Ellen Shumaker Housel, both deceased.

Mrs. Raupach's death was due to injuries received in an automobile accident two months ago. She died Tuesday in St. Francis hospital, Pittsburgh, where she was removed soon after the accident.

Surviving are her husband, William A. Raupach, three sisters, Mrs. William McKillop, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Philip Beeson, Akron, Ohio; Mrs. Frank C. Robertson, and a brother, Kenneth Housel, Canton, Ohio; four step-sons, J. William Raupach, Rockwood; Kenneth W. Raupach, Cleveland, Ohio; Robert O. and Wayne A. Raupach, at home, and a daughter, Mrs. William Custer, Rockwood. The body was removed to Rockwood for interment.

Marriage Announced

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Louise Hafer, daughter of Mrs. I. S. Spear, Selby, Ohio, and John Boyer, son of Mrs. Ernest Boyer, Broadway street, Meyersdale. The ceremony was performed in the Lutheran church, Oakland, Md., August 9.

The bride is a graduate of Selby high school, while the bridegroom graduated from Meyersdale high school in 1930; from Ashland college, Ohio, in 1934, and recently he received his master's degree from the Pennsylvania State Teachers college. He taught for three years in the Selby, Ohio, high school, and is at present a member of the faculty of the high school in Bridgeville, near Pittsburgh.

The couple is now on a honeymoon tour which includes a visit to the New York World's fair, Niagara Falls and points in Canada. They will reside in Pittsburgh.

Street Work at Mt. Savage Is Near Completion

Improvements Are Being Made on Church Hill

MT. SAVAGE, Aug. 16—Construction work on upper Church Hill street is nearing completion. The work was begun by the employees of the Works Progress Administration last year and was discontinued through the winter months.

The old road had been dug up and dirt and stones were used to fill in the ruts. The road remained in this condition until the past few weeks when a group of men began working on it again. The rocks have been rolled and tar has been laid over them. The lower section of the road was paved in large flat rocks last year and for the first time in many years traffic has been able to travel from Main street to the top of Church Hill over this street.

Another improvement made recently is the covered sewer near St. George's parish hall. Formerly rainwater from the hill ran through an open rut at the side of the street and often overflowed causing much damage. Now ten inch pipes have been laid and the original rut "filled in" keeping the water from running into the street and nearby property.

Grantsville Car, Stolen Thursday, Is Found by Meadville, Pa., Man

Wisseman's car disappeared Thursday night from the garage at his home near here, and, with the exception of two youthful unknown hitchhikers, who were seen nearby earlier in the evening, he had no idea who might have "appropriated" it. Last evening Mr. Wisseman received a telegram from a man in Meadville, Pa., some 250 miles northwest of here, telling him he had found the missing automobile parked along the roadside at that place. Seeing the apparently abandoned machine, the man had investigated it, discovered Mr. Wisseman's registration card in one of the pockets and communicated with him.

When found the gas tank was empty but so far as is known the machine was undamaged. Constable Daniel W. Hershberger left last night for Meadville to recover the car for the owner.

Dinner Party

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Murphy entertained at a dinner party at their home here last night. Their guests were Mrs. William Downey, Cleveland, O.; Misses Rose Aldridge and Patricia Adams, Mt. Savage, who are visiting them for a few days, Mrs. Catherine Williams and son, Carl Russell, Misses Isabella Lengel, Violet L. Conrad, Myrna S. Allen, Elda L. Miller, Olga L. Marincic, Dorothy L. McCormick and Dorothy G. Miller, members of the Young Ladies Bible class of the Reformed church of Yukon, Pa., who comprise a camping party near here. Games were arranged for the entertainment of the guests during the evening.

All-day Meeting

The Grantsville Methodist church will welcome other churches in the charge at an all-day meeting Sunday. Although such sessions have been held for several years, they have usually taken place at New Germany and this is the first time the Grantsville church has been chosen for the affair. Other churches participating are Johnson, State Line, New Germany, Mt. Zion, and Jennings.

The Rev. Raymond Crowe, of the Johnson Emmanuel church will conduct the services in the morning, scheduled for 11 o'clock. There will be a basket dinner at noon. At the afternoon session the Rev. Dr. C. E. Brandt, Morgantown, W. Va., District Superintendent of the Moorefield District, will deliver the address, which will be followed by a Holy Communion. The local pastor, the Rev. D. R. Carder, will preside in the evening.

Brief Items

The Grantsville Fire Department responded to a call at the west end of town about 9:30 o'clock this morning when the wires under the hood of a State Roads truck caused a short circuit and it was feared gasoline fumes might become ignited. No serious damage was reported however.

The annual Stevanus family reunion will be held tomorrow (Saturday) in the grove on the Springs Road, near the State line. In the event of rain however, the Springs school will accomodate the gathering.

The Sherman Beachy farm has been chosen as the site for the annual Lutheran Sunday school picnic this year. The affair is to be held Sunday. As has been the custom, everyone is expected to bring a basket dinner, but plenty of ice cream and favors will be furnished as usual by the Sunday school.

The Rev. J. C. Beahm will deliver the sermon at the Bethesda church of the Brethren Sunday morning. He has chosen as his topic, "While the Church Waits for the Coming of Her Lord." The services are to be held at 11 o'clock.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Camp this morning at their home at Keysers Ridge. The baby weighed about seven and a half pounds. This is their second child, the other also being a daughter.

Personals

Mrs. Elizabeth Lakin and son Arthur, Cumberland, came this morning to spend the weekend here as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Speicher.

Mrs. Harry Setzer and four children, Coudersport, Pa., arrived yesterday to spend a few weeks here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jason Wilburn, at Jennings, and other relatives in this and the Oakland communities.

Mrs. Harry Liston, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Memorial hospital, Cumberland, Monday, is reported to be improving nicely.

New Milk Plant At Oakland Will Be Opened Soon

Work Is Progressing Satisfactorily on $25,000 Structure

OAKLAND, Aug. 16 — With approximately fifty men at work the Carnation Company is pushing construction on its new $25,000 milk receiving plant, now being erected on the former Oakland hotel property, which the company purchased from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company several months ago.

Glenn Hoffman, plant superintendent, has been in Oakland several days and stated this morning that the building would be completed and the company in all probability ready to begin receiving milk from farmers on the morning of September 16. Construction began just two weeks ago.

Will See Farmers

Between now and September 16 Mr. Hoffman plans to spend much of his time with farmers arranging for milk routes and talking over with them the opportunity that is being afforded by the establishing of a permanent industry in Oakland, which will benefit people within a radius of about fifty miles.

Mr. Hoffman said that while only four or five men would be employed in the receiving station at the beginning, twenty to twenty-five farmers would be given places as haulers over the various milk routes. These routes will be studied and definitely mapped out prior to the opening day.

The $250,000 condensery at Clarksburg, W. Va., seventy miles west of Oakland, the largest building in the group of three in this unit, opened about two weeks ago and farmers delivered 22,000 pounds of milk there on the first day. This daily delivery has already increased to 26,000 pounds and Carnation officials are more than satisfied with the result, it was stated. Mr. Hoffman said it was the largest opening day of any plant they had in operation.

The receiving station at Cameron, W. Va., will be completed at an early date also.

Can Enlarge Building

Several months ago when it was decided by the Carnation Company that a station would be built here, it was stated that receipt of 10,000 pounds of milk would be a satisfactory amount for opening day, with a gradual increase to 25,000 pounds and even more in the first year. Mr. Hoffman was of the opinion that the first day's receipts here would surpass the 10,000 pounds.

All milk will be received here from a radius of forty or more miles from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland, and after the cooling process will be taken to Clarksburg in a tank truck for condensing there.

The building being erected here is so constructed that additions to the plant may be made in a short time should the business expand to such an extent that one is needed.

Honesty Rewarded

It still pays to be honest. A boy scout of the Connellsville troop, now camping on Deep Creek can attest to that. In an Oakland store he picked up a folded $10 bill from the floor. He turned it over to V. B. Kelly, the manager; saying perhaps the one who lost it would be asking about it.

Sure enough it wasn't long until a driver for "Farmer Sam's" turkey farm at McHenry came in and reported he was just $10 short and figured he might have dropped it in the store.

"How was it folded?" Mr. Kelly asked. The driver explained satisfactorily and was given the ten spot. "Change that and give the finder a dollar." "Do you think that's enough?" asked Kelly. "Then give him two dollars," said the man.

Traffic Delayed On U. S. Route 50 By Heavy Fog

More Than 100 Vehicles Forced To Stop on Top of Mountain

KEYSER, W. Va., Aug. 16—Fog accompanying a 48-hour-drizzle last night held up East-West traffic at the top of Allegheney Front mountain, Route 50, and late today had given no indication of a let-up.

A Keyser newspaper reported today that "last night nearly 100 cars and trucks stopped at the Skyline Service station, unable to travel farther west." The Skyline Service station is located at the top of Allegheney Front mountain, about twelve miles west of here.

Although a high wind is sweeping over the mountain, the fog and mist all day today continued to lower over the highway.

Late this evening damp, low-hanging clouds darkened Keyser streets, as they have done for the past two days, and mountain tops surrounding the city were shrouded in mist. An intermittent drizzle, accompanied by hilltop fogs, has fallen here during the last two days.

Series of Robberies

Thieves here made their fourth succesful entry this week, when they broke into the office of Snider Brothers, Keyser contracting firm, last night on north Mineral street. A morning checkup today revealed nothing missing. Entry was gained by breaking a window.

The Snider office building is located off Mineral street proper, being situated to the rear of the Mineral County Department of Public Assistance offices.

Wednesday night the George A. Carskadon garage and the South End Market, a grocery store, both located on south Main street were entered and robbed of cash and merchandise totalling $40, and Sunday night the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller, Orchard street, was entered and a pocketbook containing $1.00 in cash and "some valuable papers" was taken.

Jay Phillips Retires after Teaching School in West Virginia 52 Years

Hardy Schools Will Open on September 9

Meeting of Teachers Has Been Called for Saturday Sept. 7

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Aug. 16.—Hardy county schools will open Monday, September 9, according to the announcement of Supt. G. R. Kiracofe. This will include all county elementary schools and the high schools at Moorefield, Wardensville and Mathias. The teachers' meeting has been called for Friday, Sept. 7 at Moorefield.

The new high school building now under construction at Moorefield will be ready for occupancy. The new high school buildings at Mathias and Wardensville will not be in use at any time during the coming school year except that the gymnasium-auditoriums will be ready for use for commencement exercises.

Supt. Kiracofe announced that all teacher appointments had been filled but that a few fuel contracts for individual schools had not been let. The final appointments for county bus drivers for the coming term will be announced next week.

Brief Item

At the meeting of the Hardy County Game and Fish Association Thursday night committees were appointed to work on the opening and dedication of the new bass hatchery September 5. The committees will work with the South Branch Valley Game and Fish Association, which donated the site for the hatchery at Old Fields on Galvin Run. Sportsmen's organizations and civic clubs in the valley are participating in the event which will be a picnic.

Grantsville Car, Stolen Thursday, Is Found by Meadville, Pa., Man

Wisseman's car disappeared Thursday night from the garage at his home near here, and, with the exception of two youthful unknown hitchhikers, who were seen nearby earlier in the evening, he had no idea who might have "appropriated" it. Last evening Mr. Wisseman received a telegram from a man in Meadville, Pa., some 250 miles northwest of here, telling him he had found the missing automobile parked along the roadside at that place. Seeing the apparently abandoned machine, the man had investigated it, discovered Mr. Wisseman's registration card in one of the pockets and communicated with him.

When found the gas tank was empty but so far as is known the machine was undamaged. Constable Daniel W. Hershberger left last night for Meadville to recover the car for the owner.

Dinner Party

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Murphy entertained at a dinner party at their home here last night. Their guests were Mrs. William Downey, Cleveland, O.; Misses Rose Aldridge and Patricia Adams, Mt. Savage, who are visiting them for a few days, Mrs. Catherine Williams and son, Carl Russell, Misses Isabella Lengel, Violet L. Conrad, Myrna S. Allen, Elda L. Miller, Olga L. Marincic, Dorothy L. McCormick and Dorothy G. Miller, members of the Young Ladies Bible class of the Reformed church of Yukon, Pa., who comprise a camping party near here. Games were arranged for the entertainment of the guests during the evening.

All-day Meeting

The Grantsville Methodist church will welcome other churches in the charge at an all-day meeting Sunday. Although such sessions have been held for several years, they have usually taken place at New Germany and this is the first time the Grantsville church has been chosen for the affair. Other churches participating are Johnson, State Line, New Germany, Mt. Zion, and Jennings.

The Rev. Raymond Crowe, of the Johnson Emmanuel church will conduct the services in the morning, scheduled for 11 o'clock. There will be a basket dinner at noon. At the afternoon session the Rev. Dr. C. E. Brandt, Morgantown, W. Va., District Superintendent of the Moorefield District, will deliver the address, which will be followed by a Holy Communion. The local pastor, the Rev. D. R. Carder, will preside in the evening.

Brief Items

The Grantsville Fire Department responded to a call at the west end of town about 9:30 o'clock this morning when the wires under the hood of a State Roads truck caused a short circuit and it was feared gasoline fumes might become ignited. No serious damage was reported however.

The annual Stevanus family reunion will be held tomorrow (Saturday) in the grove on the Springs Road, near the State line. In the event of rain however, the Springs school will accomodate the gathering.

The Sherman Beachy farm has been chosen as the site for the annual Lutheran Sunday school picnic this year. The affair is to be held Sunday. As has been the custom, everyone is expected to bring a basket dinner, but plenty of ice cream and favors will be furnished as usual by the Sunday school.

The Rev. J. C. Beahm will deliver the sermon at the Bethesda church of the Brethren Sunday morning. He has chosen as his topic, "While the Church Waits for the Coming of Her Lord." The services are to be held at 11 o'clock.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Camp this morning at their home at Keysers Ridge. The baby weighed about seven and a half pounds. This is their second child, the other also being a daughter.

Personals

Mrs. Elizabeth Lakin and son Arthur, Cumberland, came this morning to spend the weekend here as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Speicher.

Mrs. Leo Noppenberger, Baltimore, arrived today to spend a week here visiting her sister and brother, Josephine and Hilary Hone.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Getty returned last night from Buffalo, N. Y., where they had been visiting Mrs. Getty's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael P. Powers. Mrs. Powers accompanied them here for a week's visit.

Mrs. Harry Setzer and four children, Coudersport, Pa., arrived yesterday to spend a few weeks here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jason Wilburn, at Jennings, and other relatives in this and the Oakland communities.

Mrs. Harry Liston, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Memorial hospital, Cumberland, Monday, is reported to be improving nicely.

New Milk Plant At Oakland Will Be Opened Soon

Work Is Progressing Satisfactorily on $25,000 Structure

OAKLAND, Aug. 16 — With approximately fifty men at work the Carnation Company is pushing construction on its new $25,000 milk receiving plant, now being erected on the former Oakland hotel property, which the company purchased from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company several months ago.

Glenn Hoffman, plant superintendent, has been in Oakland several days and stated this morning that the building would be completed and the company in all probability ready to begin receiving milk from farmers on the morning of September 16. Construction began just two weeks ago.

Will See Farmers

Between now and September 16 Mr. Hoffman plans to spend much of his time with farmers arranging for milk routes and talking over with them the opportunity that is being afforded by the establishing of a permanent industry in Oakland, which will benefit people within a radius of about fifty miles.

Mr. Hoffman said that while only four or five men would be employed in the receiving station at the beginning, twenty to twenty-five farmers would be given places as haulers over the various milk routes. These routes will be studied and definitely mapped out prior to the opening day.

The $250,000 condensery at Clarksburg, W. Va., seventy miles west of Oakland, the largest building in the group of three in this unit, opened about two weeks ago and farmers delivered 22,000 pounds of milk there on the first day. This daily delivery has already increased to 26,000 pounds and Carnation officials are more than satisfied with the result, it was stated. Mr. Hoffman said it was the largest opening day of any plant they had in operation.

The receiving station at Cameron, W. Va., will be completed at an early date also.

Can Enlarge Building

Several months ago when it was decided by the Carnation Company that a station would be built here, it was stated that receipt of 10,000 pounds of milk would be a satisfactory amount for opening day, with a gradual increase to 25,000 pounds and even more in the first year. Mr. Hoffman was of the opinion that the first day's receipts here would surpass the 10,000 pounds.

All milk will be received here from a radius of forty or more miles from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland, and after the cooling process will be taken to Clarksburg in a tank truck for condensing there.

The building being erected here is so constructed that additions to the plant may be made in a short time should the business expand to such an extent that one is needed.

Honesty Rewarded

It still pays to be honest. A boy scout of the Connellsville troop, now camping on Deep Creek can attest to that. In an Oakland store he picked up a folded $10 bill from the floor. He turned it over to V. B. Kelly, the manager; saying perhaps the one who lost it would be asking about it.

Sure enough it wasn't long until a driver for "Farmer Sam's" turkey farm at McHenry came in and reported he was just $10 short and figured he might have dropped it in the store.

"How was it folded?" Mr. Kelly asked. The driver explained satisfactorily and was given the ten spot. "Change that and give the finder a dollar." "Do you think that's enough?" asked Kelly. "Then give him two dollars," said the man.

Brief Item

The Oakland postoffice is preparing for registration and fingerprinting of all aliens under the new Congressional act. The office will record all aliens fourteen years of age and over. Work will begin August 27 and continue until December 26. Aliens under fourteen will be registered by their parents or guardians but will not be fingerprinted until they reach that age.

Traffic Delayed On U. S. Route 50 By Heavy Fog

More Than 100 Vehicles Forced To Stop on Top of Mountain

KEYSER, W. Va., Aug. 16—Fog accompanying a 48-hour-drizzle last night held up East-West traffic at the top of Allegheney Front mountain, Route 50, and late today had given no indication of a let-up.

A Keyser newspaper reported today that "last night nearly 100 cars and trucks stopped at the Skyline Service station, unable to travel farther west." The Skyline Service station is located at the top of Allegheney Front mountain, about twelve miles west of here.

Although a high wind is sweeping over the mountain, the fog and mist all day today continued to lower over the highway.

Late this evening damp, low-hanging clouds darkened Keyser streets, as they have done for the past two days, and mountain tops surrounding the city were shrouded in mist. An intermittent drizzle, accompanied by hilltop fogs, has fallen here during the last two days.

Series of Robberies

Thieves here made their fourth succesful entry this week, when they broke into the office of Snider Brothers, Keyser contracting firm, last night on north Mineral street. A morning checkup today revealed nothing missing. Entry was gained by breaking a window.

The Snider office building is located off Mineral street proper, being situated to the rear of the Mineral County Department of Public Assistance offices.

Wednesday night the George A. Carskadon garage and the South End Market, a grocery store, both located on south Main street were entered and robbed of cash and merchandise totalling $40, and Sunday night the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller, Orchard street, was entered and a pocketbook containing $1.00 in cash and "some valuable papers" was taken.

Dr. Arena Speaks

Dr. J. M. Arena, Duke University pediatrician, this afternoon addressed Keyser physicians at the fourth post-graduate conference of the Potomac Valley Medical Society at Keyser's Potomac Valley hospital.

Jay Phillips Retires after Teaching School in West Virginia 52 Years

PARSONS, Aug. 16—Jay Phillips, Parsons, is retiring this year after teaching school fifty-two years in West Virginia.

He was born May 5, 1870, on a farm on what is known as Texas mountain, this county. He is a son of the late Arnold and Emily Ann (Yokum) Phillips. His early years were spent in the section of county in which he was born and he taught his first school at Hannahsville, Licking District, at the age of eighteen years. He taught in this same school for seventeen years.

In 1893 he married Martha June Murphy. The children of this union are Mrs. Clyde Grandstaff, Easton, Washington, Mrs. Elmer Cannon, Douglas, W. Va., and Mrs. Gladys Hehle, Parsons, W. Va.

In point of service in years of teaching, only two other teachers who are being retired this year can claim seniority over Mr. Phillips and is from the standpoint of years of teaching, the oldest in Tucker County.

One of his boyhood teachers who is also retiring this year from active service is Dr. D. E. Phillips of Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, W Va.

Mr. Phillips has been actively associated with the religious and civic affairs of the community for many years.

Hardy Schools Will Open on September 9

Meeting of Teachers Has Been Called for Saturday Sept. 7

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Aug. 16.—Hardy county schools will open Monday, September 9, according to the announcement of Supt. G. R. Kiracofe. This will include all county elementary schools and the high schools at Moorefield, Wardensville and Mathias. The teachers' meeting has been called for Friday, Sept. 7 at Moorefield.

The new high school building now under construction at Moorefield will be ready for occupancy. The new high school buildings at Mathias and Wardensville will not be in use at any time during the coming school year except that the gymnasium-auditoriums will be ready for use for commencement exercises.

Supt. Kiracofe announced that all teacher appointments had been filled but that a few fuel contracts for individual schools had not been let. The final appointments for county bus drivers for the coming term will be announced next week.

Brief Item

At the meeting of the Hardy County Game and Fish Association Thursday night committees were appointed to work on the opening and dedication of the new bass hatchery September 5. The committees will work with the South Branch Valley Game and Fish Association, which donated the site for the hatchery at Old Fields on Galvin Run. Sportsmen's organizations and civic clubs in the valley are participating in the event which will be a picnic.

Doubts over England's Power To Resist Nazis Lower Stock Prices

Traders Prefer To Remain on Sidelines during Air Battles

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP) — Financial markets wilted today as the greatest air battle in history raged over England and doubts of the outcome, inspired speculative selling.

Stocks, easy at the start, weakened later on a slight upturn in volume and, at the worst, leaders dropped 1 to 2 points, with a few high-priced issues off as much as 4. At the close, extreme losses were reduced in most cases. Transfers totaled 312,300 shares.

Business news remained an encouraging factor. Eearly figures indicated next week's steel mill operations would hold around recent high marks, with the possibility of a modest increase; retail store sales were up more than seasonably; a sharp rebound was reported in this week's automotive production as assemblies of new 1941 models got under way; expanding rail traffic was viewed as a reflection of the beginning of unprecedented armament spending, and prospects of less onerous excess profits taxes were believed to have brightened in Congress.

Prominent shares on the downside included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Westinghouse, duPont, American Smelting, Kennecott, American Telephone, Loft, International Paper Preferred, Great Northern, Union Carbide and American Can.

Recessions of fractions to 2 in the curb were recorded for Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid "B", Bell Aircraft, Electric Bond & Share and Bath Iron Works. Sales here were around 57,000 shares.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, Aug. 16 (AP)—In the worst break since the market cracked wide open last May, wheat prices today tumbled as much as 5 cents a bushel as the fury of the air attack on England increased.

September wheat fell to 66⅞ at one stage, the lowest quotation posted here since last August 30. This compared with a peak of $1.11 reached before the collapse of more than thirty cents a bushel in May when the Germans pushed into western Europe.

Corn fell more than a cent at one stage, May reaching a new low for the season of 54⅞ while all oats and rye deliveries were at new seasonal lows, rye tumbling as much as 3 cents.

Despite a moderate rally after the midsession break, wheat closed 2⅞-3⅝ lower than yesterday, September 68½-⅝, December 70¼-½. Corn was ⅛-⅝ down, September 11⅛-¼, December 54⅝; oats unchanged to ¼ off; rye 2¼ down; soybeans ½-¾ lower and lard unchanged to 7 higher.

Bond Prices Off

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP)—Selling in the bond market today was little more than a trickle but buyers were wary and prices declined again over a broad front.

Professional traders accounted for a major part of the business. Their operations were small as evidenced by the turnover of $2,726,300 face value.

U. S. governments were traded lightly in a narrow range.

Police Boys Club Bow To Gephart on Forfeit

Gephart won by forfeit over the Boy's Club when the latter failed to appear at the scheduled diamond.

Lyn Lary Released

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16 (AP) — Infielder Lyn Lary was given his unconditional release by the Browns today, apparently ending a Major League career which began in 1929 when the New York Yankees purchased him from Oakland of the Pacific Coast League.

Lary subsequently played with the Boston Red Sox, Washington, the Browns, Cleveland, Brooklyn, the St. Louis Cardinals and then came back to the Browns this season when the Cards released him.

Rain Again Halts Play In Mt. Lake Tourney

OAKLAND, Md., Aug. 16 (AP) — A continuous drizzle of rain prevented play today in the Western Maryland tennis tournament at Mountain Lake Park.

Ralph E. Webster, tournament chairman, said semi-finals in men's and women's singles and doubles would be ran off tomorrow with finals in all events Sunday.

It will be the first time in history that Sunday play has been authorized at Mountain Lake Park.

When rain delayed last year's finals, they were held on Weber's private courts.

The SPORT TRAIL

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 — Pauline Betz, Los Angeles, defeated Helen Jacobs, Los Angeles, 6-1, 6-4.

Thus was the curtain dropped a little further on one of the few remaining links with the sports headlines of the tumultuous 20's. The cold, crisp item from Manchester, Mass., forecast the approaching fadeout of a career touched with stark drama and infinite pathos; the career of Helen Jacobs, the girl who walked in a shadow.

Helen Jacobs, the stepchild of fortune. Helen Jacobs, the gamester whose cup of glory never was filled quite to the brim, whose hour of greatest triumph—her 1933 victory over Helen Wills—was overcast by circumstances beyond her control.

The rivalry between Helen Jacobs and Helen Wills is an epic in sports history. An even dozen times they met over a span of 14 years. Eleven times it was Miss Jacobs who, hiding bitter disappointment behind inscrutable expression, strode to the net to offer congratulations.

The twelfth time fate robbed her of the chance of receiving them. In the 1933 national singles Helen Wills, then Mrs. Moody, walked off the court in the third and deciding set to lose by default.

Mrs. Moody was suffering from a back injury, and with characteristic sportsmanship Miss Jacobs offered no criticism; said her opponent had acted wisely in taking the unprecedented action. Not until two days later was it learned that Miss Jacobs, suffering from a gall bladder ailment, had been playing by virtue of daily stimulants.

Four of the defeats at the hands of Miss Wills came in finals at Wimbledon. Thrice Miss Jacobs bowed to her California rival in national singles finals, and once in the semi-finals.

Through these years of playing second fiddle, Miss Jacobs picked up her share of championships in minor tournaments, and, when her nemesis was not entered, in major events. Four times she won the national championship. Once she won at Wimbledon, and five times she was runner-up.

But always the victories were tainted by the knowledge that she had not met her rival. When Mrs. Moody withdrew from competition after her default in 1933 Miss Jacobs had a field day, winning the national title again in 1934 and 1935. But Mrs. Moody returned to competition, competing at Wimbledon, and again Miss Jacobs was standing in the shadow.

In that 1935 Wimbledon final Miss Jacobs had the long-coveted victory in the palm of her hand. Leading 5-2 in the final set, she saw her advantage fade as if fate were again making her victim of a cruel practical joke. Mrs. Moody won the final set 7-5.

As if mental anguish were not enough, Miss Jacobs suffered her share of physical misfortune through the years. An appendicitis operation, recurring gall bladder attacks, a dislocated thumb, a pulled tendon and a back injury all conspired to add to her woes.

Mrs. Moody is no longer in competition, but her withdrawal has come too late to be of much benefit to Miss Jacobs. A younger crop of stars have come to the front, with Alice Marble, a girl Miss Jacobs used to defeat decisively, now queen of all she surveys.

It virtually was no contest when Miss Marble smothered Miss Jacobs in the recent eastern grass courts tournament. Now Miss Betz, ranked No. 8, wins in straight sets over the veteran.

It would seem that the end of a trail of heartbreak is near

A ROMANTIC INTERLUDE

Theaters Today

Hutton's Orchestra Will Be at Strand Today

Ina Ray Hutton who brings her orchestra to the Strand theater for today only appearing at 2, 4, 7:15 and 9:15 p. m.

On the screen will be "Manhattan Heartbeat", Twentieth Century-Fox picture which tells the story of a boy and a girl who get married on practically nothing a week and then crash head-on with the harsh realities of life.

The leading featured roles are played by Robert Sterling and Virginia Gilmore. Joan Davis and Edmund MacDonald share the comedy honors.

Andy Devine Has Colorful Role

Every film star has a "dream role", one that he wants to play above all others. Such a role has been attained by Andy Devine.

Andy plays the character he always has dreamed of playing in Universal's frontier action epic, "When the Daltons Rode," currently at the New Liberty theater.

Appearing with Randolph Scott, Kay Francis, Brian Donlevy, George Bancroft, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin and other screen notables, Andy has an action-filled role with plenty of opportunity for comedy of his own particular brand.

New Double Bill Is Booked at Embassy

The Embassy theater announces another double bill for tomorrow.

One feature will be "When Tomorrow Comes," a drama featuring Irene Dunn and Charles Boyer, and the other will be "Hell Below," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture with Robert Montgomery, Walter Huston, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante and Robert Young.

The bill today at the Embassy also has two features. One is "Blazing Six Shooters," featuring Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith and the Sons of the Pioneers; the other is "Two Girls on Broadway," a drama with Lana Turner, Joan Blondell and George Murphy in leading roles.

The fourth chapter of "Terry and the Pirates" is also offered.

Bogart Has Bad Man Role at the Garden

Humphrey Bogart is a disillusioned man.

For more than a month he believed he was playing a gay fictitious Robin Hood role in Warner Brothers' "Virginia City," adventure saga of the old West, which is now at the Garden Theatre.

"The character's name was John Murrell," said Bogart, "and to me he did not seem so very bad. He is clever, witty, and the worst deed he does is an attempt to steal a covered wagon train loaded with gold from Errol Flynn and Randolph Scott.

That was up on Arizona's Painted Desert. Then Bogart came back to civilization. He found himself with a day of idleness on his hands and went browsing in a Hollywood book store. One volume caught his eye and he bought it. It was "John Murrell and His Clan."

"What do I find?" Bogart moaned. "John Murrell is no fictional character at all. He was the real thing.

"The real John Murrell was an infamous land priate. From the cradle, his mother taught him to steal."

GREETINGS, GATE!

"Greetings, Gate — let's stratosphate," says Jerry Colonna as he starts skyward in his balloon in search of "Yahoodi." More of Jerry can be seen in an important role in Bob Burns' new Paramount picture, "Comin' Round the Mountain," which comes to the Strand theater tomorrow.

Fourth in Kildare Series Is Offered

"Dr. Kildare's Strange Case," latest "Dr. Kildare" film now showing at the Maryland theater, is a successor to the previous films of the scientific romance series. Fourth of the series, "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case" moves at a brisk pace, with Lionel Barrymore as the irascible Dr. Gillespie, Lew Ayers as the young impulsive Dr. Jimmy Kildare, and Laraine Day as Nurse Mary Lamont in the leading roles.

The film traces the activities of Ayres, young intern assistant to Barrymore, as he takes matters into his own hands to help a surgeon friend who is in trouble over what is thought to be a bungled brain operation. Principles in the cast include Shepperd Strudwick, late of the New York stage, Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn, Nat Pendleton, Walter Kingsford and Alma Kruger.

Highlight of the film comes with the screen's first picturization of the use of insulin shock to bring a demented person back to normalcy.

Traders Prefer To Remain on Sidelines during Air Battles

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP) — Financial markets wilted today as the greatest air battle in history raged over England and doubts of the outcome, inspired speculative selling.

Stocks, easy at the start, weakened later on a slight upturn in volume and, at the worst, leaders dropped 1 to 2 points, with a few high-priced issues off as much as 4. At the close, extreme losses were reduced in most cases. Transfers totaled 312,300 shares.

Business news remained an encouraging factor. Early figures indicated next week's steel mill operations would hold around recent high marks, with the possibility of a modest increase; retail store sales were up more than seasonably; a sharp rebound was reported in this week's automotive production as assemblies of new 1941 models got under way; expanding rail traffic was viewed as a reflection of the beginning of unprecedented armament spending, and prospects of less onerous excess profits taxes were believed to have brightened in Congress.

Prominent shares on the downside included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Westinghouse, duPont, American Smelting, Kennecott, American Telephone, Loft, International Paper Preferred, Great Northern, Union Carbide and American Can.

Recessions of fractions to 2 in the curb were recorded for Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid "B", Bell Aircraft, Electric Bond & Share and Bath Iron Works. Sales here were around 57,000 shares.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, Aug. 16 (AP)—In the worst break since the market cracked wide open last May, wheat prices today tumbled as much as 5 cents a bushel as the fury of the air attack on England increased.

September wheat fell to 66⅞ at one stage, the lowest quotation posted here since last August 30. This compared with a peak of $1.11 reached before the collapse of more than thirty cents a bushel in May when the Germans pushed into western Europe.

Corn fell more than a cent at one stage, May reaching a new low for the season of 54⅞ while all oats and rye deliveries were at new seasonal lows, rye tumbling as much as 3 cents.

Despite a moderate rally after the midsession break, wheat closed 2⅞-3⅝ lower than yesterday, September 68½-⅝, December 70¼-⅛. Corn was ⅛-⅝ down, September 11⅛-¼, December 54⅝; oats unchanged to ¼ off; rye 2¼ down; soybeans ½-¾ lower and lard unchanged to 7 higher.

Lyn Lary Released

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16 (AP) — Infielder Lyn Lary was given his unconditional release by the Browns today, apparently ending a Major League career which began in 1929 when the New York Yankees purchased him from Oakland of the Pacific Coast League.

Lary subsequently played with the Boston Red Sox, Washington, the Browns, Cleveland, Brooklyn, the St. Louis Cardinals and then came back to the Browns this season when the Cards released him.

Rain Again Halts Play In Mt. Lake Tourney

OAKLAND, Md., Aug. 16 (AP) — A continuous drizzle of rain prevented play today in the Western Maryland tennis tournament at Mountain Lake Park.

Ralph E. Webster, tournament chairman, said semi-finals in men's and women's singles and doubles would be ran off tomorrow with finals in all events Sunday.

It will be the first time in history that Sunday play has been authorized at Mountain Lake Park.

When rain delayed last year's finals, they were held on Weber's private courts.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 — Pauline Betz, Los Angeles, defeated Helen Jacobs, Los Angeles, 6-1, 6-4.

Thus was the curtain dropped a little further on one of the few remaining links with the sports headlines of the tumultuous 20's. The cold, crisp item from Manchester, Mass., forecast the approaching fadeout of a career touched with stark drama and infinite pathos; the career of Helen Jacobs, the girl who walked in a shadow.

Helen Jacobs, the stepchild of fortune. Helen Jacobs, the gamester whose cup of glory never was filled quite to the brim, whose hour of greatest triumph—her 1933 victory over Helen Wills—was overcast by circumstances beyond her control.

The rivalry between Helen Jacobs and Helen Wills is an epic in sports history. An even dozen times they met over a span of 14 years. Eleven times it was Miss Jacobs who, hiding bitter disappointment behind inscrutable expression, strode to the net to offer congratulations.

The twelfth time fate robbed her of the chance of receiving them. In the 1933 national singles Helen Wills, then Mrs. Moody, walked off the court in the third and deciding set to lose by default.

Mrs. Moody was suffering from a back injury, and with characteristic sportsmanship Miss Jacobs offered no criticism; said her opponent had acted wisely in taking the unprecedented action. Not until two days later was it learned that Miss Jacobs, suffering from a gall bladder ailment, had been playing by virtue of daily stimulants.

Four of the defeats at the hands of Miss Wills came in finals at Wimbledon. Thrice Miss Jacobs bowed to her California rival in national singles finals, and once in the semi-finals.

Through these years of playing second fiddle, Miss Jacobs picked up her share of championships in minor tournaments, and, when her nemesis was not entered, in major events. Four times she won the national championship. Once she won at Wimbledon, and five times she was runner-up.

But always the victories were tainted by the knowledge that she had not met her rival. When Mrs. Moody withdrew from competition after her default in 1933 Miss Jacobs had a field day, winning the national title again in 1934 and 1935. But Mrs. Moody returned to competition, competing at Wimbledon, and again Miss Jacobs was standing in the shadow.

In that 1935 Wimbledon final Miss Jacobs had the long-coveted victory in the palm of her hand. Leading 5-2 in the final set, she saw her advantage fade as if fate were again making her victim of a cruel practical joke. Mrs. Moody won the final set 7-5.

As if mental anguish were not enough, Miss Jacobs suffered her share of physical misfortune through the years. An appendicitis operation, recurring gall bladder attacks, a dislocated thumb, a pulled tendon and a back injury all conspired to add to her woes.

Mrs. Moody is no longer in competition, but her withdrawal has come too late to be of much benefit to Miss Jacobs. A younger crop of stars have come to the front, with Alice Marble, a girl Miss Jacobs used to defeat decisively, now queen of all she surveys.

It virtually was no contest when Miss Marble smothered Miss Jacobs in the recent eastern grass courts tournament. Now Miss Betz, ranked No. 8, wins in straight sets over the veteran.

It would seem that the end of a trail of heartbreak is near

A ROMANTIC INTERLUDE

Theaters Today

Hutton's Orchestra Will Be at Strand Today

Ina Ray Hutton who brings her orchestra to the Strand theater for today only appearing at 2, 4, 7:15 and 9:15 p. m.

On the screen will be "Manhattan Heartbeat". Twentieth Century-Fox picture which tells the story of a boy and a girl who get married on practically nothing a week and then crash head-on with the harsh realities of life.

The leading featured roles are played by Robert Sterling and Virginia Gilmore. Joan Davis and Edmund MacDonald share the comedy honors.

Andy Devine Has Colorful Role

Every film star has a "dream role", one that he wants to play above all others. Such a role has been attained by Andy Devine.

Andy plays the character he always has dreamed of playing in Universal's frontier action epic, "When the Daltons Rode," currently at the New Liberty theater.

Appearing with Randolph Scott, Kay Francis, Brian Donlevy, George Bancroft, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin and other screen notables, Andy has an action-filled role with plenty of opportunity for comedy of his own particular brand.

New Double Bill Is Booked at Embassy

The Embassy theater announces another double bill for tomorrow.

One feature will be "When Tomorrow Comes," a drama featuring Irene Dunn and Charles Boyer, and the other will be "Hell Below," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture with Robert Montgomery, Walter Huston, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante and Robert Young.

The bill today at the Embassy also has two features. One is "Blazing Six Shooters," featuring Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith and the Sons of the Pioneers; the other is "Two Girls on Broadway," a drama with Lana Turner, Joan Blondell and George Murphy in leading roles.

The fourth chapter of "Terry and the Pirates" is also offered.

Bogart Has Bad Man Role at the Garden

Humphrey Bogart is a disillusioned man.

For more than a month he believed he was playing a gay fictitious Robin Hood role in Warner Brothers' "Virginia City," adventure saga of the old West, which is now at the Garden Theatre.

"The character's name was John Murrell," said Bogart, "and to me character at all. He was the real thing.

"The real John Murrell was an infamous land priate. From the cradle, his mother taught him to steal."

GREETINGS, GATE!

"Greetings, Gate — let's stratosphate," says Jerry Colonna as he starts skyward in his balloon in search of "Yahoodi." More of Jerry can be seen in an important role in Bob Burns' new Paramount picture, "Comin' Round the Mountain," which comes to the Strand theater tomorrow.

he did not seem so very bad. He is clever, witty, and the worst deed he does is an attempt to steal a covered wagon train loaded with gold from Errol Flynn and Randolph Scott.

That was up on Arizona's Painted Desert. Then Bogart came back to civilization. He found himself with a day of idleness on his hands and went browsing in a Hollywood book store. One volume caught his eye and he bought it. It was "John Murrell and His Clan."

"What do I find?" Bogart moaned. "John Murrell is no fictional

Fourth in Kildare Series Is Offered

"Dr. Kildare's Strange Case," latest "Dr. Kildare" film now showing at the Maryland theater, is a successor to the previous films of the scientific romance series. Fourth of the series, "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case" moves at a brisk pace, with Lionel Barrymore as the irascible Dr. Gillespie, Lew Ayers as the young impulsive Dr. Jimmy Kildare, and Laraine Day as Nurse Mary Lamont in the leading roles.

The film traces the activities of Ayres, young intern assistant to Barrymore, as he takes matters into his own hands to help a surgeon friend who is in trouble over what is thought to be a bungled brain operation. Principles in the cast include Shepperd Strudwick, late of the New York stage, Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn, Nat Pendleton, Walter Kingsford and Alma Kruger.

Highlight of the film comes with the screen's first picturization of the use of insulin shock to bring a demented person back to normalcy.

Pittsburgh and St. Louis Split Twin Bill

Two Progressive Teams in National Divide 6-5 and 9-5

Cardinals Take over Fifth Place from Chicago in Nightcap

Pirate Hurlers Fail To Check Redbirds' Sluggers

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16 (AP) — The up and coming Pittsburgh Pirates and the also up and coming St. Louis Cardinals divided a doubleheader today — the Bucs taking the first game 6 to 5 and the Red Birds the second 9 to 5 — but the Cardinals' performance was good enough to take over fifth place from the Chicago Cubs who lost a doubleheader to Cincinnati.

While each team collected 11 hits in the second game, inability of four Pittsburgh hurlers to locate the plate brought about the Pirates' downfall. The Cards drew nine passes and seven figured directly in the scoring.

Foxx Personally Beats Washington

BOSTON, Aug. 16 (AP) — Jimmy Foxx took personal charge of a 7-6 Boston Red Sox victory over the Washington Senators today, breaking a 6-6 deadlock in the tenth inning with his 31st home run of the campaign.

Foxx homered as well in the first inning and the two circuit drives increased his lifetime home run total to 495, putting him in second place ahead of Lou Gehrig, who hit a total of 494 during his career with the New York Yankees. Foxx, however, is still far behind the life time total of more than 700 compiled by Babe Ruth.

Bobby Doerr chipped in with his 14th homer and Gerald Walker and Bill Bloodworth hit for the circuit for the Senators.

Jock Sutherland Looks For the Silver Lining

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—The tall and quiet Scotchman whose name became a battle cry at the university of Pittsburgh two years ago, who stood mildly by while students, alumni, and faculty tore the campus apart in a war of collegiate pride and prejudice—in short, gents, Dr. John Bain Sutherland—is still searching for the silver lining.

Sick of the follies of college football, the good doctor turned to professional football for peace of mind. The Brooklyn Dodgers will play their first game under his leadership next month. Is all well? No, it ain't. Not, as the poet Shelley would say, by a durn sight.

On every kind of campus, ivy-clad or cash-and-carry, football brings its headaches, and Dr. Jock is once more up to his caledonian ears in the aspirin keg.

"The outlook is not bright," said the doctor the other day. Translated from the cautious aberdonian, that means that the outlook is terrible.

Pro Problems Less Complicated

In pro football, to be sure, problems are somewhat less complicated than they are in the college game. You do not have to worry about the principles of higher education. No Robert M. Hutchins gets in your hair, no Chancellor Bowman hollers down your rain-barrel or slides uninvited down your cellar door.

The faculty at dear old Brooklyn Dodger U. consists of Mr. Shipwreck Kelly and Mr. Daniel Topping. Both these boys are highly educated, but both of them are trying to forget it, and their friends are willing to overlook the point so long as Shipwreck and Daniel do not cite distasteful passages from Xenophon over the soda-fountain at the stork club.

In hiring Dr. Sutherland, however, the boys have let a worthy scientist and a good coach in for all the functional troubles known to the game of pro football, a game which is practically brand new to the doctor.

The great ace Parker sixty per cent of the Brooklyn attack in the last few years, busted a leg playing International League baseball last May. The leg has failed to knit properly, and nobody knows when the ace will be able to play football again.

The draft system, which brings up college stars to the pro league every year, has clogged in the Dodgers' case. Nile Kinnick, Iowa hero of 1939 and now a Dodger property, is not sure he wants to be a Dodger property, or any property at all. In short, this backward fellow is thinking twice about pro football, and the Dodgers and Dr. Sutherland are holding the bag.

Then, too, the pro game is strange to Dr. Sutherland and Dr. Sutherland is strange to the pro game. His Pittsburgh system was highly successful in college circles, but only two members of the Brooklyn squad know anything about it. It will take a lot of teaching, especially to fellows accustomed to five or ten years of their own styles of play.

Out of Touch

Dr. Jock does not remember how long it's been since he saw a professional game, but he admits he is pretty completely out of touch. He played a little pro ball right after the war. Then he cut away to begin the career which made him the country's most famous college coach, and the best he can do now, until they begin throwing it at him in hard, solid doses, is to ask questions about big league football and try to find out what's been going on.

"I've followed the boxscores," he said, "and I know the different systems, but that's just the beginning. I'll have to learn by experience what these professional boys can do, and how fast they can do it, and what they are thinking about, and what sort of teaching will help my players and what sort of teaching will just waste their time.

"It's a brand new league, and I've got to learn it by heart. I think we'll go places, but it's going to take time. Right now the outlook is not too good, said the doctor, which I take to mean that outlook is every bit as bum as it appears to be.

Still, when Dr. Sutherland gets organized and learns the rigging, his work in Brooklyn should be extremely interesting to watch. No coach with so great a reputation in the old game has ever come to the new game with so little experience. how fast can the doctor learn, and how fast can he teach? Will his system succeed in pro football? How much of success in the pro game lies in skilled coaching, and how much in the natural progress of brilliant players?

The answers to those questions, and what happened to Nellie after she stole the pearls, will be found in our next thrilling installment.

GAMES SUNDAY

Midland at Hyndman.
Frostburg at Cumberland.
Westvaco at Keyser.

Frostburg's American Legion tossers, who have built up a comfortable lead of two and one-half games in the Bi-State Baseball League largely at the expense of the second-place Westvaco A.A. combination, will play the Cumberland Colts at Community Park here Sunday at 3 o'clock in the feature game of the afternoon.

Today is another open date on the schedule. In other skirmishes Sunday, Westvaco and the Keyser Moose will meet in one battle instead of a doubleheader as previously announced at Keyser and the Midland Red Sox will journey to Hyndman, Pa., for a 2:30 engagement.

Johnson to See Game Here

Walter Johnson, "Big Train" of the major leagues not so many years ago, will attend the game here.

Although the Colts are tied with Midland for fourth place five games behind the Legion crew, the Dobbins have won three of the five tussels from Frostburg this year with Phil Fleming getting the credit for two of the victories and Bill Stevenson for the other.

The Legion's wins over the Colts were checked in by Bernard Baker and Stanley Stetz, Cumberland has lost five of its last seven contests while Frostburg has won eight of its last 11.

Westvaco and Keyser have met four times with the Pulpmen finishing on the long end of the score on three occasions. Frank Steinbugl twirled Manager Tommy McQuire's outfit to victory in two of the tussels while Ed McNichol scored the other Westvaco triumph.

Midland on Rampage

Keyser has been playing an excellent brand of ball of late although holding but one win over the Pulpmen—a 3-2 decision turned in by Johnny Casey. The Moose have won five of their last seven and Westvaco four of its last seven.

Midland will be seeking its fifth victory in seven games with Hyndman. The Red Sox, winners of eight of their last ten, have Jack Cox, Tony Popalo and John Yoder to thank for their triumphs with Popalo checking Hyndman twice.

Jim Stevenson bagged the Pennsylvanians' lone verdict over the Sox. Midland's record in its last ten starts is eight wins and two defeats while Hyndman has dropped 11 of its last dozen encounters.

Paddock Pete Teed Off Or Took SS's "Tip" on Tavern and Passed Out!

Folks—

Far be it from me to add to the wind that was wasted yesterday over the loud speakers at Fairgo. I didn't know whether Paddock Pete went with the wind or parlayed his tip, "Tee Off," and my tip "Tavern," and passed out of the picture entirely.

The last seen of him he was down to shorts and socks and was breezing so . . . see picture below . . . .

He'll be back, I know, the so-and-so, and sure enough he'll put the touch on me. So I'm going back to my first love of the meet "SURE TOUCH" today. It can pop again just as "Brainchild" did.

It may not be a bad hunch to climb aboard Clymene in the last number today . . . I've heard some of the "wise" boys are there. S.S.S.

Dickey's Brother Sold to White Sox

Oklahoma City, Aug. 16 (AP)—It may be brother against brother when the New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox tangle in the American League next season but lanky, likeable George Dickey would rather play against his famous brother, Bill, than with him.

George, known to his teammates as "Skeeter," is a catcher, just like Bill. He was sold to the White Sox yesterday by the Oklahoma City Indians of the Texas League.

"I don't know of any club in either league I'd rather be with," said the 25-year-old backstop.

But what about the Yanks? Wouldn't he rather be playing on the same club with ol' Bill?

"Naw," drawled Skeeter. "The competition would be too stiff. I might never get to play."

Snead Leads Canadian

TORONTO, Aug. 16, (AP) — The putting touch that Sam Snead thought might desert him in the pinches carried him today to a formidable lead at the half-way stage of the Canadian open golf championship.

The former West Virginian now at Shawnee-On-Delaware, who won the title in 1938, toured the difficult Scarboro course in sixty-six, five under par, today after opening yesterday with a sixty-seven. His thirty-six-hole total of 133 put him five strokes ahead of Ray Mangrum of Oakmont, Pa., his nearest rival.

Snead carded thirteen pars and five birdies on today's sensational round and, barring an equally sensational blow-up, seemed all set to carry the title to the United States for the twenty-second consecutive year. The only time he had any difficulty was on the tenth hole, when his ball hit a spectator at the back of the green. He used this break to pick off one of his birdies.

happened to her was that she saw she was up front in the early running of the race and fainted. As a rule they rate her far back and then let her run in time to be about fourth.

The eighth was the answer to the tips that float about the enclosures. James Pal, the early morning favorite, was heavily backed, then the odds shifted when a bundle of dough was dumped on Unlawful. James Pal answered the whispered warning that he was "sore" by going to the front at the break, taking several lengths lead and holding on to beat Curves as he pleased. Unlawful came up to take third.

Cincinnati Snaps Hitting Slump To Beat Cubs Twice

Get 26 Hits in Scoring Double Victory 9-4 and 6-3

CHICAGO, Aug. 16. (AP) — The high-flying Cincinnati Reds snapped out of their long hitting slump today, banging out 26 hits off four pitchers for a double victory over the Chicago Cubs, 9 to 4 and 6 to 3, before 34,001 spectators.

The Reds, whose first place margin had slipped from nine to five games in recent weeks, collected 13 hits in each game as they handed the Cubs their last nine games. Cincinnati tagged big Bill Lee with his 14th mound defeat of the season in the second game, relief Pitcher Johnny Hutchings getting credit for his first big league decision.

The Reds pushed across the winning run of the second game in the seventh on Bill Werber's single, a sacrifice and Linus Frey's single. The Reds added two more in the ninth on two hits sandwiched around a sacrifice and an outfield fly.

Whitey Moore was ahead of the Cubs all the way in the first game, shutting them out until the eighth inning when Hank Leiber connected for a two-run homer, his 14th of the season. The Cubs added two more in the ninth, but Moore easily retired the side before the threat became serious.

Chicago Defeats Detroit by 3-4

DETROIT, Aug. 16. (AP)—The Chicago White Sox, scoring nine runs in the eighth inning and belting three pitchers for 14 hits, beat the Detroit Tigers 3 to 4 in the opener of a three-game series today.

John Duncan Rigney held Detroit to five hits and one unearned run in the first eight innings. In the ninth the Tigers added three runs with doubles by Barney McCosky and Dutch Meyer and Rudy York's homer. McCosky got four safeties in four times at bat.

Tommy Bridges, who was charged with the defeat, received ragged support from his teammates and was relieved in the eighth by Harold Newhouser. Clay Smith pitched the ninth.

Jock's New Job

It may seem odd to suggest that the Rt. Hon. Dr. John Bain Sutherland, better known as Jock, is tackling a new sort of job. The job is still coaching a football team, but this time it is the Brooklyn Dodgers and not the Pittsburgh Panthers.

"This is my first shot at pro football," Jock tells you, "and I'll have to admit it may be something entirely different.

"For example, there's the matter of forward passing. As you know we liked to hang onto the ball at Pittsburgh as long as we could. I used good passers when I had them, but I didn't like to throw the ball around too much when I didn't have them.

"It will be different with the Dodgers. We have the passers, one of the best in Ace Parker, and we'll do our full share of air work. I know also that pro crowds demand a more open or more spectacular game. College football is full of spectacular play, but no fireworks are demanded by the crowds."

Big crowds still remember those slashing Panther backs who ran and blocked with an offensive that was hard to stop. The speed and timing of their running game was something to watch.

"Being new at this pro game," Jock continued, "I may be entirely wrong, but I still don't believe weight is as important as some others do. I'd rather have a fast 190-pound lineman than a slower player at 230 or 240. I still believe in speed far above bulk. That extra yard or two in moving around means more than you might think."

"What about a big, fast man-" I asked Jock.

"As for instance?" Jock asked.

"Well, Cal Hubbard?"

"How many Hubbards do you see around?" Jock said. "I mean 240 or 245-pound players who are just as fast as your backs and ends? We haven't seen many Hubbards in football. Or Fat Henrys either.

Old Pitt Lines

"We had pretty good lines at Pittsburgh," Jock continued. "But most of these forward walls averaged below 190 pounds—around 187 as a rule. They were not so big, but they were fast. Almost as fast as the backs. This gave us team speed.

"It's what I'd like to get with the Dodgers. But this can't come with any rush. It will take time."

Back Again

The pro game is already under way, with two all-star games just on beyond. Football dives upon you from summer skies before you know it.

The 1940 rush may break all records, both among the colleges and the pros. Sport remains the big mind distracter and football leads all other competitions in this respect.

I can't recall a late summer where the college game had so many strong teams coming up—scattered all over the map—Cornell, Princeton, Fordham, Tennessee, Alabama, Tulane, Texas A. and M., Southern Methodist, Ohio State, Minnesota, Michigan, Notre Dame, Southern California, Washington, Duke, Oklahoma, Missouri, Nebraska, L. S. U., Texas, T. C. U., Georgia Tech and Santa Clara. And even this list is only a partial roll call.

There should be at lest thirty-five exceptionally strong college teams this year and they cover all known and explored sections of the map.

Pound for pound, one of the great football players and one of the most amazing is 150-pound Dave O'Brien of Bert Bell's Philadelphia Eagles.

Little Dave has one record that is almost beyond belief. As I recall the vital statistics O'Brien's slight frame has never left a football game through injuries in five years of college and pro play. He finished three years with T. C. U.'s hard schedule minus a dent in his small but solid system. And he was always between a 50 and 60-minute man.

The Phenomenon

He was supposed to be too small for the pro game. But in place of being rumpled into a shapeless mass Little Dave went along passing and running and kicking without any trouble.

You might ask Steve Owen of the N. Y. Giants about him.

"One of the best I ever saw," Steve said, "smart running his team, a fine ball carrier and one of the best of all passers. And above all as tough as green hickory when it comes to taking his share of being knocked about."

O'Brien completed 40 passes in his last two pro games a year ago. That ought to be a record—and I think it is.

FAIRGO Race Notes

It will be late today before anyone knows what jockey will be awarded the gold watch for registering the most points during the Cumberland Fair Association's ten day session. Those in the midst of a stirring battle for the timepiece are: A. F. Martinez, Willie Kelly, Sammy Palumbo and Buddy Root. Anyone of the four can windup on top, therefore their efforts today will be their best.

—o—

A. S. (Red) Bowman, Ned Gaines, Dan Chamblin, J. E. Allison Jr., M. B. (Pappy) Goss and Charlie Feltner, all have a chance to windup the meeting as its leading winning trainer. A watch similar to that awarded the top rider, will go to the leading winning trainer.

—o—

President-General Manager Harry A. Manley hasn't given up hope of reaching the $1,000,000 wagering mark. All that is needed to reach the coveted goal is for Director of Wagering Jimmy Considine's totallizator crew to handle about $125,000 on today's eight races.

—o—

The increase of interest in racing since the first meeting in 1924 has been remarkable. However, it proves that racing will prosper wherever it is offered under the right conditions. To President Manley alone goes the bulk of the credit for the steady climb in attendance and wagering at this track.

Pirate Hurlers Fail To Check Redbirds' Sluggers

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16 (AP) — The up and coming Pittsburgh Pirates and the also up and coming St. Louis Cardinals divided a doubleheader today — the Bucs taking the first game 6 to 5 and the Red Birds the second 9 to 5 — but the Cardinals' performance was good enough to take over fifth place from the Chicago Cubs who lost a doubleheader to Cincinnati.

While each team collected 11 hits in the second game, inability of four Pittsburgh hurlers to locate the plate brought about the Pirates' downfall. The Cards drew nine passes and seven figured directly in the scoring.

Foxx Personally Beats Washington

BOSTON, Aug. 16 (AP) — Jimmy Foxx took personal charge of a 7-6 Boston Red Sox victory over the Washington Senators today, breaking a 6-6 deadlock in the tenth inning with his 31st home run of the campaign.

Foxx homered as well in the first inning and the two circuit drives increased his lifetime home run total to 495, putting him in second place ahead of Lou Gehrig, who hit a total of 494 during his career with the New York Yankees. Foxx, however, is still far behind the life time total of more than 700 compiled by Babe Ruth.

Bobby Doerr chipped in with his 14th homer and Gerald Walker and Bill Bloodworth hit for the circuit for the Senators.

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—The tall and quiet Scotchman whose name became a battle cry at the university of Pittsburgh two years ago, who stood mildly by while students, alumni, and faculty tore the campus apart in a war of collegiate pride and prejudice—in short, gents, Dr. John Bain Sutherland—is still searching for the silver lining.

Sick of the follies of college football, the good doctor turned to professional football for peace of mind. The Brooklyn Dodgers will play their first game under his leadership next month. Is all well? No, it ain't. Not, as the poet Shelley would say, by a durn sight.

On every kind of campus, ivy-clad or cash-and-carry, football brings its headaches, and Dr. Jock is once more up to his caledonian ears in the aspirin keg.

"The outlook is not bright," said the doctor the other day. Translated from the cautious aberdonian, that means that the outlook is terrible.

Pro Problems Less Complicated

In pro football, to be sure, problems are somewhat less complicated than they are in the college game. You do not have to worry about the principles of higher education. No Robert M. Hutchins gets in your hair, no Chancellor Bowman hollers down your rain-barrel or slides uninvited down your cellar door.

The faculty at dear old Brooklyn Dodger U. consists of Mr. Shipwreck Kelly and Mr. Daniel Topping. Both these boys are highly educated, but both of them are trying to forget it, and their friends are willing to overlook the point so long as Shipwreck and Daniel do not cite distasteful passages from Xenophon over the soda-fountain at the stork club.

In hiring Dr. Sutherland, however, the boys have let a worthy scientist and a good coach in for all the functional troubles known to the game of pro football, a game which is practically brand new to the doctor.

The great ace Parker sixty per cent of the Brooklyn attack in the last few years, busted a leg playing International League baseball last May. The leg has failed to knit properly, and nobody knows when the ace will be able to play football again.

The draft system, which brings up college stars to the pro league every year, has clogged in the Dodgers' case. Nile Kinnick, Iowa hero of 1939 and now a Dodger property, is not sure he wants to be a Dodger property, or any property at all. In short, this backward fellow is thinking twice about pro football, and the Dodgers and Dr. Sutherland are holding the bag.

Then, too, the pro game is strange to Dr. Sutherland and Dr. Sutherland is strange to the pro game. His Pittsburgh system was highly successful in college circles, but only two members of the Brooklyn squad know anything about it. It will take a lot of teaching, especially to fellows accustomed to five or ten years of their own styles of play.

Out of Touch

Dr. Jock does not remember how long it's been since he saw a professional game, but he admits he is pretty completely out of touch. He played a little pro ball right after the war. Then he cut away to begin the career which made him the country's most famous college coach, and the best he can do now, until they begin throwing it at him in hard, solid doses, is to ask questions about big league football and try to find out what's been going on.

"I've followed the boxscores," he said, "and I know the different systems, but that's just the beginning. I'll have to learn by experience what these professional boys can do, and how fast they can do it, and what they are thinking about, and what sort of teaching will help my players and what sort of teaching will just waste their time.

"It's a brand new league, and I've got to learn it by heart. I think we'll go places, but it's going to take time. Right now the outlook is not too good, said the doctor, which I take to mean that outlook is every bit as bum as it appears to be.

Still, when Dr. Sutherland gets organized and learns the rigging, his work in Brooklyn should be extremely interesting to watch. No coach with so great a reputation in the old game has ever come to the new game with so little experience how fast can the doctor learn, and how fast can he teach? Will his system succeed in pro football? How much of success in the pro game lies in skilled coaching, and how much in the natural progress of brilliant players?

The answers to those questions, and what happened to Nellie after she stole the pearls, will be found in our next thrilling installment.

Midland	12	13	.480
Hyndman	6	19	.240

Midland at Hyndman.
Frostburg at Cumberland.
Westvaco at Keyser.

Frostburg's American Legion tossers, who have built up a comfortable lead of two and one-half games in the Bi-State Baseball League largely at the expense of the second-place Westvaco A.A. combination, will play the Cumberland Colts at Community Park here Sunday at 3 o'clock in the feature game of the afternoon.

Today is another open date on the schedule. In other skirmishes Sunday, Westvaco and the Keyser Moose will meet in one battle instead of a doubleheader as previously announced at Keyser and the Midland Red Sox will journey to Hyndman, Pa., for a 2:30 engagement.

Johnson to See Game Here

Walter Johnson, "Big Train" of the major leagues not so many years ago, will attend the game here.

Although the Colts are tied with Midland for fourth place five games behind the Legion crew, the Dobbins have won three of the five tussels from Frostburg this year with Phil Fleming getting the credit for two of the victories and Bill Stevenson for the other.

The Legion's wins over the Colts were checked in by Bernard Baker and Stanley Stetz, Cumberland has lost five of its last seven contests while Frostburg has won eight of its last 11.

Westvaco and Keyser have met four times with the Pulpmen finishing on the long end of the score on three occasions. Frank Steinbugl twirled Manager Tommy McQuire's outfit to victory in two of the tussels while Ed McNichol scored the other Westvaco triumph.

Midland on Rampage

Keyser has been playing an excellent brand of ball of late although holding but one win over the Pulpmen—a 3-2 decision turned in by Johnny Casey. The Moose have won five of their last seven and Westvaco four of its last seven.

Midland will be seeking its fifth victory in seven games with Hyndman. The Red Sox, winners of eight of their last ten, have Jack Cox, Tony Popalo and John Yoder to thank for their triumphs with Popalo checking Hyndman twice.

Jim Stevenson bagged the Pennsylvanians' lone verdict over the Sox. Midland's record in its last ten starts is eight wins and two defeats while Hyndman has dropped 11 of its last dozen encounters.

Paddock Pete Teed Off Or Took SS's "Tip" on Tavern and Passed Out!

Folks—

Far be it from me to add to the wind that was wasted yesterday over the loud speakers at Fairgo. I didn't know whether Paddock Pete went with the wind or parlayed his tip, "Tee Off," and my tip "Tavern," and passed out of the picture entirely.

The last seen of him he was down to shorts and socks and was breezing so . . . see picture below . . . .

He'll be back, I know, the so-and-so, and sure enough he'll put the touch on me. So I'm going back to my first love of the meet "SURE TOUCH" today. It can pop again just as "Brainchild" did.

It may not be a bad hunch to climb aboard Clymene in the last number today . . . I've heard some of the "wise" boys are there. S.S.S.

Dickey's Brother Sold to White Sox

Oklahoma City, Aug. 16 (AP)—It may be brother against brother when the New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox tangle in the American League next season but lanky, likeable George Dickey would rather play against his famous brother, Bill, than with him.

George, known to his teammates as "Skeeter," is a catcher, just like Bill. He was sold to the White Sox yesterday by the Oklahoma City Indians of the Texas League.

"I don't know of any club in either league I'd rather be with," said the 25-year-old backstop.

But what about the Yanks? Wouldn't he rather be playing on the same club with ol' Bill?

"Naw," drawled Skeeter. "The competition would be too stiff. I might never get to play."

Snead Leads Canadian

TORONTO, Aug. 16, (AP) — The putting touch that Sam Snead thought might desert him in the pinches carried him today to a formidable lead at the half-way stage of the Canadian open golf championship.

The former West Virginian now at Shawnee-On-Delaware, who won the title in 1938, toured the difficult Scarboro course in sixty-six, five under par, today after opening yesterday with a sixty-seven. His thirty-six-hole total of 133 put him five strokes ahead of Ray Mangrum of Oakmont, Pa., his nearest rival.

Snead carded thirteen pars and five birdies on today's sensational round and, barring an equally sensational blow-up, seemed all set to carry the title to the United States for the twenty-second consecutive year. The only time he had any difficulty was on the tenth hole, when his ball hit a spectator at the back of the green. He used this break to pick off one of his birdies.

happened to her was that she saw she was up front in the early running of the race and fainted. As a rule they rate her far back and then let her run in time to be about fourth.

The eighth was the answer to the tips that float about the enclosures. James Pal, the early morning favorite, was heavily backed, then the odds shifted when a bundle of dough was dumped on Unlawful. James Pal answered the whispered warning that he was "sore" by going to the front at the break, taking several lengths lead and holding on to beat Curves as he pleased. Unlawful came up to take third.

Cincinnati Snaps Hitting Slump To Beat Cubs Twice

Get 26 Hits in Scoring Double Victory 9-4 and 6-3

CHICAGO, Aug. 16. (AP) — The high-flying Cincinnati Reds snapped out of their long hitting slump today, banging out 26 hits off four pitchers for a double victory over the Chicago Cubs, 9 to 4 and 6 to 3, before 34,001 spectators.

The Reds, whose first place margin had slipped from nine to five games in recent weeks, collected 13 hits in each game as they handed the Cubs their last nine games. Cincinnati tagged big Bill Lee with his 14th mound defeat of the season in the second game, relief Pitcher Johnny Hutchings getting credit for his first big league decision.

The Reds pushed across the winning run of the second game in the seventh on Bill Werber's single, a sacrifice and Linus Frey's single. The Reds added two more in the ninth on two hits sandwiched around a sacrifice and an outfield fly.

Whitey Moore was ahead of the Cubs all the way in the first game, shutting them out until the eighth inning when Hank Leiber connected for a two-run homer, his 14th of the season. The Cubs added two more in the ninth, but Moore easily retired the side before the threat became serious.

Chicago Defeats Detroit by 3-4

DETROIT, Aug. 16. (AP)—The Chicago White Sox, scoring nine runs in the eighth inning and belting three pitchers for 14 hits, beat the Detroit Tigers 3 to 4 in the opener of a three-game series today.

John Duncan Rigney held Detroit to five hits and one unearned run in the first eight innings. In the ninth the Tigers added three runs with doubles by Barney McCosky and Dutch Meyer and Rudy York's homer. McCosky got four safeties in four times at bat.

Tommy Bridges, who was charged with the defeat, received ragged support from his teammates and was relieved in the eighth by Harold Newhouser. Clay Smith pitched the ninth.

Jock's New Job

It may seem odd to suggest that the Rt. Hon. Dr. John Bain Sutherland, better known as Jock, is tackling a new sort of job. The job is still coaching a football team, but this time it is the Brooklyn Dodgers and not the Pittsburgh Panthers.

"This is my first shot at pro football," Jock tells you, "and I'll have to admit it may be something entirely different.

"For example, there's the matter of forward passing. As you know we liked to hang onto the ball at Pittsburgh as long as we could. I used good passers when I had them, but I didn't like to throw the ball around too much when I didn't have them.

"It will be different with the Dodgers. We have the passers, one of the best in Ace Parker, and we'll do our full share of air work. I know also that pro crowds demand a more open or more spectacular game. College football is full of spectacular play, but no fireworks are demanded by the crowds."

Big crowds still remember those slashing Panther backs who ran and blocked with an offensive that was hard to stop. The speed and timing of their running game was something to watch.

"Being new at this pro game," Jock continued, "I may be entirely wrong, but I still don't believe weight is as important as some others do. I'd rather have a fast 190-pound lineman than a slower player at 230 or 240. I still believe in speed far above bulk. That extra yard or two in moving around means more than you might think."

"What about a big, fast man-" I asked Jock.

"As for instance?" Jock asked.

"Well, Cal Hubbard?"

"How many Hubbards do you see around?" Jock said. "I mean 240 or 245-pound players who are just as fast as your backs and ends? We haven't seen many Hubbards in football. Or Fat Henrys either.

Old Pitt Lines

"We had pretty good lines at Pittsburgh," Jock continued. "But most of these forward walls averaged below 190 pounds—around 187 as a rule. They were not so big, but they were fast. Almost as fast as the backs. This gave us team speed.

"It's what I'd like to get with the Dodgers. But this can't come with any rush. It will take time."

Back Again

The pro game is already under way, with two all-star games just on beyond. Football dives upon you from summer skies before you know it.

The 1940 rush may break all records, both among the colleges and the pros. Sport remains the big mind distracter and football leads all other competitions in this respect.

I can't recall a late summer where the college game had so many strong teams coming up—scattered all over the map—Cornell, Princeton, Fordham, Tennessee, Alabama, Tulane, Texas A. and M., Southern Methodist, Ohio State, Minnesota, Michigan, Notre Dame, Southern California, Washington, Duke, Oklahoma, Missouri, Nebraska, L. S. U., Texas, T. C. U., Georgia Tech and Santa Clara. And even this list is only a partial roll call.

There should be at lest thirty-five exceptionally strong college teams this year and they cover all known and explored sections of the map.

Little Dave has one record that is almost beyond belief. As I recall the vital statistics O'Brien's slight frame has never left a football game through injuries in five years of college and pro play. He finished three years with T. C. U.'s hard schedule minus a dent in his small but solid system. And he was always between a 50 and 60-minute man.

The Phenomenon

He was supposed to be too small for the pro game. But in place of being rumpled into a shapeless mass Little Dave went along passing and running and kicking without any trouble.

You might ask Steve Owen of the N. Y. Giants about him.

"One of the best I ever saw," Steve said, "smart running his team, a fine ball carrier and one of the best of all passers. And above all as tough as green hickory when it comes to taking his share of being knocked about."

O'Brien completed 40 passes in his last two pro games a year ago. That ought to be a record—and I think it is.

FAIRGO Race Notes

It will be late today before anyone knows what jockey will be awarded the gold watch for registering the most points during the Cumberland Fair Association's ten day session. Those in the midst of a stirring battle for the timepiece are: A. F. Martinez, Willie Kelly, Sammy Palumbo and Buddy Root. Anyone of the four can windup on top, therefore their efforts today will be their best.

—O—

A. S. (Red) Bowman, Ned Gaines, Dan Chamblin, J. E. Allison Jr., M. B. (Pappy) Goss and Charlie Feltner, all have a chance to windup the meeting as its leading win

Nice Prices and Politics Go Good at Fairgo

Harry Nice Sees Horses Pay Off Rotund Returns

Ex-Governor Tells W. Va. Congressman About Dam Project

Horse Falls "Dead" then Comes To and Walks Off Track

What looked like the smallest crowd since opening day for the start of the Fairgo race program was on hand yesterday afternoon shortly before the ponies went postward for the first event but it soon swelled into another banner attendance of about 10,000.

It was a murky day with occasional drizzles but there were lots of politicians on the grounds with the usual number of groundless promises to help brighten things up.

Of the several features the Knights of Columbus handicap, the fifth race of the card, was the feature. It was taken by Pandoramint with R. Haber up.

The sixth saw the gray mare, Dohoev, from the barn of M. B. Goss score her third triumph of the meet, making a show of the field in the one-mile and a quarter event. Balithorn, much heralded but generally forgotten yesterday, came up behind to place second and Yankee Lad was third. Dohoev paid $6.10, $3.80 and $3.00. Bellthorn paid $9.60 and $4.50 and Yankee Lad $3.30.

Daily Double $175.20

Another nice daily double came in the return to those who coupled Strolling In and Black Brigade, the pay-off being $175.20.

Strolling In took the first, coming from way back to nip Gradatim in a stretch drive. Nitanot set the pace to the turn for home then faded to finish third. Sun Scene, favorite with Distant Star, ran dismally for those fans who placed their faith in them. Jockey Willie Obert, the oldest in the business around the half mile tracks, was up on Strolling In.

Black Brigade, shipped here from Ohio, surprised by taking the second in which the highly favored Tavern finished fifth. No fair which forced the early pace finished fourth behind Frederick and Blind Talk. Black Brigade paid $39.50, $11.40, and $5.90.

The steeplechase of the third event saw Thorny Rose under Mr. M. Howard, when running second and making the jump before the grandstand fall hard. Howard escaped injury but the horse apparently broke its neck and did not move. Thorn Rose's fall came just after G. Miller on Playdema was thrown at the second backstretch jump. Miller was taken from the track in the ambulance. Playdema continued to cavort about the track as the horses finished out the course with Leicestershire first, Flying Clown second and Maespur third. The winner paid $8.10, $4.30 and $3.50.

Congressman Jennings Randolph of West Virginia after being introduced as "Jennings Bryan" by General Manager Manley, in one of those slips of the tongue, talked about the Savage River Dam project and a new airport project for this section. He then introduced Bill Kern, football coach at West Virginia University. Kern presented the award to W. B. Haller trainer of Black Brigade.

G. O. P. Field Day

The Republicans had a field day after the third race with Colonel Russler introducing the Republican county committee chairman, Lewis M. Wilson who presented ex-Governor Harry W. Nice. He disputed the credit due on the Savage River dam and told about the county commissioners and state funds. He then presented what he termed the "Queen City Neon Handicap Co." purse.

The fourth at six and one-half furlongs went to Pushkin an 8 to 1 shot which came from behind, took the rail and beat off the fast closing favorites, Brown Chain and Serrano. The latter was pinched off on the club house turn then went to the outside and finished fastest of all. Pushkin paid $17.10; 8.20 and $4.60; Jockey W. McDonald was up.

The K. of C. Purse was taken by Pandoramint with Irish Oak, a long shot, second and Way Out, third.

The S. Flammia mare came on in a great stretch run to stave off the gallant bid of Irish Oak while Buds Light came up to cop fourth money. The winner returned only $5.00 to win while Irish Oak returned $42.60 to place.

A photo finish marked the end of the seventh, the auto accessories purse which saw Elamp, an outsider, scoring over Questre with Lady Solace third. A. F. Martinez was on Elamp which was up in time to win by a whisker with Lady Solace, far back in the early running, coming up on the inside. She appeared headed to win when she faltered just short of the wire in her drive.

"Dead" Horse Comes To

Whatever it was they gave Thorny Rose after her fall and apparent demise during the running of the steeplechase, she was showing signs of life right after the speechmaking subsided.

She came to sufficiently to be propped up, and by the time the seventh race was on she was being led about the infield. The horse will probably recover.

One wag remarked that what

Get-away Card at Fairgo Offers No Unusual Events

Fraternal Order Eagles Handicap Feature on Program

With the mutuel betting today assured of carrying the play over an average of $102,000 daily, the sixteenth annual Cumberland Fair race meet closes with the usual eight race card this afternoon. There are three features of today's card with the Fraternal Order of Eagles Handicap, the fifth event on the program, banner event of the getaway program. A banner crowd is expected and the mutuels should click to the tune of more than $120,000.

Sure Touch which surprised on Thursday is favored to take the Eagles cap at a mile and a sixteenth. Sky Hostess, twice winner here, is picked to place with Ken's Pop getting the call for show. Martha's Queen, winner this week, can cop the purse as can Channing which is now racing at top form and is first on the also eligible list.

Pop's Sister scratched out of the first yesterday is favored to take the opening of today's card at five furlongs for two year olds. It is an entry with Ophelia II. Misty Eye, hot favorite that ran wide this week, gets the call for second with Delhi Dan third.

Westing, winner last week, comes back in the second today in the six and a half second for three year olds and up. Blue Prelude is given the call for place with Shesinit third if she's in it.

The Bedford Handicap is the caption for the steeplechase third, with Quakerstreet favored to win if able to get in the field. Tam O'Shanter is selected second and War Port third. War Port and Quakerstreet are on the also eligible list.

The fourth is at five furlongs for three year olds with Colored Post picked to lead the pack home. Paper Girl is second choice and Buddy Al third.

The sixth is the Cumberland Drug Co. purse at a mile and one sixteenth with Lyde, two time winner here, figured to make it three in a row. John Werring and Congo Prince are favored to take the place and show.

Dressmaker is given the chance to make up for past disappointments in the seventh at one and one-sixteenth miles. Razzle, third Wednesday, and Lacey Miss are given the call for place and show.

Clymene is picked to take the final of the program and the closing number of the race meet. First Fling is chosen for second and Happy Miracle, close up twice, is given the show hole call. In the field will be several horses making their first start here and an upset is highly probable in the closing number.

Unless a high wind prevails through the night with sunshine this morning the track probably will be off this afternoon and, as today, most anything can happen on a Fairgo off track.

Feller Off Bad But Beats Browns

CLEVELAND, Aug. 16, (AP) — The St. Louis Browns pounded Bob Feller for six hits and two runs in the first two innings today, but the Cleveland ace then settled down and wound up posting his twenty-first victory of the year. The 8 to 3 triumph enabled the Indians to widen their first-place lead over Detroit to three games.

Feller allowed twelve hits and fanned three batters, running his season strikeout total to two hundred. The victory was the Tribe's fifth in a row.

A ladies day crowd of 12,000 saw the Redskins blast the offerings of Eldon Auker and Bill Trotter for 13 hits, including triplets by Roy Weatherly and Ben Chapman. Auker, who retired in the eighth for a pinch hitter, was charged with the defeat.

Rip Radcliff, the league's leading batter, led the attack against Feller with four singles. Feller, who has lost six games, had good control, throughout and walked only one man.

Bees Down Dodgers In 12 Innings

Finals in Oakland Golf Tourney Sunday

OAKLAND, Aug. 16. —Finals in the top flight of the golf tournament now being played at the municipal golf course, will be held on Sunday, with Thomas V. Baucom meeting the winner of the F. D. Bittle-Lindsey Gonder match. Baucom eliminated I. J. Bosley Wednesday in an eighteen-hole match. Bittle also previously eliminated Ed. Lanzer last year's runner-up, and Gonder defeated Garthright May, last year's winner.

In the women's tournament Mrs. I. J. Bosley will play Dorothy Spencer for the championship. The latter won the tourney last year. She is the sixteen-year-old daughter of the golf pro, James Spencer.

The second flight is not so far advanced. James Pollock has reached the finals here and Bruce Smouse the semi-finals. Smouse will play the winner of the W. O. Davis-D. E. Offutt match. Ward Hinebaugh and John Stevenson are the finalists in the third flight.

The club tournament will start as soon as this present one is completed, according to Mr. Spencer.

Interest in the course has increased this year with the records showing that more than 1,200 people have used it this season, many of them strangers. Drinking fountains are now being placed at Nos. 2, 5 and 7 tees, for the convenience of players.

Legion Upsets Boals In Tri-Towns League

Westernport, Aug. 16 — WPA-Legion tossers upset the Boals 6-2 in a Tri-Towns Softball League game yesterday. Joe Clark gave the losers only two hits and struck out six. Frankie Greco had two for three and Butler smashed a triple and single for the Legion. Saleskey had a homer for the losers. The scheduled game between the Mosts and McIntyre Bakers was postponed. The score:

BOALS	000	002	0—2 3 2

Boals—Campbell and Rounds. Legion—Clark and Butler.

Nice Prices and Politics Go Good at Fairgo

Horse Falls "Dead" then Comes To and Walks Off Track

What looked like the smallest crowd since opening day for the start of the Fairgo race program was on hand yesterday afternoon shortly before the ponies went postward for the first event but it soon swelled into another banner attendance of about 10,000.

It was a murky day with occasional drizzles but there were lots of politicians on the grounds with the usual number of groundless promises to help brighten things up.

Of the several features the Knights of Columbus handicap, the fifth race of the card, was the feature. It was taken by Pandoramint with R. Haber up.

The sixth saw the gray mare, Dohoev, from the barn of M. B. Goss score her third triumph of the meet, making a show of the field in the one-mile and a quarter event. Balithorn, much heralded but generally forgotten yesterday, came up behind to place second and Yankee Lad was third. Dohoev paid $6.10, $3.80 and $3.00, Bellthorn paid $9.60 and $4.50 and Yankee Lad $3.30.

Daily Double $175.20

Another nice daily double came in the return to those who coupled Strolling In and Black Brigade, the pay-off being $175.20.

Strolling In took the first, coming from way back to nip Gradatim in a stretch drive. Nitanot set the pace to the turn for home then faded to finish third. Sun Scene, favorite with Distant Star, ran dismally for those fans who placed their faith in them. Jockey Willie Obert, the oldest in the business around the half mile tracks, was up on Strolling In.

Black Brigade, shipped here from Ohio, surprised by taking the second in which the highly favored Tavern finished fifth. No fair which forced the early pace finished fourth behind Frederick and Blind Talk. Black Brigade paid $39.50, $11.40, and $5.90.

The steeplechase of the third event saw Thorny Rose under Mr. M. Howard, when running second and making the jump before the grandstand fall hard. Howard escaped injury but the horse apparently broke its neck and did not move. Thorn Rose's fall came just after G. Miller on Playdema was thrown at the second backstretch jump. Miller was taken from the track in the ambulance. Playdema continued to cavort about the track as the horses finished out the course with Leicestershire first, Flying Clown second and Maespur third. The winner paid $8.10, $4.30 and $3.50.

Congressman Jennings Randolph of West Virginia after being introduced as "Jennings Bryan" by General Manager Manley, in one of those slips of the tongue, talked about the Savage River Dam project and a new airport project for this section. He then introduced Bill Kern, football coach at West Virginia University. Kern presented the award to W. B. Haller trainer of Black Brigade.

G. O. P. Field Day

The Republicans had a field day after the third race with Colonel Russler introducing the Republican county committee chairman, Lewis M. Wilson who presented ex-Governor Harry W. Nice. He disputed the credit due on the Savage River dam and told about the county commissioners and state funds. He then presented what he termed the "Queen City Neon Handicap Co." purse.

The fourth at six and one-half furlongs went to Pushkin at 8 to 1 shot which came from behind, took the rail and beat off the fast closing favorites, Brown Chain and Serrano. The latter was pinched off on the club house turn then went to the outside and finished fastest of all. Pushkin paid $17.10; 8.20 and $4.60; Jockey W. McDonald was up.

The K. of C. Purse was taken by Pandoramint with Irish Oak, a long shot, second and Way Out, third.

The S. Flammia mare came on in a great stretch run to stave off the gallant bid of Irish Oak while Buds Light came up to cop fourth money. The winner returned only $5.00 to win while Irish Oak returned $42.60 to place.

A photo finish marked the end of the seventh, the auto accessories purse which saw Elamp, an outsider, scoring over Questre with Lady Solace third. A. F. Martinez was on Elamp which was up in time to win by a whisker with Lady Solace, far back in the early running, coming up on the inside. She appeared headed to win when she faltered just short of the wire in her drive.

"Dead" Horse Comes To

Whatever it was they gave Thorny Rose after her fall and apparent demise during the running of the steeplechase, she was showing signs of life right after the speechmaking subsided.

She came to sufficiently to be propped up, and by the time the seventh race was on she was being led about the infield. The horse will probably recover.

One wag remarked that what

Fraternal Order Eagles Handicap Feature on Program

With the mutuel betting today assured of carrying the play over an average of $102,000 daily, the sixteenth annual Cumberland Fair race meet closes with the usual eight race card this afternoon. There are three features of today's card with the Fraternal Order of Eagles Handicap, the fifth event on the program, banner event of the get-away program. A banner crowd is expected and the mutuels should click to the tune of more than $120,000.

Sure Touch which surprised on Thursday is favored to take the Eagles 'cap at a mile and a sixteenth. Sky Hostess, twice winner here, is picked to place with Ken's Pop getting the call for show. Martha's Queen, winner this week, can cop the purse as can Channing which is now racing at top form and is first on the also eligible list.

Pop's Sister scratched out of the first yesterday is favored to take the opening of today's card at five furlongs for two year olds. It is an entry with Ophelia II. Misty Eye, hot favorite that ran wide this week, gets the call for second with Delhi Dan third.

Westing, winner last week, comes back in the second today in the six and a half second for three year olds and up. Blue Prelude is given the call for place with Shesinit third if she's in it.

The Bedford Handicap is the caption for the steeplechase third, with Quakerstreet favored to win if able to get in the field. Tam O'Shanter is selected second and War Port third. War Port and Quakerstreet are on the also eligible list.

The fourth is at five furlongs for three year olds with Colored Post picked to lead the pack home. Paper Girl is second choice and Buddy Al third.

The sixth is the Cumberland Drug Co. purse at a mile and one sixteenth with Lyde, two time winner here, figured to make it three in a row. John Werring and Congo Prince are favored to take the place and show.

Dressmaker is given the chance to make up for past disappointments in the seventh at one and one-sixteenth miles. Razzle, third Wednesday, and Lacey Miss are given the call for place and show.

Clymene is picked to take the final of the program and the closing number of the race meet. First Fling is chosen for second and Happy Miracle, close up twice, is given the show hole call. In the field will be several horses making their first start here and an upset is highly probable in the closing number.

Unless a high wind prevails through the night with sunshine this morning the track probably will be off this afternoon and, as today, most anything can happen on a Fairgo off track.

Feller Off Bad But Beats Browns

CLEVELAND, Aug. 16, (AP) — The St. Louis Browns pounded Bob Feller for six hits and two runs in the first two innings today, but the Cleveland ace then settled down and wound up posting his twenty-first victory of the year. The 8 to 3 triumph enabled the Indians to widen their first-place lead over Detroit to three games.

Feller allowed twelve hits and fanned three batters, running his season strikeout total to two hundred. The victory was the Tribe's fifth in a row.

A ladies day crowd of 12,000 saw the Redskins blast the offerings of Eldon Auker and Bill Trotter for 13 hits, including triplets by Roy Weatherly and Ben Chapman. Auker, who retired in the eighth for a pinch hitter, was charged with the defeat.

Rip Radcliff, the league's leading batter, led the attack against Feller with four singles. Feller, who has lost six games, had good control, throughout and walked only one man.

Bees Down Dodgers In 12 Innings

Finals in Oakland Golf Tourney Sunday

OAKLAND, Aug. 16. —Finals in the top flight of the golf tournament now being played at the municipal golf course, will be held on Sunday, with Thomas V. Baucom meeting the winner of the F. D. Bittle-Lindsey Gonder match. Baucom eliminated I. J. Bosley Wednesday in an eighteen-hole match. Baucom also previously eliminated Ed. Lanzer last year's runner-up, and Gonder defeated Garthright May, last year's winner.

In the women's tournament Mrs. I. J. Bosley will play Dorothy Spencer for the championship. The latter won the tourney last year. She is the sixteen-year-old daughter of the golf pro, James Spencer.

The second flight is not so far advanced. James Pollock has reached the finals here and Bruce Smouse the semi-finals. Smouse will play the winner of the W. O. Davis-D. E. Offutt match. Ward Hinebaugh and John Stevenson are the finalists in the third flight.

The club tournament will start as soon as this present one is completed, according to Mr. Spencer.

Interest in the course has increased this year with the records showing that more than 1,200 people have used it this season, many of them strangers. Drinking fountains are now being placed at Nos. 2, 5 and 7 tees, for the convenience of players.

Legion Upsets Boals In Tri-Towns League

Westernport, Aug. 16 — WPA-Legion tossers upset the Boals 6-2 in a Tri-Towns Softball League game yesterday. Joe Clark gave the losers only two hits and struck out six. Frankie Greco had two for three and Butler smashed a triple and single for the Legion. Saleskey had a homer for the losers. The scheduled game between the Mosts and McIntyre Bakers was postponed. The score:

BOALS	000 002 0—2 3 2
LEGION	001 203 x—6 7 1

Boals—Campbell and Rounds. Legion—Clark and Butler.

Gateway Chatter

by

News Staff Members

Readers of this column will recall that a few days ago an item appeared in Gateway Chatter about Mayor Harry Irvine's bed collapsing soon after he fell asleep after a strenuous day of housecleaning at his home.

"His Honor" is in receipt of a letter which no doubt will be as interesting to Gateway readers as it was to the mayor, who has drawn the proffer of a week's lodging at the Ambassador hotel in Washington, D. C., from it.

The letter came from M. A. Gustrafson, supervisor of sales for a bed manufacturing concern.

"While visiting with my sales manager of the Pittsburgh district and enjoying your fair and races," the letter states, "I happened to notice in the Gateway Chatter column in the morning newspaper your interview with regard to your unusual bad night's rest."

Facetiously, Mr. Gustrafson called attention to a new style bed his firm is getting out, which will not be on the market until October 1 but which will be installed in many hotels.

"I might also mention," the letter continued, "that the Ambassador hotel in the heart of our capital city is fully equipped and enjoying that unusual pleasure of being able to completely reserve our entire bed room reservation by 9 p. m. each evening. Some say this is due to the unrest over the many bills before Congress and especially the different war measures.

"We feel that within the next months to come there will be many changes made especially in Washington. As our chairman of the board, Mr. Willkie will offer to the public in general many good suggestions that will be very comforting.

The writer then offered the mayor, at the expense of the bed company, "a week at the Ambassador" so that he could "be convinced that even though your duties are strenuous and nerve-racking, you will be completely recovered and return one of our great boosters."

The week of pleasure, without cost to you," the letter continued, "coupled with many interesting events to crowd your daily pleasure into that happy realization that at night you will enjoy that beautiful rest" in one of the company's beds.

Urging a reply to the invitation in the writer's care at the hotel named, he asked forgiveness for his over-zealous feelings but said he wanted the mayor to know that there is real comfort in this particular make of bed.

Local Library Has Unusual Exhibit At Fairgrounds

"Know America — Read Books about Your Country" is the theme of the Cumberland Free Public Library's exhibit at the Cumberland Fair.

The Library display is housed in the exhibit hall at the left of the entrance. Books, maps and posters are used to portray the development of the great republic.

Descriptive literature from each of the forty-eight states of the union includes the state motto, the state flower, the state song and the great seal of each in addition to many beautifully illustrated pamphlets.

"Maryland — America in Miniature" issued by the Maryland Publicity Commission is among the more attractive publications displayed.

The much talked about "Maryland Guide", compiled by the Federal Writers' Project is also on display at the library booth. The library owns several copies of this interesting volume which will be available for circulation next week.

The exhibit was planned and arranged by Miss Codie Whitman of the library staff.

Registration of Aliens To Start Here August 27

Persons Who Fail To Comply Can Be Fined or Sent to Jail

Postmaster James C. Schriver said yesterday that registration of aliens in the Cumberland district would start Tuesday, August 27 and continue until December 26.

Shriver said all the work would be done by regular employes at the local post office.

Under the federal law registration of aliens is compulsory. Aliens 14 years of age and over must register in person and be fingerprinted. Those under 14 must be registered by their parents or guardians and will not be fingerprinted. However, when they become 14 they must be fingerprinted.

A penalty of a $1,000 fine or six months in prison or both is provided for failure to register. There will be no cost for the registration and those enrolled will receive a receipt card. In case of a change in address the Immigration and Naturalization Service must be notified.

An alien is defined as a person not born in the United States or its possessions and who is not a naturalized citizen. Persons who have taken out their first papers must register.

The registration forms ask for the name, address(name used when entering the U. S., names used since, where born, what nation you are a citizen of race married status, height, weight, when entered the U. S. and how arrived, status of entering such as visitor, student, how long you expect to stay, occupation and employer, activities for past five years, military record, relatives in U. S., if arrested and convicted, if applied for citizenship, and if you are affiliated with any organizations devoted to influencing political or public relations of a foreign government.

Moose Lodge Is Conducting Drive For New Members

Class Will Be in Memory of Frederick N. Zihlman

Cumberland Lodge No. 271 Loyal Order of Moose is conducting a membership drive, the class in memory of Frederick "Nick" Zihlman who was a supreme governor of the Moose organization.

The officers of the Moose Band, Charles McCullough, Junior Governor, A. R. Serf, W. L. Brunk, Ralph Baird and Bradford Keyser, compose the committee who will conduct the drive.

The slogan adopted is "I would rather go barefooted through the snow as did the soldiers of the Revolutionary War at Valley Forge than to surrender one iota of the liberty I now enjoy in this the greatest country in all the world."

Governor Erling announces that the Border States Association will hold its annual convention in Baltimore August 31 to September 2, and advises that free transportation to and from Baltimore over the B. & O. railroad will be furnished to all members of Cumberland lodge No. 271 whose receipts show them to be in good standing. The time for departure and return will be published at a later date.

The Moose Band with Charles McCullough, president, will go to Moorefield, W. Va., Labor Day to participate in a parade being sponsored by the Moorefield Moose Lodge. A bus will leave the Moose home, corner of Beall and Smallwood streets promptly at 9:30 a. m., Monday, Sept. 2.

Vocal Solos and Cornet Duet Will Feature Band Concert at Park Sunday

Director Joseph Fradiska of the American Legion Band Arranges Fine Program

Three vocal solos and a cornet duet will feature the concert of the American Legion band tomorrow evening at 7:30 p. m., in the amphitheater of Constitution Park.

Little Anna Margaret Gillard, ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Gillard, Valley street, and a niece of Joseph M. Fradiska, director of the Legion band, will make her public debut as soloist by singing the "Woodpecker's Song" and "Oh Johnny, Oh Johnny, Oh," the second and sixth numbers on the program.

Dr. W. E. Capaldi, Ph. T., a member of the band, will sing "I Am an American" and will team with Harry M. Snowden in a cornet duet entitled, "Ida and Dotty Polka."

To Play March Hit

Director Fradiska last night said that the first number on the program will be the latest march hit, "Semper Paratus", which was written by Capt. Francis S. Van Baskerck, of the United States Coast Guard.

As a grand finale the American, Maryland and American Legion flags will be unfurled during the playing of "God Bless America" and the salute to the flag will be given by the Legion's six-man color guard.

"Yankee Rhythm", a melody of popular an patriotic songs including "Yandee Doodle, Turkey in the Straw, and The Man on the Flying Trapeze" will be played by special request.

Swimmers To Perform

Following the band program the Cumberland Aquatic Club will present a swimming and diving exhibition in the park swimming pool at 9 p. m.

The band program is as follows:

March, "Semper Paratus", by Captain Francis Saltus Van Baskerck.

"Woodpecker's Song", by Eldo Di Lazzaro, solo by Anna Margaret Gillard.

March, "Washington Grays," by C. S. Grapulla.

Cornet duet, "Ida and Dotty Polka," by F. H. Losey, to be played by Dr. W. E. Capaldi and Harry M. Snowden.

Overture, "Orpheus," by Offenback.

"Oh Johnny, Oh Johnny, Oh," by A. Olman, solo by Anna Margaret Gillard.

"El Serino," Mexican Serenade, by G. E. Holmes.

"Yankee Rhythm," a melody, by Mayhew Lake.

Vocal solo, "I Am an American", soloist Dr. W. E. Capaldi.

Selection, "God Bless America".

Selection, "The Star Spangled Banner."

Illness Is Fatal To Mrs. Sarver

Wife of Scott W. Sarver Dies at Her Home Here

Mrs. Agnes O. Sarver, 52, wife of Scott W. Sarver, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at her home, 202 East Laing avenue, following a brief illness.

Born in Preston county, W. Va., Mrs. Sarver was a daughter of the late Henry and Agnes Hennessey. She was a member of the Methodist church.

Surviving, besides her husband, are five sons, Herbert F., Homer C., Scott R., Benjamin F. and Franklin B. Sarver; and three daughters, Mrs. Mary A. Zahradka, Mrs. Thomas Burley and Miss Freda A. Sarver, all of Cumberland.

Trustees of Defunct Isaac Walton League File Unusual Suit Here

An unusual suit was docketed in circuit court yesterday by F. Brooke Whiting attorney, on behalf of Dr. A. H. Hawkins and Rawley K. Swayne, only surviving trustees of the defunct Isaac Walton League of America, Chapter 6 of Allegany county.

The petition asks the court to clear up several knotty problems for the trustees in regard to a tract of land held in trust for the defunct league, which the trustees want to lease and option for sale to the Consolidated Orchard Corporation, a West Virginia concern.

The trustees were given the sum of $2,464.13 remaining after the 1927 Maryland Assembly had abolished the old Board of Wardens for Allegany county, created in 1916, and substituted the present setup. The money was to be used in the propagation of wild life and the trustees purchased a parcel of land from Thomas J. Malamphy and his wife for this purpose.

The deed was made in May of 1931 and the bill states no member of the league contributed to the purchase of the land and asks the court to place the funds from the sale of the land, if made, at the disposal of J. Wesley Kelley, Cumberland, and Hugh Stevenson, of Ellerslie, for use in propagation of wild life, the original purpose intended.

Counsel for the orchard company held up the leases and option until the courts determine the proper disposition of the funds that may result from the sale.

Judge D. Lindley Sloan signed an order for the defendants, summoning all officers of the defunct league, to appear in court on or before September 18 to show cause why the land should not be sold and the funds placed at the disposal of Mr. Kelley and Mr. Stevenson for use as prescribed.

J. Milton Patterson, Baltimore, first vice president, an executive officer of the league, Dr. G. Frank Malin, secretary and E. Lee LeCompte, state game warden are named as defendants.

It was also ordered by the court that F. Brooke Whiting should be paid counsel fees for preparing the bill of complaint.

Randolph and Nice Speak at Fairgo Track

Former Governor Holds Informal Reception Later at Hotel Here

Among the distinguished visitors in Cumberland yesterday who attended the races at Fairgo were former Governor Harry W. Nice, Republican nominee for United States Senator in Maryland; Representative Jennings Randolph, of Bill Kern,an-dolp West Virginia; Bill Kern, football coach at West Virginia university at Morgantown; Walter A. McClean, of Baltimore, former president of the Board of Supervisors of Elections and Chester Hawkins, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission.

Harry W. Nice

Randolph was introduced by Harry A. Manley, president of the fair association after the second race yesterday. The representative in a brief address said he was glad to be back in Western Maryland to attend the races and meet old friends.

He spoke of the development of the Savage river dam project near Bloomington and said he had been interested in it for several years. Randolph declared that erection of the dam is a great thing for Western Maryland and nearby West Virginia sections and that it would aid in the industrial development of both Maryland and West Virginia by insuring adequate water supplies for industries in the Potomac river valley.

Advocates Airport Here

The West Virginian urged that Maryland and West Virginia cooperate in building a modern airport near Cumberland, which he declared would fit into the national defense program of the nation and would mean much to the further development of this area.

Randolph then introduced Kern, who presented the trophy to Robert B. Porter, owner of Black Brigade, which won "The Bill Kern" second race feature.

Former Governor Harry W. Nice was introduced by Lewis M. Wilson, newly elected chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Allegany county, after the conclusion of the third race.

Mr. Nice, like Randolph, said he, too, was glad to be back in Cumberland, to attend the races, meet old friends and make new ones. He congratulated Randolph for the splendid talk he made, but in speaking of the Savage river dam project he declared that credit for originating the project should go to the Allegany county commissioners, who several years ago started working for the dam.

Randolph

Mr. Nice said he knew whereof he spoke as it was his pleasure while serving as governor of Maryland to sign the enabling act making it possible for Allegany county to borrow $1,000,000 to be used on the Savage river project to appoint the Upper Potomac River Commission, which is still functioning in connection with the project.

Gratified Over Support

Following the races, the former governor held an informal reception at the Fort Cumberland hotel, where he was greeted by many Republicans. Mr. Nice was enthusiastic about his chances of election to the Senate in November as well as for the election of Wendell Willkie as president and the success of the Republican ticket. He expressed himself as highly gratified over the cordial support he is receiving from many old-time Democrats who are going over to Willkie.

Mr. Nice accompanied by Mr. McClean, Deeley K. Nice, his nephew; Frank Small, Jr., a member of the racing commission, all of Baltimore and J. Glenn Beall, of Frostburg, former chairman of the State Roads Commission, left here early last night for Keyser, W. Va., and boarded a B. and O. train for Ellwood, Ind., where today they will attend the formal notification of Wendell Willkie as the Republican presidential nominee.

Three Births Are Reported Here

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Preaskorn, of Silver street, Ridgeley, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter last night at Allegany hospital.

A daughter was born yesterday morning at Allegany hospital to Mr. and Mrs. John Phillips, of Main street, Ridgeley, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Peters, of Paw Paw, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Five Men Are Eligible for Game Warden

Names Are Certified to Allegany County Advisory Council

The names of the five high men in the recent examination at Fort Hill high school for the post of district deputy game warden of Allegany county have been received by Arthur P. Hoffa, president of the Allegany County Council of the Maryland Inland Fish and Game Commission, and will be submitted to the county council for recommendation at a meeting next Wednesday evening at eight o'clock in the court house.

Twenty-eight men took the examination several weeks ago and the names of the five men who turned in the highest averages have been turned over to the advisory council by State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones.

President Hoffa refused to divulge the names of the five successful candidates pending action by the county council.

The vacancy was caused by the dismissal of Harry R. Kenney, of this city, who had served as district deputy game warden for fifteen years.

Cumberland Man Is Sent to Jail

Henry J. Fry Must Serve 90 Days on Motor Vehicle Charge

Out of the frying pan into the fire was the predicament a former Cumberland man found himself in yesterday.

Henry Joseph Fry was sentenced to ninety days in the county jail after he pleaded guilty in Trial Magistrates court to a charge of "unauthorized use of a motor vehicle." He was accused of taking the car of F. P. Montgomery, 12 Race street, Nov. 25, 1939.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., who presided at the hearing, said Fry was released Aug. 13 from the Maryland House of Correction after serving a six months' sentence for stealing $5 in Frederick. He was brought to stand trial following his release.

Three witnesses for the state were present at the hearing, but they were not required to testify. They were R. W. Parker and Elmer Powell, of Picardy, and George McKenzie, of Flintstone.

Sergt. James T. Knight, of the State police, preferred the charge.

Weather permitting, eight local pilots will fly their airplanes to Moorefield, W. Va., on a goodwill tour to the Aviation Celebration being held there today. The group will take off at 2 p. m., and are expected to arrive home about 5 p. m.

Those planning to make the trip are Jack Dela Grange, Jesse Halterman, Louis Ort, Forest Miller, Bernard Miltenberger, A. H. Amick, William Ray, William Rannells and Miss Minnie Johnson.

Miss Robinette Crowned Queen of Fair and Races In Beautiful Setting

Ridgeley Baby Falls 12 Feet, Lands in Mud and Is Unhurt

No doubt if little ten-months-old Florence Gale Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chesley Simmons of Ridgeley, could talk she would thank her "lucky stars" that it has been raining the past two or three days.

Yesterday, the infant escaped serious injury when she landed in a puddle of mud after falling more than twelve feet from an open window at home. The most harm to come to her from the fall was a mud bath.

She was rushed to Allegany hospital, but attendants reported that the infant "just laughed" throughout an examination which revealed she was uninjured.

Wins Honor by Beating Out Twenty-two Contestants in Close Race; Is Graduate of Allegany

A twenty-one year old Cumberland girl was crowned queen of the Cumberland fair last night at Fairgo before a crowd which waited more than an hour beyond the time originally set for the event. A heavy last minute vote caused the delay in getting started.

Miss Olive K. Robinette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robinette, 676 Greene street, won the title with a vote of 14,060 ballots. She won over twenty-two other contestants from Cumberland and surrounding towns.

Miss Robinette is a vivacious brunette with brown hair and brown eyes, five foot two inches tall, and weighs about 123 pounds.

Allegany High Graduate

She graduated from Allegany high school, class of 1938, and took a secretarial course at Cathermans school here. She is employed at McCrory's store here.

The girls, arrayed in vivid colored evening gowns, were escorted by young men to the stage where the coronation ceremonies were held. Two small boys, Billy Fazenbaker and James A. Burt, of Lonaconing were train bearers for the newly crowned queen and two little girls Geraldine Simmons, Flintstone and Jo Ann Barton, Cresaptown, were crown and ring bearers.

Nelson W. Russler, the master of ceremonies, crowned Miss Robinette queen on behalf of the Fair Association and said he enjoyed the occasion very much indeed.

The queen addressed the crowd and told of her happiness in winning, especially since her father and mother were present to witness her triumph. Gordon Stobo, of Cumberland, was her escort.

Miss Mary Lou Barton, of Cresaptown, was runnerup, Dorothy Elkins of Ridgeley third, Miss Elaine Doman, of Romney, W. Va., fourth, and Miss Hazel Wagner, of Cumberland, fifth. They made up the queen's court along with their escorts.

The queen received a gift of a diamond ring in addition to the other honors bestowed upon her.

Miss Robinette was every inch a queen as gowned in a black Celanese moire evening dress and regal red robe trimmed with white ermine she ascended the throne. A huge corsage completed the picture.

Final Votes

The final tabulation of votes follows:

"Miss Cumberland", Olive K. Robinette, 14,060; "Miss Cumberland" Mary Lou Barton, 13,110; "Miss Ridgeley" Dorothy Elkins, 11,390; "Miss Romney" Elaine Doman, 11,240; "Miss Cumberland" Hazel Wagner, 10,950; "Miss Cumberland," Mary Ellen Zilер, 8,030; "Miss Lonaconing" Geraldine McIntyre, 6,390; "Miss Frostburg" Vera Rankin, 5,440; "Miss Cumberland" Loretta Beckman, 4,930; "Miss Cumberland" Louise Beckman 4,710; "Miss Midland" Emma Lee Fuller 4,470; "Miss Mt. Savage" Mary Sweene 3,720; "Miss Keyser" Anita Santmyer 3,510; "Miss Piedmont" Mary Price 3,310; "Miss Green Spring" Elizabeth Duckworth 3,060; "Miss Ellerslie" Wilma Stair 2,860; "Miss Flintstone" Betty Twigg 1,920; "Miss Hyndman" Clarabelle Brant 1,720; "Miss Cumberland" Gloria Doris Stevens 1,450.

Legion Convention Will Use K. of C. Home Next Week

Business Sessions Will Be Held in Auditorium Daily

Selection of the Knights of Columbus auditorium, North Mechanic street, for the business sessions of the Maryland Department American Legion convention here next week, was announced last evening by officials of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13.

Business sessions will be held in the K. of C. Home Auditorium from 9 a. m., to 1 p. m., Thursday, from 9 a. m., to 1 p. m., Friday and at 9 a. m., Saturday when department officers will be elected.

Other Meetings Scheduled

The convention committee also will meet at the K. of C. auditorium, from 2 to 5 p. m., Thursday and the promenade of the Forty and Eight Society is scheduled there Friday, at 2 p. m.

Officers of the Legion have been notified that Farrady Post, of Frostburg, is planning to have its full membership of 237 in the parade Friday at 8 p. m., as will James P. Love Post, of Lonaconing, which has forty-seven members. The Arion band will head the Frostburg contingent and the Lonaconing City band will march at the head of the James P. Love Post membership. Fort Cumberland Post officers are hopeful of a large turnout of its 429 members.

Convention Program

The program for convention week will be as follows:

Gateway Chatter

by

News Staff Members

Readers of this column will recall that a few days ago an item appeared in Gateway Chatter about Mayor Harry Irvine's bed collapsing soon after he fell asleep after a strenuous day of housecleaning at his home.

"His Honor" is in receipt of a letter which no doubt will be as interesting to Gateway readers as it was to the mayor, who has drawn the proffer of a week's lodging at the Ambassador hotel in Washington, D. C., from it.

The letter came from M. A. Gustrafson, supervisor of sales for a bed manufacturing concern.

"While visiting with my sales manager of the Pittsburgh district and enjoying your fair and races," the letter states, "I happened to notice in the Gateway Chatter column in the morning newspaper your interview with regard to your unusual bad night's rest."

Facetiously, Mr. Gustrafson called attention to a new style bed this firm is getting out, which will not be on the market until October 1 but which will be installed in many hotels.

"I might also mention," the letter continued, "that the Ambassador hotel in the heart of our capital city is fully equipped and enjoying that unusual pleasure of being able to completely reserve our entire bed room reservation by 9 p. m. each evening. Some say this is due to the unrest over the many bills before Congress and especially the different war measures.

"We feel that within the next months to come there will be many changes made especially in Washington. As our chairman of the board, Mr. Willkie will offer to the public in general many good suggestions that will be very comforting.

The writer then offered the mayor, at the expense of the bed company, "a week at the Ambassador" so that he could "be convinced that even though your duties are strenuous and nerve-racking, you will be completely recovered and return one of our great boosters."

The week of pleasure, without cost to you," the letter continued, "coupled with many interesting events to crowd your daily pleasure into that happy realization that at night you will enjoy that beautiful rest" in one of the company's beds.

Urging a reply to the invitation in the writer's care at the hotel named, he asked forgiveness for his over-zealous feelings but said he wanted the mayor to know that there is real comfort in this particular make of bed.

Local Library Has Unusual Exhibit At Fairgrounds

"Know America — Read Books about Your Country" is the theme of the Cumberland Free Public Library's exhibit at the Cumberland Fair.

The Library display is housed in the exhibit hall at the left of the entrance. Books, maps and posters are used to portray the development of the great republic.

Descriptive literature from each of the forty-eight states of the union includes the state motto, the state flower, the state song and the great seal of each in addition to many beautifully illustrated pamphlets.

"Maryland — America in Miniature" issued by the Maryland Publicity Commission is among the more attractive publications displayed.

The much talked about "Maryland Guide", compiled by the Federal Writers' Project is also on display at the library booth. The library owns several copies of this interesting volume which will be available for circulation next week.

The exhibit was planned and arranged by Miss Codie Whitman of the library staff.

Registration of Aliens To Start Here August 27

Persons Who Fail To Comply Can Be Fined or Sent to Jail

Postmaster James C. Schriver said yesterday that registration of aliens in the Cumberland district would start Tuesday, August 27 and continue until December 26.

Shriver said all the work would be done by regular employes at the local post office.

Under the federal law registration of aliens is compulsory. Aliens 14 years of age and over must register in person and be fingerprinted. Those under 14 must be registered by their parents or guardians and will not be fingerprinted. However, when they become 14 they must be fingerprinted.

A penalty of a $1,000 fine or six months in prison or both is provided for failure to register. There will be no cost for the registration and those enrolled will receive a receipt card. In case of a change in address the Immigration and Naturalization Service must be notified.

An alien is defined as a person not born in the United States or its possessions and who is not a naturalized citizen. Persons who have taken out their first papers must register.

The registration forms ask for the name, address(name used when entering the U. S., names used since, where born, what nation you are a citizen of race married status, height, weight, when entered the U. S. and how arrived, status of entering such as visitor, student, how long you expect to stay, occupation and employer, activities for past five years, military record, relatives in U. S., if arrested and convicted, if applied for citizenship, and if you are affiliated with any organizations devoted to influencing political or public relations of a foreign government.

Moose Lodge Is Conducting Drive For New Members

Class Will Be in Memory of Frederick N. Zihlman

Cumberland Lodge No. 271 Loyal Order of Moose is conducting a membership drive, the class in memory of Frederick "Nick" Zihlman who was a supreme governor of the Moose organization.

The officers of the Moose Band, Charles McCullough, Junior Governor, A. R. Serf, W. L. Brunk, Ralph Baird and Bradford Keyser, compose the committee who will conduct the drive.

The slogan adopted is "I would rather go barefooted through the snow as did the soldiers of the Revolutionary War at Valley Forge than to surrender one iota of the liberty I now enjoy in this the greatest country in all the world."

Governor Erling announces that the Border States Association will hold its annual convention in Baltimore August 31 to September 2, and advises that free transportation to and from Baltimore over the B. & O. railroad will be furnished to all members of Cumberland lodge No. 271 whose receipts show them to be in good standing. The time for departure and return will be published at a later date.

The Moose Band with Charles McCullough, president, will go to Moorefield, W. Va., Labor Day to participate in a parade being sponsored by the Moorefield Moose Lodge. A bus will leave the Moose home, corner of Beall and Smallwood streets promptly at 9:30 a. m., Monday, Sept. 2.

Vocal Solos and Cornet Duet Will Feature Band Concert at Park Sunday

Director Joseph Fradiska of the American Legion Band Arranges Fine Program

Three vocal solos and a cornet duet will feature the concert of the American Legion band tomorrow evening at 7:30 p. m., in the amphitheater of Constitution Park.

Little Anna Margaret Gillard, ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Gillard, Valley street, and a niece of Joseph M. Fradiska, director of the Legion band, will make her public debut as soloist by singing the "Woodpecker's Song" and "Oh Johnny, Oh Johnny, Oh," the second and sixth numbers on the program.

Dr. W. E. Capaldi, Ph. T., a member of the band, will sing "I Am an American" and will team with Harry M. Snowden in a cornet duet entitled, "Ida and Dotty Polka."

To Play March Hit

Director Fradiska last night said that the first number on the program will be the latest march hit, "Semper Paratus", which was written by Capt. Francis S. Van Baskerck, of the United States Coast Guard.

As a grand finale the American, Maryland and American Legion flags will be unfurled during the playing of "God Bless America" and the salute to the flag will be given by the Legion's six-man color guard.

"Yankee Rhythm", a melody of popular an patriotic songs including "Yandee Doodle, Turkey in the Straw, and The Man on the Flying Trapeze" will be played by special request.

Swimmers To Perform

Following the band program the Cumberland Aquatic Club will present a swimming and diving exhibition in the park swimming pool at 9 p. m.

The band program is as follows:

March, "Semper Paratus", by Captain Francis Saltus Van Baskerck.

"Woodpecker's Song", by Eldo Di Lazzaro, solo by Anna Margaret Gillard.

Illness Is Fatal To Mrs. Sarver

Wife of Scott W. Sarver Dies at Her Home Here

Mrs. Agnes O. Sarver, 52, wife of Scott W. Sarver, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at her home, 202 East Laing avenue, following a brief illness.

Born in Preston county, W. Va., Mrs. Sarver was a daughter of the late Henry and Agnes Hennessey. She was a member of the Methodist church.

Surviving, besides her husband, are five sons, Herbert F., Homer C., Scott R., Benjamin F. and Franklin B. Sarver; and three daughters, Mrs. Mary A. Zahradka, Mrs. Thomas Burley and Miss Freda A. Sarver, all of Cumberland.

Trustees of Defunct Isaac Walton League File Unusual Suit Here

An unusual suit was docketed in circuit court yesterday by F. Brooke Whiting attorney, on behalf of Dr. A. H. Hawkins and Rawley K. Swayne, only surviving trustees of the defunct Isaac Walton League of America, Chapter 6 of Allegany county.

The petition asks the court to clear up several knotty problems for the trustees in regard to a tract of land held in trust for the defunct league, which the trustees want to lease and option for sale to the Consolidated Orchard Corporation, a West Virginia concern.

The trustees were given the sum of $2,464.13 remaining after the 1927 Maryland Assembly had abolished the old Board of Wardens for Allegany county, created in 1916, and substituted the present setup. The money was to be used in the propagation of wild life and the trustees purchased a parcel of land from Thomas J. Malamphy and his wife for this purpose.

The deed was made in May of 1931 and the bill states no member of the league contributed to the purchase of the land and asks the court to place the funds from the sale of the land, if made, at the disposal of J. Wesley Kelley, Cumberland, and Hugh Stevenson, of Ellerslie, for use in propagation of wild life, the original purpose intended.

Counsel for the orchard company held up the leases and option until the courts determine the proper disposition of the funds that may result from the sale.

Judge D. Lindley Sloan signed an order for the defendants, summoning all officers of the defunct league, to appear in court on or before September 18 to show cause why the land should not be sold and the funds placed at the disposal of Mr. Kelley and Mr. Stevenson for use as prescribed.

J. Milton Patterson, Baltimore, first vice president, an executive officer of the league, Dr. G. Frank Malin, secretary and E. Lee LeCompte, state game warden are named as defendants.

It was also ordered by the court that F. Brooke Whiting should be paid counsel fees for preparing the bill of complaint.

Former Governor Holds Informal Reception Later at Hotel Here

Among the distinguished visitors in Cumberland yesterday who attended the races at Fairgo were former Governor Harry W. Nice, Republican nominee for United States Senator in Maryland; Representative Jennings Randolph, of Bill Kern,an-dolp West Virginia; Bill Kern, football coach at West Virginia university at Morgantown; Walter A. McClean, of Baltimore, former president of the Board of Supervisors of Elections and Chester Hawkins, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission.

Harry W. Nice

Randolph was introduced by Harry A. Manley, president of the fair association after the second race yesterday. The representative in a brief address said he was glad to be back in Western Maryland to attend the races and meet old friends.

He spoke of the development of the Savage river dam project near Bloomington and said he had been interested in it for several years. Randolph declared that erection of the dam is a great thing for Western Maryland and nearby West Virginia sections and that it would aid in the industrial development of both Maryland and West Virginia by insuring adequate water supplies for industries in the Potomac river valley.

Advocates Airport Here

The West Virginian urged that Maryland and West Virginia cooperate in building a modern airport near Cumberland, which he declared would fit into the national defense program of the nation and would mean much to the further development of this area.

Randolph then introduced Kern, who presented the trophy to Robert B. Porter, owner of Black Brigade, which won "The Bill Kern" second race feature.

Former Governor Harry W. Nice was introduced by Lewis M. Wilson, newly elected chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Allegany county, after the conclusion of the third race.

Randolph

Mr. Nice, like Randolph, said he, too, was glad to be back in Cumberland, to attend the races, meet old friends and make new ones. He congratulated Randolph for the splendid talk he made, but in speaking of the Savage river dam project he declared that credit for originating the project should go to the Allegany county commissioners, who several years ago started working for the dam.

Mr. Nice said he knew whereof he spoke as it was his pleasure while serving as governor of Maryland to sign the enabling act making it possible for Allegany county to borrow $1,000,000 to be used on the Savage river project to appoint the Upper Potomac River Commission, which is still functioning in connection with the project.

Gratified Over Support

Following the races, the former governor held an informal reception at the Fort Cumberland hotel, where he was greeted by many Republicans. Mr. Nice was enthusiastic about his chances of election to the Senate in November as well as for the election of Wendell Willkie as president and the success of the Republican ticket. He expressed himself as highly gratified over the cordial support he is receiving from many old-time Democrats who are going over to Willkie.

Mr. Nice accompanied by Mr. McClean, Deeley K. Nice, his nephew; Frank Small, Jr., a member of the racing commission, all of Baltimore and J. Glenn Beall, of Frostburg, former chairman of the State Roads Commission, left here early last night for Keyser, W. Va., and boarded a B. and O. train for Ellwood, Ind., where today they will attend the formal notification of Wendell Willkie as the Republican presidential nominee.

Three Births Are Reported Here

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Preaskorn, of Silver street, Ridgeley, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter last night at Allegany hospital.

A daughter was born yesterday morning at Allegany hospital to Mr. and Mrs. John Phillips, of Main street, Ridgeley, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Peters, of Paw Paw, W. Va., announce the birth of a daughter yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Names Are Certified to Allegany County Advisory Council

The names of the five high men in the recent examination at Fort Hill high school for the post of district deputy game warden of Allegany county have been received by Arthur P. Hoffa, president of the Allegany County Council of the Maryland Inland Fish and Game Commission, and will be submitted to the county council for recommendation at a meeting next Wednesday evening at eight o'clock in the court house.

Twenty-eight men took the examination several weeks ago and the names of the five men who turned in the highest averages have been turned over to the advisory council by State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones.

President Hoffa refused to divulge the names of the five successful candidates pending action by the county council.

Cumberland Man Is Sent to Jail

Henry J. Fry Must Serve 90 Days on Motor Vehicle Charge

Out of the frying pan into the fire was the predicament a former Cumberland man found himself in yesterday.

Henry Joseph Fry was sentenced to ninety days in the county jail after he pleaded guilty in Trial Magistrates court to a charge of "unauthorized use of a motor vehicle." He was accused of taking the car of F. P. Montgomery, 12 Race street, Nov. 25, 1939.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., who presided at the hearing, said Fry was released Aug. 13 from the Maryland House of Correction after serving a six months' sentence for stealing $5 in Frederick. He was brought to stand trial following his release.

Three witnesses for the state were present at the hearing, but they were not required to testify. They were R. W. Parker and Elmer Powell, of Picardy, and George McKenzie, of Flintstone.

Sergt. James T. Knight, of the State police, preferred the charge.

Miss Robinette Crowned Queen of Fair and Races In Beautiful Setting

Ridgeley Baby Falls 12 Feet, Lands in Mud and Is Unhurt

No doubt if little ten-months-old Florence Gale Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chesley Simmons of Ridgeley, could talk she would thank her "lucky stars" that it has been raining the past two or three days.

Yesterday, the infant escaped serious injury when she landed in a puddle of mud after falling more than twelve feet from an open window at home. The most harm to come to her from the fall was a mud bath.

She was rushed to Allegany hospital, but attendants reported that the infant "just laughed" throughout an examination which revealed she was uninjured.

Wins Honor by Beating Out Twenty-two Contestants in Close Race; Is Graduate of Allegany

A twenty-one year old Cumberland girl was crowned queen of the Cumberland fair last night at Fairgo before a crowd which waited more than an hour beyond the time originally set for the event. A heavy last minute vote caused the delay in getting started.

Miss Olive K. Robinette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robinette, 676 Greene street, won the title with a vote of 14,060 ballots. She won over twenty-two other contestants from Cumberland and surrounding towns.

Miss Robinette is a vivacious brunette with brown hair and brown eyes, five foot two inches tall, and weighs about 123 pounds.

Allegany High Graduate

She graduated from Allegany high school, class of 1938, and took a secretarial course at Cathermans school here. She is employed at McCrory's store here.

The girls, arrayed in vivid colored evening gowns, were escorted by young men to the stage where the coronation ceremonies were held. Two small boys, Billy Fazenbaker and James A. Burt, of Lonaconing were train bearers for the newly crowned queen and two little girls Geraldine Simmons, Flintstone and Jo Ann Barton, Cresaptown, were crown and ring bearers.

Nelson W. Russler, the master of ceremonies, crowned Miss Robinette queen on behalf of the Fair Association and said he enjoyed the occasion very much indeed.

The queen addressed the crowd and told of her happiness in winning, especially since her father and mother were present to witness her triumph. Gordon Stobo, of Cumberland, was her escort.

Miss Mary Lou Barton, of Cresaptown, was runnerup, Dorothy Elkins of Ridgeley third, Miss Elaine Doman, of Romney, W. Va., fourth, and Miss Hazel Wagner, of Cumberland, fifth. They made up the queen's court along with their escorts.

The queen received a gift of a diamond ring in addition to the other honors bestowed upon her.

Final Votes

The final tabulation of votes follows:

"Miss Cumberland", Olive K. Rob-Mary Lou Barton, 13,110; "Miss inette, 14,060; "Miss Cresaptown" Ridgeley" Dorothy Elkins, 11,390; "Miss Romney" Elaine Doman, 11,240; "Miss Cumberland" Hazel Wagner, 10,950; "Miss Cumberland," Mary Ellen Ziler, 8,030; "Miss Lonaconing" Geraldine McIntyre, 6,390; "Miss Frostburg" Vera Rankin, 5,440; "Miss Cumberland" Loretta Beckman, 4,930; "Miss Cumberland" Louise Beckman 4,710; "Miss Midland" Emma Lee Fuller 4,470; "Miss Mt. Walter Johnson To Attend Baseball Game Here Sunday

Walter Johnson, the "big train" of major league baseball, and Republican candidate for Congress from the Sixth Maryland district, tomorrow will be the guest of the Cumberland Colts baseball team of the Bi-State Baseball League, when the locals cross bats with the Frostburg American Legion nine at Community park, Wineow street.

The G. O. P. candidate, who gained fame as a major league pitcher while a member of the Washington Senators of the American League, is expected to pitch to three batters prior to the start of the league game. Johnson will be introduced to the players and fans by Lewis M. Wilson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Allegany county.

The pre-game ceremonies are scheduled to start at 2:30 p. m., and the league contest will get under way a half hour later.
